Construction Ban Threat Casts Heavy Pall

By MARY LEYDECKER

The mere threat of a housing construction ban because of Richardson Bay pollution has thrown a heavy pall on Mill Valley area developers and builders, who contend such a ban would ruin them.

The thought that voters in the area probably would cheer their demise and cheerfully vote against any project that would allow future building sends the developers off for more aspirin.

Gathered around a table in a real estate office yesterday, a group of developers, builders, engineers, architects, land owners and city and sanitary district officials mulled over its common problem.

Under discussion was a threat made Feb. 25 by the Regional Water Quality Control Board that all new construction may be banned in Mill Valley and the Richardson Bay Sanitary District area if new tough sewage treatment standards are not met.

The men from the construction industry were pleased to learn from Mill Valley city engineer Stanley M. Bala that new construction is not what is causing the main problem, but were gloomy about solving the problem.

Bala told the group that he thought the water quality control board had worked with two-year-old information in assessing the sewage situation and added that Mill Valley has spent over $600,000 to improve its sewage system since 1967.

"We've done more than any other city of 12,000 anywhere," he said.

Bala saw the board's stand as having two aspects. First, the board is dissatisfied with sewage lines in the old sections of Mill Valley which allow infiltration during storms, and secondly, the treatment of sewage does not come up to the new standards.

"I think they're telling us that we have to take our sewage to the ocean but they haven't said so in words," Bala said in reference to the new high standards for effluents dumped into Richardson Bay.

He said that a ban on new housing would not affect residents in the older areas of Mill Valley and that in fact they probably would be pleased about it.

As for a $400,000 sewage bond proposal that the city is considering for July, Bala said that the money would be a "drop in the bucket" toward reaching the water quality control board standards.

Futher, Councilman Jerome C. Hauke told the group that if "Mill Valley people think that the bond issue would allow development, they'll vote against it."

Bala said that "each new house pays more than its share" toward sewage systems, and a developer, Edward H. Kuykendall, added, "Everyone in this room would happily agree to doubling sewage connection fees" if that would solve the problem.

Bala added that the regional board doesn't seem to understand that threatening to stop new construction will have no effect on getting residents in the older sections of Mill Valley to fix up their sewage lines.

That the ban threat is already being felt in the construction industry was confirmed by many at the gathering.

Dean A. Rhodes, a civil engineer, said that his office has stopped work on three of five subdivisions that were in the planning stage because "there's no sense in going ahead with something if a month from now you're not going to be able to proceed."

(The regional water board will meet again March 25 in Hayward to consider replies from the sanitary districts about its ultimatum and could issue an order that no new sewage hookups be permitted until its standards are met.)

Kuykendall said that while he is going ahead with an 18-lot subdivision, if the ban went into effect, "I'd go broke in a year."

Timothy O'Donoghue, another developer, agreed the ban could cause him "to lose a lot of money," and blamed the Richardson Bay Sanitary District for "doing nothing for years."

He strongly advocated raising sewage connection fees for new houses in order to help solve the problem.

Real estate man Jeffory Moreshead, who called the meeting, told of lot sales under way which had been halted because he couldn't guarantee clients they could get sewage hookup.

"The real victims will be the people who rent apartments or houses," said architect Edmund C. Heine Jr., who predicted a rise in rents if new housing is halted.

Although Bala said that "if we had all the money we needed it would take four or five years" to meet board standards, Councilman Hauke said that he was "optimistic" that the ban will not be imposed.

CEASE-FIRE

Egypt Likely To Accept Military Restraint Plea

By United Press International

Political sources in Cairo said today Egypt will probably accept the call by United Nations Secretary General Thant for military restraint when the cease-fire in the Middle East expires Sunday but reject any formal extension of the truce.

The Cairo sources spoke after Egypt's semiofficial newspaper, Al Ahram, said today Egypt would agree to a cease-fire extension only if the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France promise to persuade Israel to withdraw from occupied Arab lands.

The cease-fire began last August.

Egypt's position will be announced by President Anwar Sadat in a speech Sunday night, Cairo sources said. These informants said Sadar would announce that Egypt does not plan to renew hostilities unless its diplomatic efforts are exhausted but would not reject the idea that military action may be the only way to achieve a solution.

As the expiration of the truce approached, the Suez Canal front was quiet but reports from the waterway said Israeli troops were wearing helmets and flak jackets as a precaution against renewed fighting.

On the eve of the cease-fire, Israeli troops clashed with Arab guerrillas on its Syrian and Jordanian fronts. A military spokesman said three guerrillas were killed including two along the Jordan frontier and one in the occupied Syrian Golan Heights while Israeli troops suffered no casualties.

Israel made it clear it accepts U.N. Secretary General Thant's appeal for a cease-fire extension but resents his urging for more consideration to a full withdrawal from lands seized in the 1967 war.

"We do not need any foreigners to advise us or Egypt on how to draw up peace maps," said Israeli Deputy Premier Yigal Allon. "We prefer direct negotiations.

"Our heart is open for a generous solution, not as victors but as equals among equals," Allon said. "Therefore, the sooner Egypt rids itself of its illusion (about total withdrawal, the better it is for her."

Israel's government-run radio station criticized today Thant's report delivered Friday, saying it was a "mendacious prevarication" that "brazenly flaunted" quiet diplomacy.

"The Secretary General has clearly violated in his report the ground rules of quiet diplomacy," the Israeli radio said.

The Egyptian viewpoint was front-paged in Al Ahram, which said the idea was passed on to the Big Four powers.

"Egypt is not interested in an appeal by the Big Four to refrain from firing," Al Ahram said. "More is needed—a clear condemnation of Israel and a clear pledge of positive action to implement the (U.N.) Security Council resolution (of Nov. 22, 1967) particularly its first provision which is Israeli withdrawal," Al Ahram said.

The newspaper said Egypt based its position on the following:

—An extension of the cease-fire is not acceptable because Israel had declared in an official document to the United Nations that it refused to withdraw to the June 4, 1967 borders.

The Egyptian viewpoint was passed on to British Ambassador Sir Richard Beaumont who met with Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad, Al Ahram said.

In Cairo, Palestinian commando leaders failed to achieve their declared aim of national unity, guerrilla sources said.

The sources said a meeting of the Palestinian National Council failed to establish a unified body to takeover political and military command of the various factions of the guerrilla movement.

Impasse In Union, Rail Talks

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The United Transportation Union and the nation's railroads tried again today to break the impasse in their contract talks, with the 15,000 train crewmen in the UTU ready to begin selective strikes if the stalemate continued.

The bargaining at the Labor Department resumed shortly before noon following a long session Friday at which spokesmen said no progress was made.

Assistant Labor Secretary W. J. Usery Jr., the government's chief mediator in the year-and-a-half old dispute, started today's negotiations by meeting separately with union and management officials. Prospects for joint bargaining later were uncertain.

Labor Department spokesmen said neither side had shown any new willingness to make concessions on the main unresolved issue of work rules, with management demanding that they be revised to increase operating efficiency and union leaders resisting any move that might reduce jobs.

Usery said a nationwide work stoppage appeared unlikely but that walkouts against selected rail lines could begin at any time.

The UTU's members have been free to walk off their jobs since last Sunday night when congressional legislation which ended a one-day strike last Dec. 10 expired.

The union has expressed willingness to accept pay increases of 44 per cent over three years, a figure accepted by three other unions that joined in the December walkout.

But UTU negotiators have balked at accepting work rules changes proposed by a White House panel and advocated by railroad management.

Spokesmen said one of the main unresolved issues was management's demand for work rule changes to permit more so-called "interdivisional runs" which usually exceed 100 miles and do not require any change of crew personnel.

Another point at issue appeared to be the UTU's demand for an increase in the allowance given crewmen for away-from-home expenses.

Union negotiators have refused to accept the proposed work rules changes without commensurate pay increases.

The talks broke down briefly early Thursday and a strike appeared imminent. But the UTU agreed to go back to the bargaining table after Usery held a breakfast meeting with union officials.

S. Vietnam Claims Sepone Capture

Main Objective Of 27-Day Laos Drive

SAIGON (UPI)—A force of 2,000 South Vietnamese advancing after heavy U.S. air attacks swept aside light Communist resistance today and claimed capture of the Ho Chi Minh Trail hub of Sepone, main objective of South Vietnam's 27-day-old offensive in Laos.

Field reports said South Vietnamese commanders counted 283 Communist bodies and took 13 Vietnamese prisoners in the charred ruins of Sepone where a huge cache of weapons and ammunition was found. An official communique announcing the seizure of Sepone said South Vietnamese casualities were light.

Most of the Communist dead were apparently slain by U.S. air strikes and artillery which supported the South Vietnamese push against Sepone, 27 miles deep in Laos.

Jubilant South Vietnamese officers at Khe Sanh, the support base in South Vietnam for the offensive said South Vietnamese troops will push even deeper into Laos from Sepone to inflict further damage on the Ho Chi Minh Trail, North Vietnam's lifeline to troops in South Vietnam and Cambodia.

Muong Phine, 14 miles southeast of Sepone, was mentioned by some commanders as the next target of the Laos offensive involving 20,000 South Vietnamese troops.

Communist gunners shelled Khe Sanh today, and field reports said two Americans were killed.

About 12 hours later, a barrage of Communist rockets struck the U.S. Army support base at Quang Tri, 40 miles east of the Laotian border, UPI correspondent Barney Seibert reported. There was no immediate word on casualties or damage.

The unit which pushed into Sepone discovered a one-square-mile supply dump crammed with at least 1,000 tons of rice and canned goods as well as munitions and other war materiel. Sepone was described as the main transshipment point on the Ho Chi Minh Trail winding south out of North Vietnam through a myriad of roads, paths and passages into South Vietnam and Cambodia.

South Vietnamese president Nguyen Van Thieu sent congratulations to victorious units at Sepone. The South Vietnamese radio and television network interrupted regular programs for special news bulletins announcing the capture of the town.

U.S. Troops Will Leave Korean DMZ

SEOUL (UPI) — After 18 years American troops today were preparing their final withdrawal from the Korean demilitarized Zone (DMZ) where 33 Americans have been slain since the Armistice was signed in 1953.

The pullback will give Washington more flexibility in deciding whether or not to commit American men to war if fighting should break out again in the peninsula.

The withdrawal from the DMZ is part of the general cutback that will lower the number of American troops in Korea from 63,000 to 43,000 by June.

Although the Pentagon has been advertising the cutback as primarily a money-saver, high U.S. military officers in Seoul said the major reason was to get Americans away from the immediate area of the DMZ.

"The main purpose of the withdrawal was to get our boys off the front line. If the bayonets coming across the DMZ go into American boys, we're committed to war," one officer said.

He said if no American blood were shed in a North Korean invasion, the United States might not want to commit its forces.

American officers believe the South Koreans soon will be able to handle any North Korean invasion successfully and alone —provided that Chinese or Russian forces do not also pour across the DMZ.

These officers caution, however, what this will be true only if Congress comes through with enough money to modernize Soul's forces. South Korea recently asked for about $1 billion for new equipment to modernize its forces. U.S. military sources would not put a price tag on the amount they believe Korea needs since that would depend on how much was

W. Berlin Hopeful Of East Passes

BERLIN (UPI)—West Berliners today hoped to receive passes to visit friends and relatives in East Berlin for the first time in nearly five years.

The question of passes for Easter formed the basis of talks between a West Berlin delegation and East German officials at the government building in East Berlin.

West Berlin government sources said Ullrich Mueller, head of the Western delegation, had instructions to discuss only Easter passes in his talks with Guenter Kohrt, state secretary in the East German foreign ministry.

When he first offered the negotiations last week, East German Premier Willi Stoph suggested the agenda include a general dialogue on the East-West Berlin situation. But West Berlin Mayor Klaus Schuetz has made it clear that border questions on Berlin, such as traffic access to West Berlin, should be dealt with only in the current round of meetings here of the Big Four ambassadors.

On Wednesday, and again on Friday, Communist border guards halted traffic

Kidnapped Quartet Believed Still Alive

ANKARA, Turkey (UPI)—U.S. Embassy officials said today four kidnapped American servicemen were believed to be alive despite the fact that the deadline for their threatened execution had passed.

Leftist demonstrations touched off by the abductions flared anew. U. S. Ambassador William J. Handley issued a new appeal to the kidnappers — "The Turkish People's Liberation Army — to free the four U. S. Air Force men.

"It is my fervent hope that those who are holding the American airmen will heed this appeal and release the men soon and safely," Handley said.

About 400 leftist students blocked the main highway linking Izmir, a port on Turkey's Aegean coast and a major operations point for U.S. forces, with Istanbul to the northeast.

Firing pistols in the air and exploding dynamite and gasoline bombs, the students held the road for an hour. Witnesses said police did not intervene, although student barricades blocked traffic in both directions. The students eventually dispersed after protesting a move by police and army troops into Ankara's Middle East Technical University.

Ankara remained quiet.

Ambassador Handley said American officials assumed the kidnaped airmen were still alive more than three hours after the dawn deadline for their execution expired.

Mrs. Barbara Sexton, of San Angelo, Tex. wife of one of the kidnapped men, appealed today in a newspaper interview for her husband's life.

"We need Jimmie for my son, for myself and for my family," Mrs. Sexton was quoted as saying. "Please give him back."

One of the kidnapped men issued an appeal Friday night saying "Help us, I want to live."

The Turkish government rejected the kidnappers demands for ransom by failing to broadcast acceptance by the 6 a.m. (11 p.m. Friday EST) deadline.

Government security officials said they expected any indication of what happened to the Americans to come in a note the kidnappers presumably would deliver to Ankara newspapers and broadcasting stations. That was how the kidnappers had made previous demands known.

Diplomatic sources said U.S. Ambassador WilliamJ. Handley called on Foreign Ministry Secretary-General Orhan Eralp and advised him the United States wanted the men back safely. But embassy sources said the decision whether to

Pakistan President Moves To End Chaos

KARACHI, Pakistan (UPI)—President Mohamad Yahya Khan, in a move to end political chaos in East Pakistan, announced today the National Assembly will meet on March 25 to draft a new constitution.

The assembly was scheduled to meet in Dacca, East Pakistan, last Wednesday, but Yahya postponed it because of a conflict between the country's two major political leaders, Sheikh Mujibur Rehman of the Awami League in East Pakistan, and Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, of West Pakistan's People's party.

The postponement touched off a general strike, called by Mujibur, and widespread protest riots in East Pakistan. The unofficial death toll stood at 173.

The assembly is charged with framing a constitution as a first step to restoring parliamentary democracy after 12 years of military rule.

Yahya, in a nationwide radio broadcast, appealed to political leaders to help end the crisis. He said he hoped the national assembly would produce "a lasting constitution" to provide "security, integrity and solidarity" in the nation.

The political crisis arose from the Awami League's six-point plan that, among other things, would give East Pakistan virtual autonomy except in defense and foreign affairs. Bhutto, contending that home rule for East Pakistan would weaken the central government in West Pakistan, threatened to boycott the assembly, and it was postponed. The Awami League has 160 seats in the National Assembly, while Bhutto holds 65.

West Pakistan, with about 85 per cent of the nation's land mass and only 45 per cent of

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

28 Fire Deaths

ZURICH, Switzerland (UPI) —Fire and dense smoke swept through one wing of a Zurich University clinic where 60 aged, mentally disturbed persons were sleeping early today.

Police said 28 persons died behind the clinic's barred windows and locked doors. Two other patients were in serious condition from smoke inhalation.

Police said the fire began about dawn and was probably caused by a hospital orderly's electric heater.

Candidate Fever

MADISON, Wis. (UPI)—Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., has told newsmen it would be accurate to describe him as a potential presidential candidate.

Bayh said Friday he would be "sorely tempted to enter the Wisconsin primary next year because it is an important stepping stone to the White House."

He said that if he were President, he would increase the tempo of negotiations in the Indochina conflict, set a timetable for U.S. withdrawal from Southeast Asia and get an answer to the prisoner of war issue.

Jobless Count

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—The ranks of California's unemployed shrunk to 6.7 per cent in February but the rate continued well above the national figure, the state government reported Friday.

The state figure fell off from 7 per cent in January—the biggest one-month decline since November 1968. The national rate dropped last month from 6 to 5.8 per cent.

There were 696,000 Californians unemployed last month—an increase of 15,000 from January and 182,000 above the figure for February 1970.

The 6.7 per cent figure represented the number of persons in the California work force who were jobless.

Kidnap Suspects

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) —Interior Minister Lorenzo Fernandez announced Friday the capture of the kidnapers of Leon Taurel, 13, son of a department store owner, and recovery of the record $880,000 ransom paid for the child's release.

Police arrested more than a dozen persons Friday and Fernandez said the boy was released Thursday at a mountain village 30 miles west of Caracas.

The ransom exceeded the $600,000 paid for the release of Bobby Greenlease, 6, who was kidnaped Sept. 28, 1953, in Kansas City, Mo., then slain.

Judge's Threat To Pushers Of Heroin

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI)-A Florida judge sentenced an 18-year-old youth to prison for possession of heroin Friday and then warned he would consider killing anyone who addicted his son.

"I personally would be willing to shoot and kill any person who addicted my son to heroin and would be willing to be hanged or electrocuted for the murder, said criminal court Judge Russell McIntosh.

Another Storm In The Midwest

By United Press International

The southern plains and midwest endured the beating of another winter storm early today, while New York State counted eight storm-related deaths from the last one and all of New England was digging its way out of snow drifts.

Travelers warnings were posted from northeast New Mexico to north Illinois as snow, sleet and rain cut a swath through the nation's midsection.

Up to eight inches of snow piled up in central Iowa. Moderate to locally heavy snow extended from southern Wisconsin and northern Illinois to eastern Colorado and Kansas.

An eight-inch blanket of new snow shrouded North Platte, Neb., and six inches covered Scottsbluff, Neb., early today. Many schools in the area were closed Friday because of snow drifts.

Light thunderstorms and showers covered central Illinois and Missouri. Three-quarters inch hail pounded Springfield, Mo. this morning.

In the northeast, winter resort operators appeared pleased with their overgenerous supply of snow.

A spokesman at Holiday Mountain in the Catskills, asked if the ski center was operating at capacity, said, "What capacity? We can always put a few more on the slopes."

New York State reported eight deaths, four caused by vehicles stalled in drifts. At least six persons died near Montreal after the worst 24-hour snowstorm ever hit Canada's largest city.

Officials in Montreal said the dig-out would take ten days and cost $2 million to $3 million dollars.

"Everything is plugged. As soon as we plow it out, the winds blow the snow right back in behind the plow," Grand Isle, Vt., Civil Defense Director Charles Cassidy said.

Many major highways and most back roads in Vermont remained closed Friday. Most schools in the state were closed and bus and air transportation was at a virtual standstill.

The weather observatory at Mt. Washington, N.H., clocked winds up to 132 miles an hour Friday.

Snowmobiles provided the only method of transportation in several rural counties of northern New York State. A 273-mile stretch of the state thruway, clogged by 10-foot snowdrifts, was cleared late Friday.

The U.S.-Canadian border north of Plattsburgh, N.Y., was closed for the first time this winter due to huge drifts.

Booneville, the New York snow capital recorded an 80-inch mantle of snow on the ground, including three feet of new snow.

Humble Claims 'No Sabotage'

LINDEN, N.J. (UPI)—No evidence of sabotage was unearthed by the Humble Oil Co. in its investigation of the massive explosion at its main refinery here Dec. 5.

The company said Thursday the cause probably was an overheated reactor wall. The reactor wall had "a localized overheating ... not resulting from anything that happened outside the reactor," the company said.

Local officials had suspected sabotage, because an anonymous male telephoned police headquarters just 90 minutes before the explosion, and threatened that the Humble refinery would "burn, burn, burn."

Another Riot Death In Belfast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — British riot troops opened fire on a Roman Catholic bomb throwing crowd early today killing one civilian and wounding two others, an army spokesman said.

The troops opened fire after warning a crowd of youths who had attacked an armored vehicle with gasoline and nail bombs.

The fatality brought the death toll in the province to 14 this year—including nine civilians, three soldiers and two policemen.

The violence has been going on more than two years and results from contention of Northern Ireland's Roman Catholic minority that the predominantly Protestant government discriminates against Catholics, particularly in jobs, housing and voting.

At the same time, paratroopers swept through alleys of the working-class district to seize stocks of gasoline bombs being guarded by women and children.

At least five soldiers were injured by nail bomb attacks which began early Friday and lasted into the early hours of the morning. At least six men and a woman were arrested by troops.

An army patrol was fired upon in Catholic White Rock area and a sniper fired at a sentry in North Howard Street. One bullet lodged in the sentry's bulletproof jacket but there were no injuries in either incident.

Troops fought with Catholic youths in at least four areas, in the Ardoyne, where two policemen were killed last week, in North Queen's street and in the Springfield Road area.

Apollo 14 Moonrocks Puzzle To Scientists

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI)—Apollo 14 returned the oldest and most puzzling moonrocks yet seen by man, a team of lunar scientists said Friday.

Scientists said the Apollo 14 rocks were fragments of several types of rocks fused together by meteorite impacts billions of years ago and may be part of the original lunar crust.

One of the samples that escaped the battering was a gem-like sphere "that looks like a small Chinese checker," said Dr. Howard Wilshire, a lunar geologist.

He said the stone was "too pretty" to be scarred by testing and would be stored for safekeeping. Wilshire said one of the astronauts remarked it would be pretty as a ring or pendant for his wife.

"We're dealing with a very complicated group of rocks," Dr. Robin Brett, vice chairman of the preliminary investigation team, said at a news conference at the Manned Spacecraft Center.

"If we had got rocks as complicated as this on Apollo 11, we would have really just about gone out of our minds, because on Apollo 11, nobody knew what to expect at all. Fortunately, the rocks were relatively simple compared to these," Brett said.

Dr. Michael B. Duke, curator of the lunar receiving laboratory where the rocks are inspected and tested, said he expected tests next month would date the Apollo 14 samples from 3.5 to 4.5 billion years old.

Most of the solid, crystaline rocks gathered from the lunar maria or seas by Apollo 11 and 12 averaged 3.2 to 3.4 billion years old and were formed from molten rocks that cooled, scientists believe.

The Apollo 14 samples "presumably were emplaced on the lunar surface before the maria were formed and have gone through a continual battering and hammering by meteorites," Duke said.

Emergency Surgery In Ambulance Dash

Dr. Abdur Rahim, 30, said he noticed the condition of Harry Bywater deteriorating during a 40-mile drive from Bedford General Hospital to London. He performed a tracheotomy on the boy, cutting into his throat and inserting a tube to assist his breathing.

Plea Made To Drunken Driving

Don Edward O'Brien, 32, of Novato, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of drunken driving.

A jury trial was set for Aug. 16.

O'Brien was one of five persons arrested early yesterday after high-speed chases by the California Hghway Patrol on Marin highways.

The other persons arrested are to appear in municipal court Monday.

O'Brien was arrested on Highway 101 near Corte Madera after a chase at speeds of up to 120 miles an hour, the highway patrol reported.

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI)—Alberto Dines, managing editor of the newspaper Jornal do Brasil, was freed Friday night after five hours' questioning by political police, a spokesman for the newspaper said today.

Alioto Will Let Height Rule Stand

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Mayor Joseph Alioto won't veto that city ordinance limiting building heights along the waterfront.

Alioto, who opposed the measure which blocked U.S. Steel Corporation's plans for a 550-foot skyscraper in the area, said Friday he would let it become law without his signature.

The measure limits waterfront to 84 feet along about 90 per cent of the waterfront and 175 feet in an area near the Ferry Building.

In a four-page message Friday announcing his decision, the mayor said he planned to "bring together the various community elements with legitimate interests to create a plan for the rational and balanced treatment of the entire waterfront."

He indicated new legislation might then be proposed on the waterfront height issue.

Supervisors passed the height limit by a 6-3 vote.

Alioto said a veto would be meaningless because all waterfront zoning is inoperative until the powers of the Bay Conservation and Development Commission are clarified.

BODC has forbidden any non-water-related building along the city-owned waterfront. The San Francisco Port Commission filed suit this week to overturn the ban.

Safety Rules For Use Of Flammables

With spring approaching and fires involving flammable liquids likely to increase, Lt. R. E. Dougherty, fire prevention officer of the Novato Fire District, has recommended a list of safety rules.

Spring usually is accompanied by an increase in use of equipment such as portable containers and gasoline-powered tools, and with this activity there is usually an upward trend in fires, Dougherty said.

To avoid such fires, he suggested the following rules:

1. Always store flammable liquids in a sound metal container with a screw-on-type cap.
2. When not in use, keep in a cool ventilated location, out of the reach of children. An outside storage locker is best.
3. Avoid long-term storage. Purchase only as needed to minimize the amount of such material in the home.
4. Label all containers accurately, such as "stove gas," etc.
5. Perform filling and transfer operations outdoors, well away from sources of ignition.
6. When spills occur, use garden hose for washdown. If rags are used for wiping up spills, place in a closed metal container such as garbage can after use.
7. When pouring flammable liquids into or from a container, maintain contact between tank and container to avoid the chance of static sparks.
8. Never fuel while the engine or appliance is operating.
9. Avoid substituting. Gasoline should never be used as a cleaning solvent or paint thinner.

Span Panel Endorses Buying Second-Hand Float For Pier

A committee of Golden Gate Bridge District directors yesterday endorsed buying a second-hand float for the district's ferryboat to use at the San Francisco terminal.

The building and operating committee also worked its way through 13 other long-pending items of unfinished business, disposing of most of them under the urging of chairman Daniel F. Del Carlo.

The ferry float which will cost $5,000, is located in the Sacramento area, according to Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring.

He said district engineers predict a total outlay of about $38,000 for refurbishing the float, and modification of the pier near the San Francisco Ferry Building. The ferryboat has been using the nearby Harbor Tours float, but has encountered design problems.

The committee dropped from its agenda an item placed there on Dec. 20, 1968, seeking a share-the-cost decision on widening Doyle Drive, the San Francisco approach to the bridge. Luehring reported that state officials are working on the project without requiring the bridge district or San Francisco each to contribute 25 per cent of the cost.

Since the item was put on the committee agenda, Doyle Drive was the scene of San Francisco's worst traffic crash, a two-car collision that killed nine persons.

The length of the agenda drew a protest from Director C. Paul Bettini, mayor of San Rafael. He complained that the notice he received in advance listed only one item — the float discussion — and that his schedule was too full to allow him time to discuss the other items. Del Carlo defended the surprise agenda as necessary to clean up long-undecided questions.

In other actions yesterday, the committee:

RADAR — Heard from the staff that it is cooperating with the Coast Guard in placing radar reflectors on the bridge to avert a repetition of the ship collision and oil spill of Jan. 18.

TOLL PLAZA — Took no action on toll plaza modernization, maintenance shop construction and highway bypass plans for the Marin end of the span after staff reported a number of delays involving outside agencies and groups.

SPAN WEIGHT — Delayed a request by the Pacific Telephone Co to install additional cables under the bridge, pending proposals for the utility to pay the cost of lightening barrier and walkway structures to gain the additional weight capacity needed for the cables.

Nod Given On Sewer Line Plan

Directors of the Bolinas Public Utility District have authorized Kennedy Engineers of San Francisco to proceed with engineering plans for sewer lines to feed the district's proposed $1.8 million sewage treatment system.

The board also told the engineering firm to go ahead with plans for establishing an assessment district to finance the collection system, Gen. Mgr. Archie Goldsberry reported.

Goldsberry said the assessment district will include the entire mesa area of Bolinas, the Canyon Road area and the flat land between Bolinas School and downtown Bolinas.

He said the engineers should complete their work in about six weeks and the matter will then be referred to the Marin County Board of Supervisors, who has the authority to set up the district.

The utility district board also passed resolutions outlining the duties of the general manager and Jane Boyer, district clerk-secretary.

Small Drop In Crime Rate

Petaluma police report investigating 144 major crimes in January, a decrease of 17 over the 161 in January 1970, but 58 more than the 86 in January 1969.

January offenses included 38 burglaries, with two solved; 12 auto thefts, with one solved and five vehicles recovered; 36 thefts over $50 in value, and 58 thefts under $50, with 17 of them solved.

The department also investigated 14 injury accidents and issued 271 moving traiifc citations.

Low Rate Quake Help Introduced

I-J Special Report

WASHINGTON — Rep. William S. Mailliard, R-Sixth District, has co-authored legislation which would provide earthquake insurance to citizens at what was termed "reasonable" rates.

Insurance against temblors now is available, according to the congressman's office, but at high rates.

The measure, co-sponsored by Rep. Craig S. Hosmer, R-32nd District, is entitled the National Earthquake Insurance Bill and would make insurance available through either private companies or the federal government. The Secretary of Housing and Urban Development would be empowered to set rates.

The bill also would require state and local adoption of land use measures to reduce the potential of earthquake losses.

News Source

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A group of congressmen has called for early hearings on legislation that would ban federal officials from forcing newsmen to disclose confidential information on their news sources.

Tiburon Recreation Survey Is Scheduled

The Tiburon Parks and Recreation Commission has agreed to make a survey of what recreational programs Tiburon residents want and need, chairman Donald K. Loomis reported.

Loomis said the commission voted Thursday to prepare questionnaires which will give residents an opportunity to decide what their community's recreation goals should be.

He said the survey will include questions on the possibility of establishing a parks and recreation department or a special recreation district and means of financing recreation projects.

The board will complete preparation of the questionnaire at its March 18 meeting and decide on methods of getting the survey to residents, according to Loomis, who said the Reed District Parent-Teacher Council is assisting in the project.

Residency Rule In Santa Cruz Booted

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — The California Supreme Court yesterday struck down City of Santa Cruz charter requirements of three years' residency for city council candidates, and hinted it may do the same thing statewide.

Residency requirements in excess of the one-year general law requirement violate the constitutional guarantee of equal protection of the laws, the tribunal said.

On Tuesday, Marin Superior Court Judge Joseph G. Wilson voided a three-year residency requirement for a candidate for San Rafael Board of Education. Wilson ordered the name of James Lamantia of San Rafael placed on the April 20 ballot.

The Santa Cruz case was the first of several California cases ruled on by the state's highest court. In a brief order following its 4-3 decision of the case of Santa Cruz candidate Edward Camara on the ballot for the city's April 13 election, the court said it would outline its reasons further when it makes public its decision on another pending case.

That dispute involves a five-year residency requirement for Sacramento City Council candidates.

The court also is considering a challenge of the five-year residency rule for Butte County supervisors.

Another suit challenging San Francisco's five-year requirement is awaiting a decision in superior court.

Judge Wilson based his San Rafael decision on a District Court of Appeal ruling last November in the Sacramento case, which subsequently went to the Supreme Court.

pay ransom belong to the Turkish government.

A note by the kidnapers, who identified themselves as the "Turkish Peoples Liberation Army," and sent to an Ankara newspaper Friday gave what it said was a final warning against failure to meet the ransom demand.

The note was accompanied by letters from each of the men and the identity card of one of them, Larry J. Heavener of Denver, Colo.

"Help us, I want to live," wrote James M. Gholson of Alexandria, Va. "Tell my family I love all of them and I think all of this will end happily."

Heavener wrote, "Come and save us quickly."

Heavener, Gholson, Jimmie J. Sexton of San Angelo, Tex. and Richard Carazzi of Stamford, Conn., all Airmen first class, were kidnapped early Thursday as they were returning from a U.S. Air Force radar station outside Ankara.

Premier Suleiman Demirel met with President Cevdet Sunay late Friday and Demirel presided over a 90-minute council of ministers session but there was no statement.

Students fought police with rifles, pistols and Molotov cocktails Friday when truckloads of police and troops arrived to search Middle East Technical University for the kidnapers and their hostages.

the population of more than 100 million, and East Pakistan are separated by nearly 1,000 miles across India.

On Friday, the fourth day of violence, angry mobs were reported ripping up railroad tracks and blockading key roads leading into Dacca in an attempt to isolate the east wing capital.

Sources in Karachi said Yahya sent additional troops into East Pakistan to deal with the rioting and the strike. They said all assembly buildings and airports in the east were heavily guarded.

The government also imposed total censorship throughout the country. It prevented publication of one report by a local news agency that at least 2,000 persons were machine gunned to death in Dacca. There was no way to confirm that report.

Suspect In Ex-Convict Death Held

REDWOOD CITY (UPI)— The arrest of a St. Louis man as a suspect in the slaying of a former San Quentin convict was announced by local authorities Friday —four months after he was jailed.

San Mateo County sheriff's office said Watson T. Curry, 49, a storage company employe, was accused of killing Donald J. Grenier, 28, whose badly decomposed body was found on a hillside last Sept. 12.

Curry was arrested in St. Louis last November and held there during extradition proceedings. His arrest was publicly disclosed after he was transferred to the county jail here.

Grenier, who lived in San Francisco after his release from San Quentin in 1969, had served a seven year term for armed robbery. His body was found wrapped in a heavy green canvas bag with its skull fractured and ankles and wrists tied.

The good news for the allies was dimmed by a report from Khe Sanh that a barrage of about 40 Communist shells had killed some Americans just before noon today. The shells exploded near the end of twin runways used by U.S. transport planes to ferry supplies to South Vietnamese forces in Laos.

A major battle had been expected at Sepone in some quarters and it remained to be seen whether the force of 6,000 North Vietnamese regulars believed to be in the area would counterattack once South Vietnamese units solidified control of the town.

There have been occasions in the past when Communist troops have held back only to lay siege to South Vietnamese positions when attack is least suspected. Some officers believed that the North Vietnamese might be trying to set up an attack of the type which decimated French forces at Dienbienphu in 1954.

There were reports Friday that North Vietnamese troops in the Sepone area had massed antiaircraft missiles and at least 50 tanks to defend Sepone. But field reports told of little resistance today and no sign of tanks as the South Vietnamese swept into Sepone. Military sources said the North Vietnamese probably pulled back into heavily jungled hills surrounding Sepone.

South Vietnamese headquarters in Saigon would not say how long the task force would remain in Sepone. A communique stressed the "air mobility" tactic of leapfrogging from one point to another in helicopters so as to avoid becoming set targets.

The Saigon units in Sepone were reported clearing areas around the town tonight for artillery bases with howitzers flown in by American helicopters.

The sources said that modernizing the Korean forces would allow the United States much more flexibility if war should again break out.

"I'm not sure what our reaction would be any more," one officer said. "We have to give Washington the maximum number of options. We don't want to be forced into something we don't want to get into."

Even with the withdrawal, American ground troops still will be only 20 to 25 miles south of the DMZ so that if the North Koreans turned out to be stronger than anticipated or the South Koreans weaker than believed, the Communist would soon run right into the American 8th Army.

OBITUARIES

ALLAN NEVINS

MENLO PARK, Calif. (UPI) — The dean of American historians, Allan Nevins, 80, died in a nursing home Friday, just months after completing a massive 12-volume work on the American Civil War.

Nevins' career won him two Pulitzer Prizes and included a journalistic stint on three New York newspapers and professorships at Cornell, Columbia, Oxford and Cambridge Universities.

Despite a stroke in 1967, he continued work on his favorite subject, the Civil War, until chronic illness forced him to enter the Sharon Heights Convelescent Home here in June, 1970.

The final two volumes of the Civil War history will be published later this year.

Born May 20, 1890, at Camp Point, Ill., Nevins received bachelors and masters degrees for the University of Illinois and held honorary degrees from 28 institutions.

The historian considered his most noteworthy books to be the biographies of John Charles Fremont, Grover Cleveland and Hamilton Fish. His Cleveland and Fish biographies won Pulitzer Prizes in 1932 and 1936.

Other books written by Nevins included "Ordeal of the Union," "The Emergence of Lincoln," "The War for the Union" and biographies of great figures in the American industrial age including Henry Ford and the Weyerhauser timber family of the Pacific Northwest.

Nevins is survived by his widow, Mary, whom he married in 1916, and two married daughters. Memorial services will be held March 12 in Pasadena, Calif. The body will be cremated and the ashes buried in New York.

Mrs. Weir, 52, died Thursday at Stanford University Hospital after a long illness. She was the Delli Silverplate, a San Francisco importing firm.

She was born in Switzerland and came to San Francisco with her parents in 1923.

Miss Mitchell died Thursday in a local hospital after a long illness. She was 83.

$10,000 In Apartment Fire Damage

Marin County firemen today blamed a plumber's torch for starting a fire at the Dolphin Apartments outside Sausalito yesterday which did $10,000 damage to four units and their contents.

Chief Louis J. Bloom said the blaze broke out in Apt. 15, occupied by Norleen Brewer, at about 10:30 a.m. but wasn't reported until an hour later.

He said a plumber was repairing a leak in a water pipe in a wall between the bathroom and living room. Apparently sparks from his torch or the heated copper pipe touched off the fire Bloom said.

"The fire had a good start," Bloom said, "but it melted the pipe and the water sprayed on the fire. Otherwise it could have been much more serious with extensive damage."

Bloom said two county and three Sausalito units fought the blaze at the apartment, which lies in county jurisdiction at 1 Ebbtide Street.

Apt. 15 and the unit above it sustained fire damage, while two adjacent apartments were damaged by water. Bloom estimated damage at $8,000 to the structure and $2,000 to contents.

Major State Water Projects Survive

PALM SPRINGS (UPI)— Major works of the State Water Project survived the disastrous Southern California earthquake last month without "as much as a crack," Water Resources Director William Gianelli reported yesterday.

But he warned that there is "no guarantee of freedom from damage in all future earthquakes."

"If an earthquake should cause much movement along the Tehachapi mountain faults where they are crossed by the California Aqueduct, our tunnels or aqueducts could be ruptured," he said.

He said during a careful "foot-by-foot" inspection of project works after the quake, "we didn't find as much as a crack in any of the structures that were designed and built to resist the earthquakes that may shake the Tehachapi mountain region."

The inspection included the California Aqueduct and the Castaic Dam, 14 and 17 miles from the epicenter, respectively. The cracked Van Norman Dam was 14 miles from epicenter.

Gianelli's report, prepared for the California Water Commission, confirmed the department's analysis issued shortly after the quake.

He also reported a continued "shrinking" in the department's manpower as construction of the State Water Project nears completion. He said from a peak of 4,476 employes in 1967, the civil service work force stood at 3,390 last month and is expected to shrink to 3,150 by next July 1.

He said despite the net reduction in staff, only 71 layoffs occurred during four years but forecast "it is probable our layoff rate will increase."

"As a reflection of the difficult market, our voluntary separation rate has dropped off and if this continues, the number of layoffs will necessarily increase," Gianelli said.

Sheriff's Investigative Staffs To Be Reorganized

Investigative staffs of the Marin County sheriff's office will be reorganized Monday in an effort to provide more manpower to unincorporated areas of Marin, Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos said yesterday.

The move will consolidate adult and juvenile investigation staffs and the identification bureau into one staff, Mountanos said.

Lt. Guido Battaglia, head of the adult investigation unit, will be in charge of the day shift of the new unit; Lt. William Johanson, now head of the juvenile investigation unit, will supervise the evening and early morning shift, and Lt. Earl Cummesky, head of the identification bureau, will serve as relief for Battaglia and Johanson two days a week each.

The new operation will be under the overall supervision of Capt. Harvey Teague, Mountanos said.

The shift will combine the three lieutenants and 11 investigators — three from identification; four from juvenile bureau and seven from adult investigation — into the one new unit.

Mountanos said the new unit should provide for a more efficient operation at no increase in costs.

Until now, he said, when a crime was reported to the sheriff's office, a deputy would respond. From the scene of the crime, the deputy would call for an investigator from one or more of the three bureaus.

Now, Mountanos said, an investigator will respond along with a deputy to begin immediate investigation of the crime.

All of the investigators are trained to handle duties previously divided among the three bureaus, Mountanos said.

Loans For Hospitals Are Ordered

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Third District Cout of Appeal yesterday ordered the state Public Health Department to begin a loan insuranceprogram for private and public hospital construction.

Dr. Louis F. Saylor, state health director, balked at implementing the plan authorized by the legislature in 1969. He said such a program may violate constitutional debt limitations.

But the unanimous three-judge ruling held that a state program insuring hospital construction loans was constitutional so long as the money came from a premium fee on the insurance.

The court, however, invalidated a section of the law which would have permitted the state to issue debentures to set up the loan fund.

"We have concluded that the constitutional debt limit bar debentures exceeding the assets of the Health Facility Construction Loan Insurance Fund," the opion said.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Alcoholics Aren't All Wife And Child Beaters Or Poor Providers

DEAR HELEN:

Why is it that everybody assumes an alcoholic is a wife-and-child-beater who keeps his family in poverty and tears?

My father was an alcoholic. But he was also an excellent provider. He never hit my mother or any of us kids, or even yelled at us. He always cared a lot for us and he's a strong yet gentle person. I was never ashamed of him. I wouldn't trade him for anyone else in the world, even when he was drinking. I say was because he hasn't had a drink in three and one-half years and the best part is, he doesn't even want one. — PROUD

DEAR HELEN:

I'm glad you told the girl who wrote "What is an Alcoholic Father?" to seek our Alateen, whether her father realizes he is an alcoholic or not. My heart goes out to her, for I too had a father like that. Now I am happily — yes, happily, married to an alcoholic, and am the mother of three well-adjusted children. (I did not know my husband had this problem when we were married.)

Alcoholism is not an illness to be ashamed of and it has no regard for the type of person it attacks. My husband is vice president of a large company. We are both college graduates with masters degrees.

After indulging in "Poor Me" for the first six years of marriage, I discovered Al Anon and learned:

1. I was not responsible for John's drinking.
2. The only person I was responsible for was myself.
3. Total detachment from his problem was my only salvation, and the chance to give my children at least one parent they could be proud of — and not a screaming shrew.
4. To detach does not mean to stop loving. It means simply that his drinking problem is his problem, and I will not let his illness ruin my life.
5. Only John would have to take the consequences of his drinking regardless of what they were.

I learned to take one day — sometimes even one hour — at a time, and to ask God for courage. Gradually, it worked. It's been four years since I went to my first Al Anon meeting and three years since A.A. said to John, "Welcome Home." — ONE WHO KNOWS

DEAR HELEN:

My father was a "mean drunk." Sick? No, I think he drank so he'd have an excuse for cruelty. My mother stuck it out and died early. We children have scars, physical and mental, that will never disappear.

Maybe some alcoholics can be helped, but a family shouldn't waste its life trying. Let him kill himself alone — and (in the case of my father) good riddance. — EDNA

DEAR HELEN:

I'm glad you "took it all back" about putting the man behind the wheel regardless of who owns the car.

Not too long ago I was a college girl with a car of my own. My parents had only one stipulation: No one but myself could drive. You see, the car had only liability insurance and no young man under 25 was covered. Many high school girls are given the same rules — but so many boys think they should drive to show "manliness." Several of my dates argued that my folks would never know — wouldn't get into a wreck. They're the type who would clip your column as a further talking point.

Believe me, it's complicated enough, saying "No" when guys offer to take over the wheel. You might add to your retraction, Helen, a note to guys: Please don't ask to drive your girl friend's car. If she wants you to — and her insurance covers you — she'll ask. — T.F.L.

Added! — H.

Livestock Census

While the "people" census is taken only once every ten years, livestock numbers are calculated annually. Perhaps it's because there aren't as many demographic groups to tabulate. At any rate, the nation's cattle, hog and sheep industries have managed — through business like efficiency and know-how — to keep the meat animal population high enough to feed the human population adequate amounts of beef, veal, pork and lamb. Here's what the livestock population amounts to in 1970: 112.3 million cattle and calves, 56.7 million hogs and pigs and 20.4 million sheep and lambs.

TWINS FOR SPRING

Full Cut For Cape Pattern

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

I have heard so much about the unlined double knit wool capes. They sound so easy to make. My question is, do I have to find a special pattern or will any cape pattern work?

MKRS. J.A.P.

DEAR MRS. J.A.P.:

You will want a pattern that is cut rather full so that it will drape nicely when you have it on. Most of the unlined capes I have seen do not have a slit for the armhoes. A strip on lining fabric is applied about 4 inches from the finished edge of your cape, on the wrong side, for your arms to slide through which helps keep your cape on your shoulders. This strip of fabric should measure about 6 inches.

The nicest finish for your seams is to bind them in a matching colored lining fabric. These bindings are cut about 1 inch wide on the bias. Machine stitch the bias strip to your fabric, right sides together, about 1/8 inch from the cut edge. Next, fold the bias strip over the seam you have just stitched. To the wrong side, pin to avoid shifting of the grain, and machine stitch from the right side, in the well or crack that forms where the two fabrics were joined. This stitching will not be noticable because it is not on the binding itself.

Cut off the additional binding if it extends more than 1/4 inch from the stitching. It is much simpler to finish all the raw edges in this manner before you have done any construction seams. This method of seam finishing gives the unlined cape a very neat, professional look when you aren't wearing it. The above method of seam finishing is often referred to as the "Hong Kong finish."

MRS. ERIKA Schmid, Binghamton, N.Y. is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her following sewing suggestion.

"The application of an invisible zipper used to be a joy, until recently, when working with a knit fabric where I had to meet horizontal stripes. After two failures and much frustration, I solved my problem as follows:

"After applying one side of the zipper, I closed it and marked the horizontal lines with pencil on the opposite zipper tape. Matching the marks with the stripes on the fabric assured the perfect outcome."

DEAR READERS:

Mrs. G.P.M. says: My mother and I do quite a bit of sewing and have never had trouble with thread until they started putting it on plastic instead of wooden spools. The thread seems to feed through the machine too fast and causes the annoying problem of loops and bunchiness under the fabric. We have solved this problem by placing a metal washer on top of the spool of thread, the extra weight seems to adjust the speed and for us it has worked perfectly.

DEAR EUNICE:

When making garments out of solid colored Ban-Lon, which is the right side? I have seen it rolled both ways at our shop. One side seems to have a decided up and down ridge, the other side seems to have a cross weave.

DEAR MRS. L.A.M.:

The easiest way to decide the right from the wrong side of these sheer tricot knits is to stretch a small area between your fingers, near the cut edge of the fabric. It will automatically roll or curl over to the right side.

I might also add a little word of advice about sewing on these fine tricot nylon fabrics (it also works with the sheerest of polyester knits,) keep your fingers in front and also in back of the needle and apply a slight tension in both directions. However, be sure to allow the fabric to feed itself naturally. If the length of your stitches is not uniform, it means you are applying too much tension or stretch with your fingers.

DEAR EUNICE,

I'm at my wits end and have-tried everything possible to avoid skipped stitches when I am sewing on knits. I brought this up at a recent meeting where most of the women did their own sewing and was surprised to find that many others are having the same difficulties. However, this doesn't solve the problem, sure hope you can help all of us.

MRS. H.H.

DEAR MRS. H.H.:

We have found in our sewing school, where incidentally, everything I write about in this column has been tested, that the secret in sewing with knits and usually avoiding the skipping of stitches, is the use of the new ballpoint needles. These needles are available at all the better fabric shops and department stores, and fit all machines.

Marin Women

Police Wives' Group Formed

Mrs. Kenneth Ankeny of Novato is the first president of a new women's organization, the Sausalito Police Wives Auxiliary.

The group was founded recently when the women met at the home of Mrs. Ankeny, who is the wife of a Sausalito police sergeant.

"The auxiliary will have two purposes," she says, "a social one of providing wives with opportunities to become better acquainted in meetings and social gatherings, and a more serious one of working on community relations in Sausalito and supporting some charitable projects that will be selected soon."

Meetings will be held the third Wednesday of each month at 7:30 p.m. in the homes of members.

A native of Tulsa, Okla., Donna Ankeny was graduated from Alhambra High School and the California Hospital School of Nursing in Los Angeles. Until last year she was regularly employed as a registered nurse.

She is a Cub Scout den mother and enjoys all kinds of arts and crafts but especially likes painting in oils and acrylics. She is taking a drawing class at Novato High School.

The Ankenys have lived in Marin three years and are the parents of Kirt, 8; Kelly, 7; and Keri, 18 months.

Other auxiliary officers are Mmes. Walter Potter, vice president; William Palmini, secretary; and John Ellis, treasurer. Mrs. Witt Simpson is sunshine chairman, and Mrs. James D. Wright, wife of the Sausalito police chief, will handle publicity.

LIZ CARPENTER

By JOAN LISETOR

Liz Carpenter lost her last job on Jan. 20, 1969.

"That is the day the Johnsons went out, the Nixons came in and Billy Graham stayed on at the White House," says the former press secretary to Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson.

Speaking yesterday in a program of the A.M. Series at the Tamalpais Theater in San Anselmo she recalled her five years at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue — a house of history, a house of tensions and the home of a family.

MRS. CARPENTER was a Washington, D. C., reporter for 17 years before becoming an executive assistant to then Vice President Johnson. The former Texan became Mrs. Johnson's press secretary in 1963 when Mrs. Johnson became the First Lady.

"I thought I knew everything there was to know about covering the White House. I had been in on press briefing since Eleanor Roosevelt's time, but there is a very different view from inside the fence," she says. "The press secretary walks a tightrope over what is personal and what is private, and naturally there is curiosity about the family."

As overseer of two White House weddings after none had been held there for more than 50 years, Mrs. Carpenter lead a parade of 500 reporters trying, she says, to bring a little order out of the chaos and answering questions like, "How many raisins were in Linda Bird Johnson's wedding cake?"

That one she says she solved by delegating the reporter who asked it to the chore of counting the raisins.

"SO YOU won't hold your breath another minute — there were 1,511," she says.

Another problem with the President's eldest daughter's wedding cake resulted in a translation problem between the Swiss chef and Mrs. Carpenter, who says she speaks "Texas."

"I gave the cake's ingredients to the press since it was not a state secret," she says. "And I listed the sugar as powdered. It was actually very fine granulated sugar, and we started getting letters from housewives complaining that their cakes had fallen. "At that time I thought President Johnson was going to run again, and I wondered how big the dropped cake vote would be."

Luci Johnson's wedding date offended the Ambassador to Japan because she chose the anniversary of the bombing of Hiroshima.

"I AM SURE it never occured to Luci, and I probably would have rescheduled it to Dec. 7," Mrs. Carpenter says.

The White House has its housekeeping problems, according to Mrs. Carpenter. A vacuum cleaner sat unnoticed in the middle of a hallway as a king was arriving on the South Lawn by helicopter. Mrs. Johnson noticed it, looked around for a staff member to move it and, seeing no one, tossed it into a nearby China closet.

"The king was none the wiser," Mrs. Carpenter recalls, but it is incidents such as these that emphasize the human side of the administration.

The Johnsons were a calorie conscious administration, says Mrs. Carpenter and also exercise conscious.

"Mrs. Johnson swam 50 laps every day and often I would shout questions from the side of the pool to her, and she would swim along shouting back something like, 'Yes tell the ladies in Akron, Ohio, I will be there to plant the trees."

Mrs. Carpenter estimates her travels took her more than 200,000 miles as Mrs. Johnson's press secretary — to some very remote areas. Comparing notes with Dean Rusk, who claims to have travelled more than 800,000 miles as the Secretary of State, Mrs. Carpenter asked him what the most remote spot he had ever visited was.

"MR. RUSK said it must be the Fiji Islands," Mrs. Carpenter says. "When he was greeted by the foreign service officer there, the greeting was, 'Welcome, Mr. Dulles.'"

Mrs. Carpenter wondered during her White House years if after it was all over life would be like playing poker for match sticks, as a friend had suggested.

"By moving the game out of the limelight I found time to do things I had been shelving for all of those years," she says.

She has written a book, "Ruffles and Flourishes," and is on what she calls the book selling trail.

"THE TRAIL is difficult for a woman," she says, "because of hair and eyelashes. False eyelashes came to me late in life, and I have managed to glue my eyeballs in 50 states, but I have learned a trick when I need them for a television appearance. Get to the studio early and look for the girl with the shortest mini-skirt. She is the assistant to the executive and will be good with (false) eyelashes.

"I did get fooled that way once, though. I arrived at the studio early and there was no girl with a mini-skirt — only a dentist. He said he could do the job if he could stand behind me and I held my mouth open."

It was, she says, the best eyelash job she ever had.

Hair does become a problem on the lecture circuit, she explains, because you usually arrive in a city when the beauty shops are closed. Recently she called a beautician who was listed in the telephone book.

"She didn't seem at all surprised when I told her I wanted her in my hotel suite at 5 a.m.," Mrs. Carpenter says. "When she arrived she looked at me and said, 'You are the first live customer I have had in a long time."

IN NEW places, Mrs. Carpenter says she doesn't like to just see the airports and theaters. She was delighted to be spending yesterday afternoon sightseeing with Mrs. Jack Van Wort of Corte Madera.

"Jane Van Wort called me in Sacramento yesterday and invited me to stay the night. We worked on a newspaper together in Texas and hadn't seen each other for 25 years," she says.

"Jane told me she liked my book and asked who wrote it for me. I told her I was glad she liked it and asked, 'Who read it to you?"

Everyone in government writes a book, she says, "Martha Mitchell is going to call hers 'The Mouth of the Potomac' and Spiro Agnew is working on a how-to-book on spectator sports. The Secretary of State's will be called 'What To Do In Case Of Peace.'"

Following her talk Mrs. Carpenter autographed copies of her book and donated the profits from those sold in the theater lobby to the Family Service League, sponsors of the A. M. Series.

Picnic In Freezer

Keep a picnic in your freezer. When the sun comes out and you're in a picnic mood, go. No need to let food slow you down, not if picnic fare is tucked in your freezer. The food thaws as you travel. Have hamburgers preshaped and ready to cook. Have a variety of meat sandwiches clearly identified. Take along lettuce and tomato to add at serving time. Also slip cookies from freezer in the picnic basket.

Breakfast Loss

It is estimated that 50 per cent of the American population starts the day with a totally inadequate breakfast. By skipping or skimping on this important meal, individuals can miss 25 to 33 per cent of their daily allowances of a variety of nutrients.

DANCE REVIEW

Makarova Dazzles Audience

By MARIE RAMEAU

SAN FRANCISCO — American Ballet theater has not lost its touch. After Tuesday's disastrous "Swan Lake," one could only hope that the company would find some way to vindicate itself. It did, Thursday evening, in a program of strange contrast at the Opera House.

The evening opened with Jose Limon's "The Moor's Pavane," subtitled "Variations on a Theme of Othello." Set to Purcell's suite "The Moor's Revenge," it was a puzzling piece but a tasteful, different introduction to the main fare.

The Moor and his wife were Bruce Marks and Cynthia Gregory; the friend and his wife were Royes Fernandez and Sallie Wilson. All communicated a sense of poise, continuity and Shakespearean elegance.

A disturbing point emerged in the discrepancy between the intensely dramatic Othello theme and the studied, formal music which in the 17th Century was a ballet interlude to a play by the same title. If the theme really were to work with the music, the choreography should have been more tightly structured and more consistent with the style of the English Baroque.

It appeared accidental, therefore, that some interesting yet anachronistic Renaissance lines emerged. However, a very effective integration of modern dance and ballet techniques became apparent immediately. Although the piece left behind a certain uneasiness, the idea still brims over with possibilities.

The Romantic masterpiece "Giselle" was, of course, the high point of the evening. The early 19th Century choreography by Jean Coralli and Jules Perrot remained more or less intact, and the score by Adam, never musically strong, has still not lost its ethereal beauty to the ravages of time.

Even the hopelessly mediocre orchestra, conducted by Akira Endo, surpassed itself by playing with some degree of sensitivity. The corps de ballet was fairly precise, but Roni Mahler as Myrta looked strained and woody, lacking the necessary ballon for this part.

Ex-Kirov ballet star Natalya Makarova stole the show, and it was truly refreshing to see that her tremendous reputation is not contingent only on her defection from the USSR. It could be said without exaggeration that hers is the most moving and aesthetically perfect Giselle since Ulanova's.

This blonde, long-necked young genius conceals a phenomenal technique, completely transcended by a prodigious artistry, sensitivity and musicality. In Act I she is refreshing untheatrical, with none of that "ballerina presence" which too frequently detracts from librettist Theophile Gautier's portrait of a naive and fragile peasant girl.

In Act II she is the poet's dream and the incarnation of Heine's phantom from a distant world. All she does is rendered with a simplicity and openness so transparent that pirouettes, arabesques and pointes seem to occur only as an illusion. Russian to the core, she dances with the essence of her being.

Erik Bruhn as Count Albrecht was a little down, although he never fails to give a consistently fine performance. Always the perfect partner, he and Miss Makarova were in complete harmony, and his own acting was natural and thoroughly convincing.

American Ballet Theater concludes its San Francisco performances with Makarova and Bruhn in "Swan Lake," tomorrow at 8: 30 p.m. at the Opera House.

Body Found; Believed Napa Co-Ed

NAPA, Calif. (UPI)—A body believed to be that of a missing 20-year-old co-ed was found buried Friday in a mountainous area near where the elusive Zodiac killer has claimed four of his victims.

Lynda Kanes, a Pacific Union College student, disappeared eight days ago. Zodiac's third victim, found Sept. 7, 1969, on the west shore of Lake Berryessa, a few miles from the grave found Friday, was also a student at the college.

Police said they were "checking all angles" during their investigation of the latest murder.

The body was found under a stack of old logs and debris by Sgt. James Munk, the leader of a search party, only 250 yards from where Miss Kanes' abandoned car was found Feb. 26. Police said today they had not yet positively identified the body.

Homicide inspectors found her neatly folded bra and a windbreaker 60 feet north of the mountain road where the car was found with its radio blaring. They also found a piece of paper with biblical references scribbled on it.

Zodiac claims he has killed 13 victims in the past several years, but detectives credit him with only five.

Four of those known victims of the killer who signs his cryptographic notes to police "Zociac" were in the vicinity of the grave found Friday. They included two teen-agers, a waitress, and Cecilia Ann Shepard, also a student at Pacific Union College.

Corte Madera Liked In Report As Best Ferry Terminal Site

An economic analysis of properties being considered by the Golden Gate Bridge District for a Central Marin ferry terminal lists the Corte Madera site as the most favorable.

Prepared by Grubb and Ellis Co. of San Rafael, for the bridge district, the report maintains the Dominic Muzzi property in Corte Madera has "present and future value that far exceeds" that of the Hutchinson Quarry property in Larkspur.

Factors that influenced the preference for the Corte Madera site, according to the report, are flat, readily developed terrain; more valuable waterfront property, proximity to future rapid transit routes, a large enough parcel to permit multiuse development and absence of potentially annoying neighbors.

"A fully developed parcel containing some 266 acres (Muzzi's) is a far more valuable piece of property than a similar site containing only 25 acres (Hutchinson's Quarry)," the report stressed.

According to Grubb and Ellis executive William Root, who drafted the plan, it was formulated from a land economic standpoint and does not take into account additional engineering and construction costs required.

Root said the report does not deal in depth with the Lakspur site because "what can you do with a rock quarry other than create another Butchart Gardens? (A park at an old quarry in Victoria, British Columbia.)"

The report said the Corte Madera site could sell "easily for $28.6 million, and would have an appreciation rate of 6-10 per cent a year. At that growth rate, the parcel could be worth more than $50 million in 10 years.

Land values of the two proposed ferry terminal sites were discussed behind closed doors Thursday by the bridge district board. Dist. Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring said the Grubb and Ellis report was not discussed, however.

Developers of the Larkspur site have offered to sell the bridge district 25 acres of property for about $1.5 million. Muzzi has offered to give the district 25 acres free.

Presumably the district may purchase additional space at either site under the proposals.

"Because of the unique attributes and almost limitless possibilities of land use for this site (Muzzi's), it is recommended that the Golden Gate Bridge District undertake an in-depth study of its potential," the report adds.

Houseboat Idea Not Acceptable

The Army Corps of Engineers declared yesterday it will not accept old houseboats which the county wants to dump on the Army's doorsteps.

Last week, at the suggestion of Supervisor Michael Wornum, the Marin County Board of Supervisors decided it could get rid of nine dilapidated houseboats in Richardson Bay by towing them to the Army Engineers depot in Sausalito and informing the Army: They're hazards to navigation; please remove them.

Deputy County Counsel Joseph E. Forest had told the supervisors that an old federal act made the Army Corps of Engineers responsible for "clearing navigable waters of any old hulks and wrecks."

Col. Charles R. Roberts, district engineer for the Army, disagreed.

"This is to inform you that such proposed action is illegal as a deliberate and intentional creation of an obstruction to the navigable waters of the United States," Roberts wrote. "To avoid litigation and expense, it is urged that you take action to rescind the resolution directing the deliberate and intentional creation of an obstruction."

Richard L. Larson, marine inspector for the county, who was instructed to tow the boats to the Army Corps depot, will propose an alternative solution at the Supervisors' meeting Tuesday.

Larson said that a tug boat could be hired to tow the abated boats to the edge of the houseboat community at high tide, leave them for 48 hours to give the boat owners time to remove their personal effects, and then have contractors remove the hulks.

He said the county could get rid of the nine houseboats for about $2,000. Wornum had said last week the demolition job might cost $6,000.

Comic Ballad Opera Proves Good Offering At Dominican

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

Good fun and interesting as a period piece was the one-act comic ballad opera "The Devil to Pay" or "Wives Metamorphos'd," , performed last night by Dominican College students under the auspices of the college's American Music Research Center.

Sister Mary Dominic has done an excellent job of setting the play to music appropriate to its 18th Century period, and the staging by Dan Caldwell effectively employs the conventions of ballad opera genre that consist of spoken lines interspersed with solos and ensembles sung to popular tunes of the day.

Acting is highly stylized and exaggerated in a farcical manner, with many asides and much playing directly to the audience. Adding authentic touches were the harpsichord-flute-cello trio on stage throughout the performance to provide an overture and all necessary accompaniment; whistle blasts to signal changes and changing of scenes by the entire cast with curtain open and lights down.

Slow and confusing at first, the plot — in which the devil's magic causes a shrewish noble lady and humble but charming cobbler's wife to change places — was soon rolling merrily along.

Top musical and dramatic honors went to soprano Bettina Weinstein as Nell, the cobbler's wife, who showed great flair for comedy. Her bewildered attempts to act the part of a grand dame were hilarious. Almost equally impressive in her comic antics was soprano Carol Blumlein, as the real Lady Loverule who found herself the cobbler's wife.

Outstanding in male roles were Clay Roni, whose fine bass voice is frequently heard in Marin, as the cobbler, and baritone Jerry Dixon, handsome and musically pleasing as Sir John Loverule. Bass-baritone Don Loegering was satisfactory as the doctor and as the devil, who turns out to be a benevolent one.

Best work in minor roles was done by tenor Arthur Bliss as the butler and Alicia Snyder in the speaking role of the maid Lucy. All the others in the cast contributed their full measure to the success of the production.

Sets consisting of four scenes — the Loverules's mansion the cobbler's hut, a boudoir in the mansion and a forest — were simple. They adequately suggested the locales, except the forest, which was too dark, and the nine changes were commendably accomplished with an efficiency and speed that kept the pace of the production lively. Costumes, from a professional house, were very good.

I almost hesitate to mention the usual acoustical difficulties in Angelico Hall that cause loss of comprehension of both spoken and sung words, since nothing can be done about them. It is all the more to their credit that some of the performers, such as Miss Weinstein, Miss Blumlein and Roni, overcame the handicap to some extent through exceptionally careful enunciation.

The opera will be performed again tonight at 8 o'clock.

Slides Of Show To Be Presented

Slides of the National Chrysanthemum Show and a speech on fertilizers are planned for the Monday meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of Marin, according to Mrs. B. H. Keener, the group's publicity chairman.

She said the meeting will be at 8 p.m. at the Crocker-Citizens National Bank, Fourth and B streets, San Rafael.

Governor's Son Ignores Agnew

OLYMPIA, Wash. (UPI)—Vice President Spiro Agnew should be happy that the son of Gov. Dan Evans is only four-years old and a long way from voting age.

Blond, curly-headed Bruce Evans broke into tears and had to be persuaded by a little shoving from his mother, Nancy, before he would shake hands with Agnew.

30 Days Jail On Reduced Charge

Frank S. Lynn III, 23, of Sausalito, has been sentenced to 30 days in jail after he pleaded guilty to a reduced misdemeanor charge of possessing marijuana.

Judge Peter Allen Smith of Marin Municipal Court on Thursday ordered the sentence to be served concurrently with a six months sentence Lynn faces in Santa Barbara.

Lynn, who was earlier charged with a felony count of possessing pot, was arrested at his home Nov. 20 when officers allegedly saw him smoking a cigarette that appeared to be marijuana.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Navy Doctors Discover Rifampin To Stop Meningitis' Spread

Outbreaks of meningitis are most common in military installations, especially during winter and early spring. Recruits are bothered most, possibly because they lack immunity and are exposed to career personnel, many of whom are healthy carriers. Sulfadiazine is an excellent remedy, not only in the treatment of meningitis, but also in the elimination of the causative bacteria (meningococci) from the nose and throat of carriers.

WE DO NOT KNOW why so many adults harbor these virulent organisms without becoming ill. We assume some immunity remains from a past infection that localized in the nose and throat area. In 1963, tests began to show that some types of meningococci were becoming resistant to sulfadiazine. Luckily physicians from Great Lakes (Ill.) Naval Training Center found a substitute.

It is called rifampin, and is a semisynthetic antiobiotic. According to their report in the Journal of the American Medical Association, rifampin was tested because it belongs to a family of drugs effective against a wide variety of bacteria, including the tubercle bacilli. Of more importance to the Navy physicians, was the ability of rifampin to eradicate meningococci from the carriers.

MANY BACTERIA are capable of infecting the meninges (a thin membrane covering the brain). Meningococci are the most common offenders. They enter the body through the nose and throat and produce a mild infection resembling a cold. The bacteria multiply, enter the bloodstream and travel all over the body. At this stage, fever, chills, fatigue and a blotchy or spotted rash ensue.

Shortly thereafter, the microbes settle in the meninges of the brain. Intense headache, and stiffness of the neck follow. A spinal tap produces turbid, bloody fluid that is under considerable pressure. It is encouraging to know that we have more than one good remedy for this alarming condition. A new protective vaccine is being tested.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

TRENCH MOUTH

REPLY

Yes, but stubborn cases of trench mouth (Vincent's infection), may require continuous dental treatment for an indefinite period of time. The antibiotics, such as penicillin, kill the causative germs. Gargles and mouthwashes with either hydrogen peroxide (half strength) or sodium perborate are most useful. In addition, Gly-Oxide may afford some relief.

SLEEPING ON AN INCLINE

A reader writes: I nap with my head hanging lower than my feet. Would sleeping in this slant position all night cause any harm to the body?

REPLY

No, provided you sleep on the back and do not assume the position of a bat or a sloth. The heart and blood vessels adjust to reasonable changes in posture. However, there is no advantage in sleeping on an incline.

IN A COMA

W. H. writes: Is a person who is in a coma conscious of what is being said and done around him?

REPLY

No, as coma is a state of unconsciousness. The individual may be conscious while going into or coming out of the coma but the majority are too dull or ill to know what is going on.

Tam Plan Session Is Postponed

The controversial reorganization plan for the Tamalpais High School District probably will not be considered for action March 15 by the district board, as announced earlier.

Dist. Supt. Wilber D. Hawkins said yesterday he has asked that the matter be postponed to March 29 to allow additional time to discuss it with interested parties.

"I don't want anyone to feel they didn't have an opportunity to study the plan," he said.

Hawkin's controversial plan brought loud protest last Monday from district teachers and students who objected he developed it alone.

Hawkins said that besides continued discussions with staff and students during the month, he would hold a "phone-in" to answer residents' individual questions about the plan.

The "phone-in" has been set for Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Persons with questions may call the superintendent at the district office in Larkspur.

Guilty Plea To Growing Grass

Jack Martin Kelly, 22, and Ruth M. Herr, 30, both of 360 Woodside Avenue, Tamalpais Valley, have pleaded guilty in Marin Municipal Court to charges of cultivating marijuana.

A charge of possessing pot against each of them was dismissed Thursday by Judge Peter Allen Smith at the request of the district attorney's office which reported it was merely a restatement of the cultivation offense.

The pair is to appear in Superior Court Wednesday for setting of a date for sentencing.

They were arrested Feb. 2 when drug agents raided their residence with a search warrant obtained after marijuana plants were allegedly seen growing near a door of the house.

Firms Indicted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three publishing firms have been indicted for illustrating the report of the President's Commission on Obscenity and Pornography. The unauthorized expansion included allegedly erotic photographs of men, women and animals.

Simple Plan Would Prevent State Deficits

Everybody knows that California state government is facing another financial crisis. It is committed to spend more than its income.

The legislature took characteristic action in the face of the crisis. Legislators raised their own expense allowances.

The governor has a plan for meeting the crisis. It is extremely doubtful whether the legislature will accede to the governor's plan.

Where does this leave us?

In the same old bag, probably: the legislature will have to vote new taxes upon us.

There may be another alternative, a better way out.

So far as we know, no one else has yet thought of the possibility we have in mind. It is not likely that anyone in state government would think of this particular approach. If they did think of it, you can be sure that they would breathe not a word of it publicly.

We call it the Salary Suspension Incentive Plan. It is something like this:

Whenever the state finds itself with more outgo than income, all services to the public would be frozen — that is, they would neither be increased nor be decreased. They would remain constant.

But a system of cost cutting would automatically be instituted.

The extent to which this cost-cutting system was applied would be determined by the extent of the threatening deficit. Costs would be cut merely enough to bring outgo into balance with income.

The cost cutting system is simplicity itself.

The state would merely suspend salary payments to certain state employees to the degree necessary to balance outgo with income.

Salary suspensions would be instituted according to a priority list of state employees. The order of priority would be determined by the size of an official's salary. The largest salary would be first. That would be the governor.

Since the legislature shares with the governor the responsibility for keeping state spending within bounds, it is only right that the top legislative officials — the president pro tem of the Senate and the speaker of the Assembly — share top priority with the governor, although legislative officials received somewhat less salary than top administrators.

Legislative committee chairmen, in both Senate and Assembly, would constitute the next priority level, followed by individual legislators according to seniority. Those with the longest seniority (and presumably the most influence) should be the first to be affected by the salary suspension plan.

Such a system of salary suspensions in time of fiscal crisis has so many advantages and good features that there is not space enough here to touch on more than the mere highlights.

First, services to the needy, the poor, the aged, the blind, the ill, etc., would continue unaffected. Those at the bottom of the pay scale in state service, like hospital orderlies, would be unaffected. The meager salaries on which they and their families depend for existence would be protected.

On the other hand, those at the top level whose salaries would be cut or eliminated — like governor Reagan — would not be hurt appreciably. It may be that the most noticeable immediate affect on them would be an income tax deduction, an obvious benefit.

The overall effect on the top administrators and top legislators should be, from the taxpayers' standpoint, very good. Salary suspension would motivate these influential officials to find immediate solutions to the state's critical problems with a minimum of political shadow boxing.

Obviously the Salary Suspension Incentive Plan would benefit everyone in the long run.

It is pretty certain that such a plan would not be advocated by the governor nor voted into being by the state legislature, however.

If it is to be implemented, it will have to be by iniative petition of voters. We can count on little help from experienced politicans in putting the measure on the ballot and getting it passed.

The whole operation would have to be a do-it-yourself operation by voters.

Voters of California, arise!

We have it within our power to bring about our own solution to our state's recurring fiscal crises.

If we don't unite to protect ourselves against further invasion of our pocketbooks, our paychecks and bank accounts by Sacramento, we will have only ourselves to blame.

One of the great things about spring fever is that it enables a man to sit back, look up, and see more easily and more clearly how the complex problems of our day can be solved so simply.

The Consistent Audubon Society

There are conservation groups and conservation groups, but no other that over the years has shown the consistent devotion to its ideal of the Audubon Society.

Other groups have strayed into politics, have sometimes appeared to be opposing the very conservation they espoused, have split and splintered in internal quarrels. But not the Audubon Society!

It has remained true to its purpose of protecting America's bird life.

In Marin, it supports the Audubon Canyon Ranch, presents an annual series of wildlife films, is active in outdoor education, conducts field trips, presents speakers — all with protection of bird life the central theme.

The Marin Audubon Society is now conducting its annual membership campaign. Its address is Box 441, Tiburon.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUET to Radio KTIM on getting the Oakland Athletics baseball broadcasts for this season, putting big league baseball on Marin's own AM-FM radio station.

BOUQUET to Rev. Kent A. Philpott for speaking out to the Marin Youth Commission on the importance of moral training for youth. More persons in positions of leadership should stress this, rather than blaming young people for lacking values they have not been taught.

BRICKBATS to all those who use "revolution" as excuse for crime and immorality, and to those who go along unquestioningly with such deceit.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Newspaper Carrier Not Job For Girl

In reference to the article printed in the News Chronicle (UPI), on Feb. 26, entitled "Women's Lib for 11-Year-Old." This young girl claims she is being discriminated against because of her sex. She wants to become a newspaper carrier for the San Rafael Independent-Journal.

Antigione Stoddard brought the complaint against this newspaper and Peter Ladow, one of the paper's distributors, before the Equal Opportunity Commission.

She and her sisters want a horse; their father says they have to be able to keep up the maintenance for this horse.

Mr. Stoddard said the newspaper violated the 1964 Civil Rights and state law passed last year which adds the word "sex" to the Fair Employment Practices Act.

A word to Mr. Stoddard, and other parents who might have this same feeling. I am a woman and have been in this business of hiring carriers for routes for over three years, and I say to you, Mr. Stoddard, and others with the same idea, I have 36 boys working for me; I love girls and they are as ambitious as the boys at this age, sometimes even more. But I agree with Mr. Ladow. This is no business for an 11-year-old girl.

Mr. Stoddard, can you truthfully say you would let your daughter out on the streets after dark, sometimes carrying a great amount of money? Sometimes making special calls after 9 o'clock in order to collect money to pay her bill each month?...

Mr. Stoddard, this newspaper man is not being prejudiced, he is looking out for your daughter's welfare.

Please from the bottom of my heart, let your daughter find another way to make the money needed to keep her horse...

Advice To Minister Of Homosexuals

To the homosexual minister, Rev. James L. Stoll, may God help you and the people that look to you for spiritual guidance.

You sir, have evidently not yet learned the difference between divine love and human love. I suggest that you read the Bible, Leviticus Chp. 20, Galations Chp. 5: 9-26. Where in the Bible does it say that man is an animal? The Bible does tell us however, that "Man has sought out many inventions." Eccl. 7:29.

I suggest sir, that you make a thorough study of the King James version of the Bible and get a better understanding of God's Law and find out just what God demands of His people. "With all thy getting, get understanding," (Pr. 4:7)

Big Burden On Vietnamese GI: Win This One For Nixon

WASHINGTON — President Nixon has given all of us assurances that the American GIs will not do any fighting in Laos, Cambodia, or even North Vietnam — on the ground, that is. Therefore, the burden of all the fighting will be on the South Vietnamese, which seems to be a fine idea with President Thieu and Marshal Ky. But nobody seems to have asked the average South Vietnamese soldier how he feels about all this.

Three South Vietnamese soldiers were dug in along the Ho Chi Minh Trail the other day discussing the situation.

"HEY LOOK, did you hear that after this incursion they want us to invade North Vietnam?"

"The generals must be out of their rice-picking minds," Cpl. Lok said. "What in the monsoon do they want us to invade the North Vietnam for?"

"So the American GIs can pull out of our country faster," Pfc. No Dem replied. "You see, every time we go into another country, it makes it easier for Nixon to pull out Americans."

"That's fine for the Americans," Pfc. Nhu Nhu said. "But what happens to us?"

"ACCORDING TO the American generals in Saigon we're as good fighters as any army in the world, providing we have aerial support and the enemy has none," Pfc. No Dem said.

"That's a crock of yak butter," Cpl. Lok said. "They're just saying that so they can pull out without losing face."

"That's no way to talk about our ally, Lok. If it hadn't been for the U.S., we wouldn't be on the Ho Chi Minh Trail today," Pfc. No Dem said.

"Getting our butts shot off," Cpl. Lok grunted.

"YOU ALWAYS think of yourselves," Pfc. No Dem said. "Do you realize there is a lot more at stake than just getting your butt shot off?"

"Like what?" Cpl. Lok demanded.

"Well, if President Nixon doesn't get enough American troops out of Vietnam he could lose the election in 1972."

"I hadn't though of that," Pfc. Nhu Nhu said.

"YOU MEAN we're dug in here getting our butts shot off just so we won't make a liar out of Nixon?" Cpl. Lok said.

"Not just Nixon, but Henry Kissinger and Mel Laird and Ambassador Bunker and General Abrams and Joseph Alsop. There are a lot of careers that could go down the drain if we don't interdict the enemy's supply lines before the rainy season starts," Pfc. No Dem warned.

"We're carrying a big burden on our shoulders," Pfc. Nhu Nhu agreed.

"And let's not forget," said Pfc. No Dem," our own President Thieu's election could depend on the outcome of this incursion."

"WHO'S HE RUNNING against?" Cpl. Lok asked.

"Nobody," Pfc. No Dem said. "But we still want him to look good, don't we?"

Neither Nhu Nhu nor Lok replied.

Cpl. Lok finally said, "okay, let's, for argument'? sake, say we cut the Ho Chi Minh Trail, secure Cambodia and invade North Vietnam and all the American troops pull out. Where does that leave us?"

Pfc. No Dem replied, "We'll be part of the free world, dummy."

Censorship Adds To Damage Done By Southeast Asia War

WASHINGTON—In any balance sheet of the damage done by nearly 10 years of the American war in Indochina, a large debit must be entered for the way it has set Americans against each other. With the Laotian adventure greatly enlarged and the outcome in doubt, a tide of opposition is rising that can mean still another encounter with officialdom.

Increasing bitterness and hostility have marked these encounters. Support of the war is being made a test of patriotism. That tactic is so divisive, so destructive of the good will prevailing in the past even between sharply opposed political opponents, as to threaten the broad sense of common cause serving this country so well across the years.

In one way in particular the division is destructive. "Kill the messenger who brings the bad news." That practice out of the ancient past has been applied in a rather less stringent form to the messengers reporting the news of the Vietnam war.

In 1962 things had gone well for Ngo Dinh Diem, who with his family had begun to exercise an increasingly authoritative rule over South Vietnam. Gen. Paul Harkins, commander of the approximately 16,000 American troops in the area, had become an apostle of optimism. Predicting the war would be "won within a year," he sent glowing reports to the Pentagon that sparked the same optimism in the highest quarters.

Then in 1963 things began to go badly. Diem ordered the wholesale arrest of Vietnamese youths suspected of sympathy with the Communists and seeking an end to the war. The Buddhists were in open revolt. As they immolated themselves in protest, Mme. Ngo Dinh Nhu, Diem's sister, applauded, saying she was never happier than when the bonzes were barbecuing themselves.

All this, together with doubts about what was happening in the field, was reported by David Halberstam of the New York Times and the other reporters who were not confined to the hothouse atmosphere of Saigon and the tender care of escorting officers. They were writing what was contrary to the official line, and the teletype between Saigon and the Pentagon burned up with angry protest.

President John F. Kennedy was finally prevailed upon to act. He called the top brass at the New York Times to suggest that the national interest would be served if Halberstam were replaced by another correspondent. The Times backed its man. Lyndon Johnson, briefing reporters about to go out to Vietnam, would cite Halberstam as an example of one who had betrayed his country.

OTHER REPORTERS have come under this same attack. One was Francois Sully, the courageous and able correspondent for 20 years of Newsweek, killed in the helicopter crash that cost the life of Gen. Do Cao Tri. Sully was expelled from Vietnam by the Diem regime in 1962, with the American Mission doing little or nothing to resist what was an act of censorship. Both Peter Arnett, Pulitzer Prize-winning reporter in Vietnam, and Horst Faas, photographer for the AP and also a Pulitzer Prize winner, were assailed.

The Laotian "incursion" has been shrouded in a greater darkness than any action during the entire war. While permission was finally granted for American reporters to go in American helicopters, there are no reporters on the ground. The South Vietnamese high command takes a jaundiced view of the presence of American correspondents.

The official view, therefore, has had greater weight than ever before.

The war has been at times over-reported by zealous young correspondents. Television for the first time brought blood and gore into the living room. The alternative was censorship blanking out all but the official line. Can anyone seriously believe this would have been better?

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

Russ Eye Persian Gulf As Britain Moves Out

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

The British government has confirmed its intentions of pulling out of the Persian Gulf by the end of this year, meaning that an area long considered vital to the West goes up for grabs with the Soviet Union a chief contender.

It was back in 1940 that Vyacheslav M. Molotov, one-time Soviet premier and foreign minister, told the German ambassador in Moscow that "the area south of Batum and Baku in the general direction of the Persian gulf is recognized as the center of the aspirations of the Soviet Union."

It is a Russian aspiration going back to the days of the czars and their search for a warm water entry into the world's oceans.

WHETTING THE Russian appetite since World War II has been the discovery that 60 per cent of the world's oil reserves lie beneath the coasts or waters of the gulf.

Lying athwart the Russian path is pro-western Iran which occupies the gulf's entire northeastern shore, wooed now by Soviet trade and aid and friendly calls from the expanding Russian navy.

Neighboring Iran is unfriendly Iraq, and directly across the gulf, Kuwait, Saudia Arabia, Bahrein, Qatar and the seven so-called Trucial states.

Iran, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait each have an oil income of around $1 billion. Iraq takes in about $500 million as do the sum total of the Trucial states. The others take in around $100 million each.

When Britain moved into the area more than 100 years ago, the gulf was a shallow, 500-mile backwater lined by inhospitable sand and rock, noted for pirates and pearls.

By a truce in 1853, the sheiks foreswore piracy "forever."

With Britain on the way out, the sheiks today seek, so far unsuccessfully, to unite themselves in a federation. Their success or failure may determine whether they stand united or fall separately to the forces of Maoism centering upon South Yemen, to various "liberation" forces or to mutual suspicions and jealousies among themselves.

The Trucial states are Abu Dhabi, Dubai, Sharja, Fujaira, Umm al Quaiwain, Ajman and Ras al Khaima. Cooperation among them is a must, but in their new-found prosperity, Abu Dh

Cooperation among them is a must, but in their new-found prosperity, Abu Dhabi, Dubai and Bahrain all push competitive and expensive airport and harbor developments.

Moving to assume a major protective role is Iran, in cooperation with Saudi Arabia.

But theirs is a cooperation that could be short-lived. Between them is a six-century-old clash between the Sunni Islam of the Arabs and the Shia Islam of Iran. Any Sunni-Shia conflict probably would draw in Iraq.

Another possible flash point is Iran's claim to offshore islands controlled by Britain in the name of the Trucial states of Sharja and Ras al Khaima. Adding to the uncertainty already hanging over the area is the possibility that Iraq may turn over special privileges to the Russians at its port of Basra

Car 'Dies' And As Result Big Haul Of Heroin

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Three men were arrested on charges of possession of narcotics for sale after their car "died from a heroin overdose," police reported Friday.

Officers said they followed the vehicle from Los Angeles to Tijuana, Mexico, and back Thursday night.

Two blocks from its destination in the Harbor City area, the vehicle ran out of gas. Police said the occupants jumped out, pushed the car the final two blocks, up a driveway and into a garage where they put it on jacks and began dismantling the gas tank.

Officers said 30 ounces of uncut heroin, valued at $600,000, had been secreted in the gas tank in small rubber balloons. One of the balloons had burst, diluting the gasoline and clogging the fuel line.

One officer noted in his report that it was the first time a "car had died from a heroin overdose."

Cameras Stolen At Drake High

Three cameras valued at almost $5,000 have been stolen from the movie making classroom at Sir Francis Drake High School in San Anselmo police reported.

Officers said the cameras, all Bolex movie models, were taken between 2 and 8:30 a.m. Wednesday from a cabinet in the portable building serving as the movie classroom.

The front door of the room had been opened with what appeared to be a pry bar, officers said. A nightwatchman told officers the building was secure when he checked at 2 a.m. The burglary was discovered when school opened that morning.

The three cameras and attached "zoom lens" were worth $400, $2,300 and $2,286.

In his letter of resignation to the Marin County Board of Supervisors, Williams complimented the human rights commission for its "sincere concern and devotion for the better interest of mankind."

Williams has been appointed to Gov. Ronald Reagan's staff to handle Indian affairs statewide.

He is widely known as Chief Lightfoot, the mascot for the Stanford Indians, the university football team. Before taking his Sacramento post, he was a documentation clerk for the Matson Navigation Co. in San Francisco.

Use of Club To Be Studied

The Novato Planning Commission will consider an application to permit semiprivate use of the San Marin Club, heretofore a private recreation club, at 8 p.m. Monday at the Novato Community House.

Benjamin Morris of San Francisco, in the process of buying the club from G and R Associates of Los Angeles, is seeking a change in use so the club can accommodate outings by organizations, as well as members.

Morris said that purchase of the club hinges on whether he can get a permit for semiprivate operation.

HIGH SCHOOL PROGRAM

A Taste Of Hospital Life

By LARRY MOWELL

Sorting out those who are interested in a medical career from those who only think they are is the purpose of a high school program at Marin and Ross general hospitals.

The project, known as the Work Experience Education Program, has offered 73 high school students from throughout Marin a taste of hospital life since it began in the spring of 1969, according to A. Denis Ragan, coordinator of the program.

The students, all juniors and seniors, spend a semester at the hospitals learning operations of the various departments, Ragan, a teacher at Redwood High School, said.

The students take a class from 1:30 to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday to obtain first-hand knowledge. "The whole idea is to get them out into the real world," Ragan said.

While not unique in the state, the Marin program is the most extensive, Ragan said. Currently enrolled are 10 from Redwood, four from Terra Linda High School and one from Marin Catholic High School.

The program had to turn away 11 other students, Ragan said, despite requirements that the potential doctors and nurses buy their own uniforms and arrange transportation.

While working at the hospitals requires more sacrifice than taking a course at school, the students at Marin General were enthusiastic about the program.

The young people — who had to express a "serious interest in learning more about the medical field to be selected — each said the desire for medical professions has been reinforced.

There have been only four dropouts in two years, Ragan said.

Gale McCall, a 17-year-old Redwood senior, who had been interested in nursing in a mental health facility, said, "I might change my mind because I've become interested in everything I have gone into so far."

Since her class started Feb. 8, she has worked in the pharmacy, X-ray and physical therapy sections of the hospitals.

Other departments in which the students are trained include nursing, laboratory and administration. The students are rotated through the various departments to learn about each.

Gus Roland, also a 17-year-old Redwood senior, said, "I wanted to see how interested I really was. I didn't really have any exposure."

He said his desire to be a doctor has increased during his work at the hospital. Working in physical therapy, he said, has enabled him to learn how to teach people to use their bodies again.

While the students in physical training get a lot of first-hand experience, some of the other departments provide less satisfying tasks, the students said.

Under the direction of hospital personnel at all times, the students are shown how each department functions, but in some departments their contribution is limited.

However, all the students at Marin General claimed the occasional drudgery is compensated for at other times. Sonja Horn, a Redwood senior, was excited about seeing a child born.

Others laughed about trying to revive Recusci-Annie, a dummy used to practice resuscitation procedures.

Karen Rossi said she liked the intensive care unit best because she can work with patients, but in the recovery room "you just sit around."

All of the Redwood students are at Marin General while the other five are at Ross General. The program is the same at each hospital, but in Ross, the smaller hospital, the students get to know people faster, Roland said. He began at Ross but was switched to Marin General.

Whichever hospital the students are assigned to, the experience seems to whet their appetites to study some aspect of medicine.

Miss Horn, who has been helping nurses in the emergency room, said, "I remember one time I would have liked to help, but I haven't had the experience."

She hopes to get that experience someday, using the class at the hospital as a stepping stone.

There were 105,433 post offices in India as of July 1, 1970, compared with 70,713 in 1960.

Plea For At Least 13 Pct. Hike In Salaries For Faculty

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The state's top educators yesterday pleaded for "at least" a 13 per cent jump in college and university faculty salaries in 1971-72 and warned California would otherwise face loss of its best teachers and researchers.

President Charles J. Hitch of the University of California and Chancellor Glenn S. Dumke of the California State Colleges presented the cause before the Assembly Ways and Means Subcommittee on faculty salaries and fringe benefits.

The administrators warned the Assembly committee that if salary increases were not provided the University of California and the state colleges face the possibility of becoming second-class institutions.

Hitch, in his presentation, said the university "urgently requests" the committee to support the 13 per cent salary increase.

"This is the amount of increased compensation which is necessary to retain the distinguished faculty which has produced a state university of the first rank," he said.

"It is the amount necessary to enable the university to compete with other institutions in filling vacancies."

Hitch added that the increase was "needed to raise academic compensation to the level which existed 20 months ago, before the erosion of inflation reduced the purchasing power of these accomplished and deserving people."

Dumke presented a documented study of 102 comparable state colleges in other areas relating to salary increases for the academic salary group, salary increases for the support staff and improvement in fringe benefits of all state college personnel.

"This study showed that the California state colleges are currently lagging behind the median comparison institutions of this group," Dumke said.

"The average state college salary for 1970-71 is $13,714 — the projected average salary of the median institution for 1971-72 is $15,394. This is a lag of slightly less than 13 per cent."

Dumke said a log of six per cent in the amount of fringe benefits provided the California state college personnel.

Frost Coats Trees On French Riviera

PARIS (UPI) — Snowdrifts three feet high isolated 40 villages on the island of Corsica today and coated palm trees along France's normally mild Riviera coast.

Frazier Says Left Hook Will End It In Seventh

Champion Confident Of Win

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—The waiting has started for Joe Frazier.

The training for Frazier ended today with a little roadwork and light exercise as the final preparation for his $15 million showdown with Cassius Caly Monday night.

The 27-year-old champion concluded his boxing on Friday by sparring five rounds, running his total during the last six weeks to 207. After the workout his weight was 204 pounds and Frazier said he was satisfied.

At stake is $2.5 million per man, the heavyweight title, and a niche among boxing's immortals — Jack Johnson, Jack Dempsey and Joe Louis, but Frazier says he is "cool."

"It don't do any good to worry now," Frazier said. "I'm into this thing now, and he'll find out that he is too."

Win or lose, Frazier's manager, Yank Durham, continues to talk about retirement for the fighter.

"I'd love to see him retire," Durham said. "He's been in the game long enough. He sacrificed 12 years monkeying around the fight business. If he wants to retire I'd be happy but if he doesn't, I'll be with him for his next fight too."

As for Durham, who will get more than 15 per cent of Frazier's paycheck, the bout offers security for him to "slow down and not work so hard anymore."

"I'll leave some of the training to other men and just go by the gym two or three times a week," he said.

During his entire training Frazier worked no more than eight rounds any day, and Durham predicts a knockout in seven.

After his final workout, Frazier joked with the half dozen newsmen who were at hand for the workout.

"I think Clay's upset because he didn't think of giving a victory party after the fight like I did," said Frazier, "but I'll be there, and I'll sing too if I'm not messed up."

Frazier's first relaxation in six weeks will come after the bout when he can once again see his family. Although Frazier stayed in a motel right across from his Philadelphia home, he saw his wife and children only a few minutes each day during training.

"I don't see any reason for Frazier to be interrupted," Durham said. "If he had been fighting out of town, he wouldn't have been able to see his family at all and that's the way a man should train."

Frazier planned to go to New York and isolate himself in a hotel room from Saturday until the weigh-in on Monday. The two fighters will weigh in separately to avoid any confrontation and won't see each other until they step into the ring Monday night.

Then, Frazier believes, "it'll be all over in 10 rounds."

San Marin, Drake Novato Win In Season Openers

Somehow or other, San Marin High School of Novato and Sacred Heart High of San Francisco managed to play 10 innings of baseball yesterday in less than two and a half hours. And before the darkness could overtake the proceedings, Greg Mazeres scampered home on Marty Larsen's double in the bottom of the 10th to give San Marin a season opening, 1-0 victory over the Irish at Novato.

In other opening day, preseason games yesterday, Marin County Athletic League teams broke even. Drake defeated Hogan in Vallejo, 7-5, Novato edged Petaluma, 3-2 in Novato, and on the losing side, Tamalpais bowed to DeAnza of Cupertino, 4-1 in Mill Valley and Terra Linda lost to Napa, 3-2 at Albert Park in San Rafael.

Both San Marin and Sacred Heart showed mid-season form, at least on defense, as they battled evenly and quickly through the first nine innings. Evidence of that lies in the fact that only one error — by San Marin — was committed all game.

Mustang pitchers Lenny Hoffman, Jim Learch and Ken Siler combined to limit the city team to just two hits; Hoffman was particularly impressive, striking out seven in the five innings he worked.

The only run of the game came after Mazeres walked with one out. A base hit bunt down the third base line by Mickey McCooey moved him to second, and then Larsen unloaded his double to left.

Dennis Stanley saw four pitches and wrapped three hits including a double as Novato came from behind to edge Petaluma. The Hornets' catcher also scored the winning run in the fifth when he singled with two out and came all the way around on a base hit and error combination off the bat of Jeff DeRecat.

Dave Judnick pitched the first five innings for Novato, and Mike Lamb mopped up with two innings of outstanding work that featured six strikeouts. Together they limited the North Bay team to just four hits. Lamb, who started the sixth with the score tied, 2-2, was credited with the win.

Mark Shepherd's two run single in the top of the fifth broke a 3-3 tie and carried Drake to victory over Hogan in a game that was called after six innings because of darkness.

No one got more than one hit for the Pirates as coach Dick Creighton liberally substituted, getting a look at 20 players. The San Anselmo team got some aid from the enemy in the form of 10 walks, which it put to use in scoring three runs in the third inning and two each in the fifth and sixth.

Tamalpais put its only run on the board in the first inning and had a 1-1 tie going into the seventh against DeAnza. But the Dons erupted for 3 runs in that final inning to spoil the Mill Valley team's 1971 debut.

Clifford Hall was noteworthy for Tam with a pair of singles in two trips, and sophomore Tom Collins lashed a double. The Indians' pitching ace, Mike Johnson, went the first three innings, allowing no runs and striking out four.

Terra Linda, sparked by catcher-pitcher Jerry Seefeldt, came up with a pair of runs in the seventh and final inning, but they weren't enough to offset Napa's three run fourth which included a two run homer by Ed Essy.

Seefeldt collected all three Trojan hits, knocked in one run and scored the other. He had singles in the second and fifth innings, and a line drive double to the open spaces in the seventh which plated Larry Kerr. He came home moments later on a ground ball to the infield.

Marin Cats Drop Opener In Tourney

The Marin Catholic High School Wildcats, ahead by a pair of runs going into the last inning, saw their opening game of the San Carlos Invitational baseball tournament turn sour yesterday as Serra High of San Mateo came up with three tallies to defeat them, 5-4.

Wildcat pitcher Mickey Simmons, who thwarted the Padres through the first six innings, walked the first two men he saw in the seventh, and two successive relief pitchers could not stop the victorious rally.

The final surge by Serra equalled the Kentfield team's performance in the fifth inning, when second baseman Vince Bormolini singled home two runs and shortstop Steve Sherry chased Bormolini across with a double. That put the Wildcats up by two at 4-2.

Today the Wildcats continue in the tourney, meeting Hillsdale High at 11 a.m. and San Carlos at 2:30.

Terra Linda Swim Powerhouse Romps

In a meet that could well determine the Marin County Athletic League swim title, Terra Linda High School overwhelmed Redwood High, 61-34 in Larkspur yesterday, establishing the Trojans as a Northern California prep aquatic powerhouse.

Elsewhere around the league in opening-day meets, the San Rafael Bulldogs pounded Tamalpais 61-32, and San Marin defeated Drake, 54-40.

Terra Linda, in breezing to an unexpectedly easy victory over a talented Redwood squad, relied on double wins from sophomore Rick DeMont and Thom Guthrie, each of whom also anchored a relay team to victory.

The two Trojan specialists swept the freestyle events, DeMont covering the 200 and 400 yard distance in school record time. Guthrie won the 50 free race easily, and edged out Redwood's Brian Hennessy in the 100.

In the relays, Guthrie anchored a school record effort in the 200 medley and, DeMont led a decisive victory in the 400 free contest.

Redwood was able to muster only four first places against the Trojans, two of which were recorded by Junior Paul Cane, but in the words of Redwood Coach Bill Purcell, "We lost to a heckuva team."

San Rafael got double wins from Scott Dicker and Curtis Chinn in its win over the Tam Indians in Mill Valley.

San Marin, started off the 1971 season on a strong note, with a win over Drake at the Novato pool. Turning in a double win for the Mustangs was Jay Woods, while the Pirates got two freestyle victories out of Scott Bradley.

Boxer Vs. Slugger Fight: 'I'll Out Box Him' — Clay

By CHARLES E. TAYLOR

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—Says Muhammad Ali's trainer, Angelo Dundee: "The way to beat a slugger is to box him, and that's what we're gonna do."

Ali and Dundee view the Monday night battle in Madison Square Garden between former champ Ali-Cassius Clay and current champ Joe Frazier for the world heavyweight title as a match between an aggressive slugger and Ali with his fancy footwork and jabs.

"This won't be any flat-footed fight. There'll be a lot of footwork in it—in and out, in and out, pop, pop, pop," says Ali. "I'll be back pedalin' and throwin' rippin' punches."

Ali planned a final workout here today before flying to New York this evening to relax—maybe at a "hideout," he says—and wait for fight time.

Ali skipped sparring Friday but worked 17 rounds on the heavy bag and speed bag, shadow-boxing in the ring and skipping rope. He looked like he was working hard all the way and at the end he weighed 214 pounds. He says he plans to weigh 212 by Monday—"The same as for the first Liston fight."

He said his Friday training rounds were "swift rounds—so I can go that way for 15 if I have to. I don't know if it will go 15, but I'm always ready in case it does."

"I've never been this serious about a fight—I never worked this hard, never trained so hard," said Ali.

"The only way he's gonna win is a knockout—it's the only way," he said. "There's no way he can out-box me—it's impossible.

"And he's gonna have too much trouble catchin' me for a knockout."

Ali is the underdog in the fight, which he says is all right because it increases his desire to win. But he says he shouldn't be.

"I don't see how people can pick him to win," he said. "This is my style of fighter—a man who keeps coming at me."

"I've been tagged, I've been hit. But when you get hit you take two or three steps back and jab him. As long as Ellis was doing a little moving, he was hitting Frazier with everything. He just didn't have the strength and the stamina to keep moving and hit harder. I'll be a lot stronger than that when I come in."

CAL SLAUGHTERED

UCLA Gives Coach His 500th Victory

By United Press International

His team gave the Bruin cage coach win number 500 Friday night with one of its best showings of the year, a 103-69 slaughter of a hot California team.

The victory kept the Bruins atop the Pacific 8 standings with a 12-0 record with two games to go. Wooden's teams have dropped only 140 while winning those 500.

Curtis Rowe hit 11 of 17 shots and 23 points while front-court mates Sid Wicks and Steve Patterson had 21 each.

On Thursday, Wicks was named college player of the year by the Sporting News.

UCLA's eternal shadow, nationally third-rated USC, got a stiff battle from lowly Stanford before prevailing 83-74 with Mo Layton and Paul Westphal combining for 39 from the backcourt.

USC is also 23-1 and that win total equals the all-time Trojan record for the most wins. The Trojans are 11-1 in conference play.

The two Los Angeles powerhouses swap foes today, which means USC catches the tougher Cal team.

In the Northland, Oregon flattened Washington 101-76 with Stan Love and Larry Holliday hitting 24 apiece. Oregon state took care of Washington State 81-67 as Freddie Boyd and Neal Jurgenson teamed up for 35 points.

Brodie Official Champion

NEW YORK (UPI)—John Brodie, 35-year old quarterback of the San Francisco Forty Niners, was the No. 1 passer in the National Football League during the 1970 season, according to figures released Saturday.

The figures showed that Sonny Jurgensen of the Washington Redskins ranked second with Fran Tarkenton of the New York Giants third and Daryl Lamonica of the Oakland Raiders fourth. Lamonica was the American Conference leader.

The ratings are based on percent of completions, touchdown passes, per cent of interceptions and average yards gained.

Brodie, who had a 59.0 per cent completion mark, 24 touchdown passes, a 2.6 interception percentage and averaged 7.78 yards, was placed first with eight points. Jurgensen had 17 points, Tarkenton had 23 and Lamonica had 40 1-2.

Brodie was second in the league in percentage of completions, first in touchdown passes, had the lowest interception percentage and was fourth in average gain.

Craig Morton of the Dallas Cowboys, who ranked fifth in the point standings, and Don Horn of the Green Bay Packers, who did not qualify for the ratings because he did not throw at least 140 passes, shared the honor of throwing the longest touchdown pass of the season —89 yards. Morton and Bob Hayes collaborated for a touchdown against the Kansas City Chiefs on Oct. 25 and Horn and Carroll Dale combined against the Atlanta Falcons on Sept. 27.

The Forty Niners were both the league and National Conference team leaders, finishing first in three categories Raiders were the American Conference team leaders.

Milwaukee Sets Pro Cage Record

By United Press International

Larry Costello just may have been guilty of taking himself a bit too seriously Friday night.

In the giddy moment of triumph after the Milwaukee Bucks set the NBA record with their 19th straight victory, the Milwaukee coach said the victory was "the greatest personal achievement for me in coaching. You take an expansion team like we were and in only three years set a record—it's fantastic. It took New York 25 years to do the same thing."

But, of course, Costello didn't actually do it all by himself. He had the rather good fortune of having Lew Alcindor join his club after the Bucks' first season. If Milwaukee hadn't won the coin flip with Phoenix for the right to pick Alcindor two years ago, the Bucks' rise wouldn't have been so sudden.

And Lew, who scored 34 points in the Bucks' 108-95 victory over Detroit that broke the mark of 18 straight that New York set last year is one of the great winners in sports history. By his standards, 19 straight isn't much. His high school team won 71 straight and his college team won 47 straight.

If you throw out last year, Lew has played in 14 losing games in eight years—an average of less than two per year. He played in one losing game in his last three years of high school ball and two in four years of college play. The Bucks have lost just 11 this year with a 64-11 mark and can break the season record of 68-13 set by Philadelphia in 1967.

The Bucks were out to get the record and they almost blew Detroit off the court by grabbing a 23-6 lead and then coasting in the rest of the way.

In the other games, Philadelphia edged New York 121-117, Chicago routed San Francisco 130-103, Cincinnati topped Portland 117-111, Atlanta beat Los Angeles 105-104 and Seattle edged San Diego 111-110.

Spencer Haywood scored 25 points, 13 in the fourth period, as Seattle outlasted San Diego in the second game of a doubleheader at San Diego. In the first game, Bob Love scored 44 points as Chicago downed San Francisco.

Billy Cunningham scored 34 points and grabbed 16 rebounds as Philadelphia beat New York and snapped the Knicks' four-game winning streak.

Tom Van Arsdale scored 30 points as Cincinnati blew a 21 point lead but held on to down Portland. Geoff Petrie had 25 for the losers.

Jerry Chambers sank two free throws with eight seconds left to give Atlanta the victory over Los Angeles.

MAJOR LEAGUE TRAINING

Atlanta Displays Power In Exhibition Openers

By Gary Kale
UPI Sports Writer

Sonny Jackson was asked to report early to the Atlanta Braves training camp to acquaint himself with a new centerfield position, but used the extra time to strengthen his hitting.

Jackson, converted into an outfielder after five major league seasons as a shortstop, was told he'd have to produce to keep his new job. He did.

The speedy Jackson walloped a long triple Friday to drive in two runs during a seventh inning rally and give Atlanta a 4-2 victory over the Montreal Expos in the 1971 opener of the baseball exhibition season.

"I think Jackson is going to like it out there," said manager Lum Harris. "Unbelievable as it may sound, he has a stronger arm as an outfielder than as a shortstop."

Atlanta, a disappointment last year after winning the National League's Western Division title in 1969, received further evidence of power when Earl Williams brought in the other two Braves runs with a double and Ralph Garr collected four hits.

Bobby Mitchell drove in the deciding run with a fourth inning double as the New York Yankees beat the Washington Senators, 6-1, on a combined two-hitter by Stan Bahnsen, Bill Burbach and Ron Klimkowski.

Vida Blue, Chris Fothe and Art Boyd hurled a three-hit shutout in Oakland's 2-0 triumph over San Diego. Joe Rudi's run-scoring single in the sixth inning broke up a scoreless game.

Rookie southpaw Hal McClain walked in the winning run in the seventh after errors by infielders Bill Melton and Lee Richards permitted Pittsburgh's first unearned run and the Pirates went on to edge the Chicago White Sox, 2-1. Jay Johnstone tripled and scored Chicago's run in the first inning.

In today's Grapefruit League openers, Steve Carlton starts for the St. Louis Cardinals against the New York Mets. Carlton is only one of five members remaining from the club's 1967-68 pennant winning teams. Others are Lou Brock, Dal Maxvill, Bob Gibson and Julian Javier.

Minnesota has three faces missing from the twins' 1970 American League Western Division champs as the club opens its exhibition season against Detroit today. Pitcher Ron Perranoski and outfielders Tony Oliva and Cesar Tovar are still listed as holdouts. Perranoski is asking $65,000, Tovar wants $80,000 and Oliva is gunning for $100,000.

The Philadelphia Phillies automatically renewed the contracts of infielders Tony Taylor and Don Money and outfielder John Briggs when they failed to sign by the specified date in the uniform player contract.

Slugfest As Giants Rip Cubs

TUCSON (UPI) —The Giants may wish they could save some of the 18 hits they clubbed against the Chicago Cubs in their exhibition season.

The hitting barrage came off an assortment of Cubs rookie pitchers Friday as San Francisco breezed to a 9-4 victory.

Bobby Bonds wasted no time in getting things started when he led off the first inning with a homer over the rightfield fence.

Willie Mays began his 20th exhibition season with a hit, a Texas League blooper into centerfield.

San Francisco continues the pre-season schedule today with a contest against Cleveland in Scottsdale.

Three-Ball Rule Gets First Test

Mesa, Ariz. (UPI) — There won't be any 3-2 counts today when the Oakland Athletics meet the Milwaukee Brewers in an exhibition baseball game.

The reason: the A's will be using a three-ball walk rule in all their home pre-season games.

A's owner Charlie Finley had installed the three-ball rule in his intra-squad games, causing quite a furor with his pitchers.

The A's announced Friday that commissioner Bowie Kuhn and American League President Joe Cronin have approved a request to use the rule, but only at home exhibition contests.

The A's got a three-hit performance in their Cactus League opener Friday from Vida Blue and rookies Chris Flothe and Arthur Boyd to take a 2-0 win over San Diego.

Joltin' Joe Named To Network Post

NEW YORK (UPI) — Every so often Joe DiMaggio pops up in the news again and the reason is, he just can't stay idle.

DiMaggio broke another of his retirements Friday when it was announced he had joined the Hughes sports network as vice president assigned to public relations.

The 56-year-old former New York Yankee outfielder and a member of baseball's hall of fame has signed a one-year contract and will travel around the country appearing at various sports events for the network.

Hughes' president Dick Bailey expressed elation at adding DiMaggio, a three-time winner of the American League most valuable player award, to the Hughes family.

"Joe is one of the best-liked athletes and most respected sports figures around, and we feel he will add great prestige to our company in addition to being a great morale booster for us."

Bailey added, "It's true Joe is only under a one-year contract, but we sincerely hope it will be extended for many years beyond that."

DiMaggio, who retired in 1951 and was elected to the hall of fame in 1955, worked as a batting instructor for the Yankees in spring training for six years before serving as special assistant for the Oakland Athletics the past three years.

In addition to being selected for the hall of fame, DiMaggio also was named by baseball as its all-time centerfielder. Dubbed "The Yankee Clipper," he won American League batting titles in 1939 (.389) and 1940 (.352) and compiled a lifetime batting average of .325.

DiMaggio's greatest feat, however, occurred in 1941 when he hit safely in 56 straight games — still a major league record.

A native of San Francisco, DiMaggio continues to maintain a restaurant there in addition to other business interests.

AN UNSPECTACULAR ROUND

Conservative Dickinson Leads Doral Open Golf

Dickinson fired an unspectacular two-under par 70 Friday for a one-shot, second round lead in the $150,000 Doral-Eastern Open golf tournament with a 138 over Gibby Gilbert, Bruce Fleisher and Ted Hayes.

"My gambles are usually all at the wrong time," Dickinson said.

He said he took a bogey five on the 18th hole on the "blue monster" course—rated the toughest finishing hole in golf — by playing it safe.

Avoiding the water on the lert of the fairway, he drove intentionally into the right rough. He then laid up short with an eight iron, avoiding water in front of the green, but then he two-putted for the bogey. His respect for the hole was not diminished.

Dickinson said he is working harder on his game this year after a disappointing performance in 1970, winning only $28,000. He said he was practicing putting so much, "I'm putting all the greens below sea level."

Dickinson, whose last win was the 1969 Colonial Invitational, also said a whippier driver has given him 30 yards more off the tee and a lighter putter was making him bolder on the greens.

Two other veterans more accustomed to the lead than Dickinson came back after disappointing opening rounds on Thursday. PGA champion Jack Nicklaus charged back into the picture with a four-under par 68 for a 142, and Arnold Palmer fired a respectable even par 72, just making the cut at 147.

Nicklaus admitted he didn't expect to play that well, but as it did in the PGA Championship last weekend, his putter bailed him out. He holed birdie putts of 22, 35 and 30 feet.

Fleisher shot a sparkling 67 Friday, and Hayes and Gilbert shot 70s.

Fleisher's round was perhaps the most surprising of the tournament. The 22-year-old former U. S. Amateur champion who lives in an apartment on one of the Doral's courses, failed to qualify for the tour last fall and played on the invitation of tournament officials.

Bunched behind the trio of runnersup at 140 were Doug Sanders who shot a 69, Dave Stockton also with a 69 and J.C. Snead with a 70.

The two hottest rounds were 65s by DeWitt Weaver and Miller Barber, lodging them in a five-way logjam at 141.

This is the sixth time Detroit has hosted the tournament, now in its 68th year.

SPORTS SHORTS

Campaneris Finally Signs

YUMA, ARIZ. (UPI) — The Oakland A's announced Friday the signing of shortstop Campy Campaneris for $56,000, thus bringing the entire squad under contract for 1971. Campaneris is expected to arrive in camp from his Missouri home over the weekend.

Football

NEW YORK (UPI)—Ed Biles, former defensive backfield coach for the New Orleans Saints, has been added to the New York Jets coaching staff, if was announced Friday by head coach Weeb Ewbank.

Biles will also serve as a talent scout in addition to his coaching duties.

WORCESTER, MASS. (UPI)—Ed Doherty, former head football coach at Arizona State, Arizona, Xavier (Ohio) and Rhode Island, Friday was named head coach at Holy Cross College. He was given a multi-year contract.

CLEVELAND (UPI)—Cincinnati Bengals quarterback Greg Cook, who missed last season because of an injured arm, will have some 12 weeks of recuperation and rehabilitation on that arm, and may get to play football this season.

Cook, the American Football League's rookie of the year in 1969, underwent surgery in Cleveland Clinic here Friday for a "deep tear in the shoulder muscle".

Dr. Royer Collins said he was satisfied with the operation and felt certain Cook would be ready for the Bengals' summer training camp at Wilberforce College in mid-July.

Bowling

Some 32,000 bowlers from all 50 states, Japan, Venezuela, Bermuda, Puerto Rico and Canada are secheduled to compete during the 79-day run with more than $750,000 at stake.

Warriors Get Big Assist

OAKLAND (UPI)—The San Francisco Warriors owe the Seattle Sonics a drink today, but they haven't got time to pay their debt.

The Sonics whipped the San Diego Rockets, 111-110, Friday night, leaving the Warriors, who are in second place in the NBA Pacific Division, three games ahead of the Rockets with only eight games to play.

If San Francisco can hold down that second place spot, Coach Al Attles will have his team in the playoffs.

The Warriors had been walloped by Chicago, 130-103, in the first game of a doubleheader Friday night in San Diego. But they weren't able to stay around to watch the Sonics give them a helping hand since they meet Baltimore tonight in the Oakland Coliseum arena in the second game of another doubleheader starting at 6:30 o'clock.

San Diego will play Chicago in the first game.

Jerry Lucas, who dropped in 21 points, and Jeff Mullins, who scored 18, led the Warriors against the Bulls, who are real hot.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, March 6, the 65th day of 1971 with 300 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase. The morning stars are Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Mercury. The evening star is Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1836 Mexican forces captured the Alamo at San Antonio, Tex., killing the last of 187 Americans who had held out for 13 days.

In 1857 the U.S. Supreme Court handed down its landmark Dred Scott Decision. It ruled that Scott, a Negro slave, could not sue for his freedom in a federal court.

In 1964 King Paul of Greece died at the age of 62 and was succeeded by his son, Prince Constantine. Three years later, Constantine was sent into exile by a military regime.

In 1968 long time Congressman Joseph Martin, former speaker of the House, died at 83.

A thought for the day: Elizabeth Barrett Browning said: "If thou must love me, let it be for nought except for love's sake only."

Alcoholism Slighted, Expert Declares

NEW YORK (UPI)—Only a small fraction of what can be done about alcoholism in the United States is being accomplished, says Dr. Luther Cloud, president of the National Council on Alcoholism.

"Abuse of hard drugs and marijuana has nowhere reached the proportions of alcoholism, yet concern for alcoholism is far less than for narcotics addiction," he says.

Most Students Reach Four Hearts, But Then Doomed

"Most of our advanced students get to four hearts on this kind of hand," Henry Bethe told me recently when I dropped in to kibitz a teaching session at New York's famous Card School. "How many of them make their contract?" I asked, forgetting that guests shouldn't ask awkward questions.

Opening lead — ♠ K

King Of Spades

West opens the king of spades, and East plays the discouraging deuce. West shifts to the jack of clubs, covered by the king and ace. East returns a club, and South wins with the queen.

The average student draws trumps, using up all of his own trumps in the process. He then tries the diamond finesse, winning with dummy's queen. But how does he repeat this finesse?

Declarer cannot get to his hand, so must lead dummy's ace of diamonds in the hope that the king will fall. It doesn't, and South is lucky if he goes down only two tricks.

EARLY START

South must start the diamonds earlier. On winning the queen of clubs, South should try the diamond finesse before drawing trumps.

When the finesse succeeds, South can afford to draw trumps. Then he repeats the diamond finesse, cashes the ace of diamonds and runs the rest of the diamonds to make his contract with an overtrick. The defenders can stop the overtrick by cashing the ace of spades, but they cannot defeat the contract if South is clever enough to work on his side suit before he draws trumps.

BASIC RULE

The basic rule is very simple: Set up your side suit before you draw trumps. But a player good enough to follow this rule is more than just a student: he is practically in the expert class.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one space.

You have 12 points in high cards and one point for the doubleton, enough for an optional opening bid. You should exercise your option to bid because of the high-card structure and the strong major suit.

30 Days' Jail For Petty Theft

Steven Joseph O'Brien, 21, of San Rafael, has been sentenced to 30 days in Marin County Jail by Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court.

O'Brien pleaded guilty to a petty theft charge last month.

He was originally charged with possession of stolen property and possession of marijuana, but the first charge was reduced and the marijuana charge dismissed for lack of evidence.

O'Brien was arrested Dec. 30 when Sausalito police stopped his car for a loud muffler. Police said they found marijuana and stereo tapes which were allegedly stolen in San Rafael.

AMBITIOUS PROJECT — With infinite patience, Romeo Katexac delicately fashions a tiny ivory animal which will be used in an Alaskan sculpture he is planning. When completed the work will feature a hunting scene, complete with dogsled, driver, polar bears and rabbits racing along a large walrus tusk.

Eskimo Art In Sausalito

For more than 1,000 years the Eskimos who inhabit remote King Island in the Bering Sea have carved tools and artifacts from ivory and turned animal skins into clothing.

Three Kings Island Eskimos are in Sausalito for the next two weeks, demonstrating the ancient crafts which have been passed on to them, relatively unchanged, from antiquity.

The three, Paul and Cecilia Nattanguk and Romeo Katexac, can be seen daily at the Scrimshaw, 759 Bridgeway. While the men carve diamond-hard walrus tusk into unique statues and such useful items as cribbage boards, Mrs. Nattanguk sews rabbit and seal fur into moccasins and other kinds of wearing apparel.

All the craftsmen use the same tools Eskimo artisans have used for centuries, although the blades are metal now, where once they were stone.

"Sealskin Charlie" McAlprin, a young American turned Arctic trader who brought the trio to Sausalito after a month's stay in Hawaii said the old arts are becoming obsolete even in Alaska, as the state industrializes the Eskimo artists move to cities and towns.

The trip to the states was the first trip out of Alaska for the Nattanguks and Katexac. They came, according to McAlprin, because it seemed like a pleasant change from the frigid Alaska winter.

After Sausalito, which the trader noticed on a previous trip to California and decided to return to for a visit, the craftsmen will go back to Nome where they have lived for three years since moving from the island which lies halfway between Alaska and Siberia.

In Nome, they make the art objects and clothing for a living. McAlprin, who moved to Alaska six years ago from Colorado, travels all over the remote areas of the state, buying arts and craftwork from Eskimos in fishing camps and tiny villages.

He met the trio about five years ago and because he was impressed by the quality of their work ("It is the finest of its kind I've seen"), invited them to go into business with him.

Most of the carvings and fur clothing are sold to gift stores throughout Alaska.

DRILLING — Paul Nattanguk skillfully operates a primitive bow drill which can put its modern electric counterparts to shame in carving holes in even the hardest substances. As he works, the bow saws back and forth in rapid fashion, the bit turns, the wood smokes from the friction and the drilling is completed in seconds.

WHO NEEDS SCISSORS? — Cecilia Nattanguk slices a fur used in slipper-making with the same kind of tool her ancestors on Kings Island have used for a thousand years. Originally, the blade was hewn from stone. With progress, it became metal, but the tool's design remained the same.

VOLUNTEER AMBULANCE DRIVERS

Three ministers in the Reading, Pa., area are serving as volunteer ambulance drivers after learning there weren't enough volunteers in the daytime to man the Borough of Birdsboro's two ambulances. The three, who are referred to as "holy rollers" are (from left) Rev. C. David Godshall, pastor of St. Mark's Lutheran Church; Rev. Allen R.Beistline (reflected in the rearview mirror), pastor of Christ United Methodist Church, and Rev. James A. Killian, pastor of Christ United Methodist Church, and Rev. James A. Killian, pastor of St. Paul's United Church of Christ.

NEW LOOK IN SERVICES

Happiness Breaks Through

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

When young people complain that church services are boring, they are merely saying out loud what a great many adults have always thought.

The plain truth, to which any veteran churchgoer can attest, is that worship all too often is as dull, dreary, formalized and uninspiring a routine as one is likely to encounter in modern society.

It got that way because of a notion widely held among our Puritan ancestors and still fairly prevalent in churches that worshipping God is a grave duty to be undertaken at the proper times and places with the utmost solemnity.

This grim approach to piety finds no warrant in the New Testament. To Jesus Christ, worship was a joyous business, a way of celebrating the good news that God is and God cares.

WAKING UP

Fortunately, and not a moment too soon, churches are beginning to wake up to the fact that worship is supposed to be a shared happiness, not a penance.

The Roman Catholic Church has extensively revised its liturgy in the past five years. Many of the major Protestant bodies—including Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Lutherans and Methodists—are in the process of overhauling their accustomed rites.

All these efforts at liturgical renewal have several things in common. They are designed to draw the congregation into active participation rather than passive spectatorship. They emphasize community—the fact that worship is the corporate act of a body of people who are supposed to be united to each other by strong bonds of love and understanding. They provide for a degree of variety, so that every service need not be a carbon copy of what was done the week before.

NE LITURGIES

But the most profound and far-reaching change involved in the new liturgies is a rediscovery of joy and thanksgiving as the authentic notes of Christian worship.

The New Worship book of the United Presbyterian Church, for example, suggests this prayer to be said at the beginning of a service:

"God of grace: You have given us minds to know you, hearts to love you, and voices to sing your praise. Fill us with Holy Spirit, so we may celebrate your glory, and truly worship you."

At another point in the service, the minister says—and if he has any feeling for the line, he'll say it with an exultant shout:

And the congregation responds in unison:

"In Jesus Christ we are forgiven."

The spirit of joyous celebration is spreading from the words to the music of public worship. Pastors are learning that the entire mood of a service can be altered simply by choosing hymns that are joyous and triumphant rather than dolorous. In some churches, musical experimentation has gone much further. Washington's famed Episcopal Cathedral, for example, now conducts—each Sunday morning a "guitar mass" in which young musicians celebrate the mysteries of life with a hard-driving rock tempo.

Even dancing, which the Puritans regarded as an invention of the Devil, is coming back into sanctuary where—as the Old Testament clearly records—it originated as an expression of joyous gratitude to God.

Other forms of physical activity which permit worshippers to move around instead of sitting rooted to the pew are being utilized to add a little life to services. Many churches now include in each service the ancient ritual of "passing the peace" in which every person embraces the one next to him and says, "May the peace of God be always with you."

Some churches have processionals in which not only the choir and minister but all members of the congregation get up and march about the aisles bearing colorful banners. This writer's all-time favorite banner, which sums up the whole spirit of the new approach to worship, was carried by a very small boy in a Christmas eve procession. It said:

"Hooray for God."

Some church members who are no longer young in spirit or body look askance at such innovations. But young people—and a surprisingly large number of old people—are responding enthusiastically.

However novel they may seem to those who have grown accustomed to stodginess in worship, none of these things are really new. They are rather a return to the Biblical view expressed by the psalmist who described worship as "making a joyful noise unto the Lord."

Church Leader To Deliver Sermons

Rev. Wesley Nelson, director of evangelism for the Evangelical Covenant Church of America, will speak on "God Is On Your Side," at the 9:30 a.m. worship service tomorrow of the Marin Covenant Church.

Following the service Nelson will lead a discussion at the 10:45 a.m. adult class.

Nelson will also speak at 6 p.m. tomorrow on "What Is The Purpose of the Church Today?" The service will include celebration of communion and introduction of 10 new members.

The visitor is also instructor of evangelism and church strategy at North Park Theological Seminary in Chicago.

Nelson is in Marin this weekend, along with other representatives of the Evangelism Committee of the California Covenant Conference for a pilot workshop with adults of the Marin church on the subject of "community outreach."

Student Dialogue Postponed

CHICAGO (LC) — The seven-member council of the Lutheran Student Movement has decided to postpone plans for a joint study conference with Roman Catholic students this summer.

Joint planning which had been initiated with the Roman Catholics was interrupted by illness, a spokesman explained, and the period of time remaining was considered too brief for the work still to be done.

After voting to postpone the joint conference, the council approved plans for a week-long LSM assembly which will focus on the relationship of faith and hope to the questions and needs and insecurities of the age.

The council chose "Survival-Revival" as the assembly theme and Aug. 16-21 as the assembly dates. A site in the midwest is still to be selected.

The proposal for a joint study conference with the Roman Catholic students was made last summer at a week-long study conference and general assembly of the LSM at Holden Village, Wash.

The first joint conference was held two years ago at Boulder, Colo., and was undertaken with the Catholics' National Newman Apostolate.

LSM encompasses students from America's three major Lutheran churches — the American Lutheran Church, the Lutheran Church in America, and the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod. Gamma Delta encompasses students primarily from the LCMS.

Designed for adults the sessions, an annual event, will conclude March 31. All sessions will be held in the church's Canoles Hall.

Rood's topic will be "How Drama Means" and he will illustrate his theme with dramatic readings.

Marjorie L. Casebier, a leader of the dormant San Anselmo Festival Theater, who inaugurated the collegium this past Wednesday, will speak on March 17 with her topic being "Fantasy Voyage Into Inner Space."

Swiss-born muralist and sculptor Lucienne Bloch Dimitroff, daughter of composer Ernest Bloch, will lead the March 24 program, speaking on "Religion in Art: Art in Religion."

The concluding session will be in the form of a hymn fest: "An Evening With Byron Jones and Father."

Collectively the duo has 70 years of singing experience between them. The younger Jones, a leading baritone in the Bay Area, serves as choral director for the San Rafael City Schools and director of music at the church.

Lutherans, Catholics Hold Papacy Discussion

MIAMI (LC) —An exploratory examination of the papacy from historical and theological perspectives marked the opening of the seventh year of doctrinal discussions between Lutheran and Roman Catholic theologians.

Held recently St. John Vianney Minor Seminary, the semiannual session was the 12th in a series initiated in mid-1965 under the joint auspices of the USA National Committee of the Lutheran World Federation and the US Bishops' Committee for Ecumenical and Interreligious Affairs.

Nineteen churchmen — eight Lutherans and 11 Catholics — considered "The Papacy as Expression of the Teaching Ministry of the Church" as a sub-topic to the overall theme, "The Teaching Ministry of the Church."

Participants in the talks emphasized that the authority of scripture, tradition, creeds, confessions, bishops, and councils are also integral parts of the Church's teaching ministry and that this relationship will emerge more clearly by first discussing the papal office.

Fifteen essays on various aspects of the papacy — regarded as the chief problem of polity between the two communions — were discussed by the scholars as background material to in-depth studies of the main theme at future sessions.

No Place Yet For April Sports Gala

With its planned sports gala less then two months away, a San Anselmo Explorer troop still is without a place to hold the event.

Explorer Troop 15 had hoped to hold a large sports show at the Civic Center from April 29-May 3, but the county ruled out the event, expected to draw large crowds, because of traffic control and security problems.

Troop members, however, charged the county reneged on a promise to allow the event after twice telling the Explorers there was no objection.

With the understanding it had county approval to hold the show outside the Veterans Memorial Auditorium, the troop said, members went ahead and sold $68,000 worth of space to sporting goods manufacturers and stores for exhibits at the site.

Since the county rejected the show, the troop has looked for a new site to no avail, even enlisting the help of Marin legislators in Sacramento.

With the revenue from exhibitors, the troop plans to defray expenses, contribute a sum to the Boy Scouts of America and finance a trip to Europe as representatives of the Boy Scouts of America to put on a mountain climbing exhibition.

The young men have been taught mountain climbing by their scoutmaster, Cal Albert, and are to demonstrate their skills at next month's sports show, if it is held.

Thirty-six youths are in the troop, ranging in age from 14-21.

Medical School Bans Sale Of Cigarettes

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI)—The University of Michigan Medical Center has kicked the habit and pulled out the last of its cigarette machines.

The Medical Center administration agreed to the cigarette sales ban on recommendation of a committee of doctors. Informal polls of the medical staff and hospital employes supported the move.

Carport Appeal Wins Variance

A Tiburon woman who built a carport at 698 Hawthorne Drive without city permission will not have to tear the structure down after all, the Tiburon City Council has decided.

Lucille D. Spangler, was told by the board of adjustments on Jan. 19 that her carport, constructed without a building permit had to be demolished.

In an appeal to the city council Feb. 22, Miss Spangler presented a petition bearing the names of 103 neighbors saying they didn't object to the carport.

Councilmen agreed, and unanimously granted her a building permit and a variance, necessary because the carport was built to the side property line where an eight-foot setback is required by city code.

Canoeing Instructor Course Scheduled

Persons with a basic canoeing certificate are eligible to take a canoeing instructor's course to be sponsored by the Marin Chapter of the American Red Cross March 13, 20 and 27.

Classes will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Corte Madera Creek opposite the Corte Madera Corporation Yard on Lucky Drive.

Students also must be at least 17 years of age. Ann Dwyer will be instructor-trainer.

Wrong Credit

Bad Check Suspect Booked

A 27-year-old Mill Valley woman has been booked into Marin County Jail on suspicion of passing worthless checks after she was arrested in a Mill Valley beauty salon while attempting to buy a wig, police reported.

Officers said Bonnie Lee Johnson, of 206 Miller Avenue, was arrested about 8 p.m. Thursday in Eileen's Salon, 316 Miller Avenue, after she attempted to pay for the hairpiece by check and an employee notified police. Officers said Miss Johnson was being held for investigation of passing several bad checks worth more than $300 to firms in Mill Valley, San Rafael and Sausalito.

IN THE STUDY of his home at 23 Park Circle, Marin City, Rev. Fred C. Small, at left, reads and prepares a message for his congregation. And, at right, from his pulpit in the Marin City Church of God, he delivers the sermon. He has been assistant pastor and then pastor of the church since 1960, after experiencing a call from the Lord in 1957 that he says "completely revolutionized my life."

Fred Small: 'Revolutionary For God'

Profile Of A Marinite

By GEORGE NEVIN

It's doubtful that many of Marin's commuters find the twice-daily drive along Highway 101 very inspiring.

But Rev. Fred C. Small, pastor of the Marin City Church of God, can't travel the highway without being reminded of a day in 1957 when he was struck by an inspiration so strong that it changed his life.

The experience marked a turning point in his life — of that Reverend Small is certain. As he tells it:

"I had been thirsting for a life in God, seeking the deeper experience I'd been reading about in the Bible, a complete surrendering of myself to the Lord."

"AFTER MUCH prayer and fasting, it came to me as I was driving on the freeway. The Lord poured so much heaven into my soul that I could hardly contain myself, but I didn't lose control. I drove home and went into the study and enjoyed the presence of the Lord."

"That experience," said Reverend Small, with a quick smile, "revolutionized my life. And I've been a revolutionary ever since."

Like most profound experiences, Reverend Small's enlightenment didn't happen overnight. He had been working toward it — though he wasn't aware of the fact — for years."

THE CHAIN of events that led to his spiritual experience, which in turn led to his becoming pastor of the Church of God and Marin City's best-known religious figure, can be traced to his service in the Air Force during the Korean war.

"I had a good friend — a drinking buddy — in Korea," he said during an interview in his office at the church. "We both were transferred from Korea and lost track of each other, but I found him again when I was sent to Hamilton Air Force Base just before my discharge."

The friend had taken up residence in Marin City and had been converted to the Church of God, and he couldn't wait to get Fred Small into the congregation.

"AT FIRST, I refused to go to a service," said Reverend Small, his eyes twinkling, "but he persisted and finally, just to get him off my back, I agreed."

Reverend Small found he liked the informal, friendly church, and went back a second time and then a third.

"I heard it was possible for a man to become a new creature and I was so intrigued that I wanted to try it for myself. And lo and behold, it worked!"

As he tells it, he went to the altar, asked God for forgiveness and then went back and led his wife to the altar with him.

"FROM THAT day in 1954 we've had nothing but peace and continued spiritual growth," said the minister.

But acceptance of God is a long way from accepting a call to the ministry, as Fred Small soon learned. After his vision on the freeway he began studying under local tutors and ministers, and then went to San Francisco Bible College. After a few correspondence courses, he was made assistant pastor of the Marin City church in 1960 and then became its leader when the pastor moved out of town.

Reverend Small believes he was fortunate to hear his calling to the ministry so clearly. Many people miss their calling and wind up in areas of the spiritual world for which they have no talent, he believes.

LIKE ANY pursuit, being a minister takes a certain amount of talent. "A good cook doesn't learn to cook in school if he has no talent for cooking in the first place," he said, "and a preacher is a preacher before he's called."

After he was called, the rest was easy, Reverend Small said: "The spirit permeated me, and I began preaching."

Reverend Small's ideas on the purpose of life and theology center around the notion that all men have one purpose in life: to glorify God.

"Nobody is here accidentally," he said, "but we all have a purpose for our existence. Every man is a vessel, a channel whereby God reveals himself on earth."

MAN, HE believes, is a servant, not a robot, and was made of earth but inspired by heaven. "He has citizenship in both places," Small declares.

God's master plan doesn't require everyone to be preachers like himself, Reverend Small thinks. "Every man is different but his differences are the product of the total plan to manifest all of the attributes of a great God to a great body of people. Every talent is needed."

Much of Reverend Small's work since becoming pastor of the Marin City Church of God has been in organizing and running what he calls the Triple I-C, or Interdenominational Interracial, Involved in Christ

"What Ate Holes In My Son's Sweater?"

It appears that your son wore his sweater while working around the car or in a laboratory where it came in contact with sulfuric acid. The concentration was sufficient to weaken the wool fibers, resulting in the holes you found. Similar damage may occur from hydrochloric acid also found in laboratories and used, too, in cleaning bricks and metals. Neither of these acids is used in any part of a drycleaning plant.

These holes are common in garments of "do-it-yourself-ers." It's well to have such a person around the house, however, he should be careful to wear old clothing when handling storage or automobile batteries or laboratory chemicals.

Crusade.

THE CRUSADE began in 1969 with a tent meeting in Marin City, was moved to Corte Madera Center in 1970 and will be held in Marin City again in 1971.

"The name tells what we're tyring to do," says Reverend Small. "This isn't just for one or two ethnic groups or religious sects. We want people from all backgrounds and religious persuasions to worship with us."

Through the Tiple I-C crusades, which have drawn thousands of worshippers, Reverend Small hopes to prove that "God is not a God of monotony. He made flowers of different hues, hills of different heights, oceans of vast dimensions and people of different colors, but all with one purpose: that God and humanity may be one. And that's my purpose, too."

DESPITE Reverend Small's optimism for the success of his work, he can't help but feel that the world has a long way to go to attain peace and brotherhood.

"We're trying to shift gears in a society that has a great talent for sliding backwards. We're going in the opposite direction from what we should be going; we're closer to war than peace," said the 40-year-old minister.

Men must use their God-given abilities, he said, "to lead the world to peace and brotherhood."

Reverend Small disputes the myth, as he sees it, that Christianity is a doleful religion that precludes its followers from having fun.

"I'VE NEVER had so much fun in all my life as when I found Christ," he says. "But before I was converted I tried to have fun, but couldn't. I did everything — I sang, danced, chased women, tried to drink my troubles away. None of it worked."

Reverend Small believes most people have their priorities reversed when it comes to expecting things out of life. "Christ said to seek first the Kingdom of Heaven and all these things will be added unto you," he points out.

"The tragedy of most people is that they seek pleasure first and God second. That's when we get the illusion that if we have God we can't have pleasure. This is not true."

IF PEOPLE would "seek eternal security before they seek material and physical security, they wouldn't lack for anything," he believes.

Reverend Small doesn't consider himself a religious person — "Religion is like a rocking chair; it gives you plenty to do but gets you nowhere" — but a geuine "born-again child of God who's found his place."

Unhappiness, he believes, is a result of not being in the proper place in life. "People ought to be miserable and unhappy when they're not in their slot," he says. "In the Lord we get all we want and want all we get, but we have no excesses and we have no want."

UNDER REVEREND Small's direction the Church of God has grown from a small congregation without a permanent home to a church of some 60 families.

The church used to meet in an old cleaning shop, and then in a room at the recreation center," he says. "But when most of our furniture got ruined by leaking water and by rats, we decided to look for a permanent home."

A building program was successful in raising enough funds to buy a plot of land at Drake Avenue and Bucklew Street, and the church was able to borrow to build the sanctuary. It was complete in 1965.

IN HIS NEW building Reverend Small has attempted to fashion a truly nondenominational, interracial church. "This isn't a black or white church, but God's church," he says — "a place where all people are invited to share."

The Church of God, Reverend Small reports, has "a beautiful relationship with a number of churches in Marin County. Members of these churches come to visit us a lot, and every Sunday we have a goodly number of persons of varied religious and ethnic backgrounds."

He emphasizes that "the spiritual atmosphere here is not one of wild emotionalism. We try to make people with varying modes of worship comfortable to be here with us."

THE ATTEMPT at the Church of God, he says, is "not to try to hammer people into a certain mold but to challenge them spiritually and encourage their souls to grow — and all of this without fanaticism."

While Reverend Small admits that his official title is pastor of the Church of God of Marin City, he actually considers himself "pastor of Marin County."

"Anywhere there's a need, I'm there. The whole county is my parish."

Master Chef At The House Of Cannelloni

Bill Bisson Caters To The Demand For Haute Cuisine

If you think of the typical master chef as being short and rotund, temperamental and European, you're in for a big surprise when you first meet Bill Bisson.

At six feet two inches tall, Bill weighs in at 207 pounds of mostly bone and muscle. He loves fun and people. And he was born right here in California in —of all places — Angels Camp!

But if his attributes and origin are atypical, Bill Bisson's credentials as a master of haute cuisine are impeccable. His Medallions of Beef a la Bisson, Lasagne Verde de la Casa, Capon Flambe, Steak Diane, Cannelloni and Crepes Suzettes are justia few of the culinary creations that have endeared Bill to the Bay Area's most finicky gourmets.

AS A MATTER of fact, Bill's Crepes Suzettes received nationwide publicity as early as 1952 when they were featured in "The Sullivan Slant," a column then appearing in newspapers throughout the country. Here's what columnist Sullivan had to say:

"Then there's a place on Pacific Avenue in San Francisco called Paris Louvre, 'The House of Crepes Suzettes,' where you couldn't get a bad meal to save your life. Everything is perfect . . . but it's the Crepes Suzettes that make the customers talk to themselves.

"There's a guy who must be about six-feet-six all dressed up in a tall white chef's hat, and he devotes practically all of his time to whipping up those wonderful little pancakes. He assembles all of the ingredients in a saucepan right at your table, then the lights are doused and the mixture is set afire, and the crepes ladled with the flaming elixir. Heavenly!

" . . . Yes, Bill Bisson knows the restaurant business from all angles. He could make a pretty good living in any phase of it. But Bill is smart enough to let his competitors take care of the run-of-the-mill trade while he capitalizes on his individual specialty.

"If that sort of approach works so successfully with Crepes Suzettes, it might be interesting to speculate upon other applications, don't you think?"

IF COLUMNIST Sullivan added a few inches to the "white-hatted giant's" actual height, he also omitted one highlight of Bill's career —his war years with the U.S. Merchant Marine — in which, as a chief commissary steward, he supervised the loading, storage, menus and preparation of food on ships leaving San Francisco for the war zones.

After the war — and for the two years prior to his move to the Paris Louvre — Bisson was at the Palace Hotel in San Francisco. Working under the famous Adolph Bach at the Palace was to Bill one of his most rewarding experiences in the fine art of preparing and serving food.

Bill's Paris Louvre era ended in 1959 when he and his partner, Adolph Motta, sold the restaurant. But the two men joined forces again in 1955 to purchase the West End Villa at Second and G Streets in San Rafael.

The restaurant was completely remodeled and redecorated in Victorian style and opened in September of that year as Bill & Adolph's West End Villa, with Bill managing the new restaurant while his partner continued running his own well-known San Francisco restaurant, Adolph's.

AS WOULD BE expected, Bill spends much of his time inWest End Villa's immaculate kitchen. But when the rush of luncheon or dinner orders has passed the peak you can count on Bill appearing in the dining room to greet his many friends and circulate among the tables to make sure that all have thoroughly enjoyed their food and the way it was served.

Although the "white-hatted giant's" skill and artistry in preparing Crepes Suzettes is undiminished and still very much in demand, Bill has perfected a new specialite de la maison which has earned the West End Villa the sobriquet of "The House of Cannelloni."

Here's his recipe for this Italian dish:

CANNELLONI A LA WEST END VILLA
(Serves 8)

Force meat:
- 1 1 lb. pork butt
- 2 lbs. chicken
- ½ lb. veal
- ½ lb. Riccotta cheese
- 2 tablespoons Parmesan cheese
- 1 egg

Salt and pepper to taste

Boil pork, chicken and veal together with just enough water to cover, adding 2 carrots, 1 medium-sized onion, 2 large sprigs of parsley, 1 stalk of celery, 1 leek, 1 bay leaf and 2 cloves after blanching.

When meat has been cooked and deboned, grind very fine and then mix with remainder of above ingredients. This mixture

IN THE KITCHEN of Bill & Adolph's West End Villa at Second and G Streets, San Rafael, where he is master chef and partner, Bill Bisson carefully places the individual Cannelloni rolls in a platter of his own special sauce before putting them into the oven. Bisson's skill with this classic Italian dish has earned the restaurant the title of "The House of Cannelloni" and has won him the approval of gourmet fans of Continental cuisine.

"HOT PLATE," warns waiter Bob Costa as he serves an order of Bill Bisson's West End Villa specialty, Cannelloni, to a patron. So popular is the dish that Bisson begins preparing the ingredients at 5:30 in the morning to meet the day's demand. And in keeping with the new American interest in haute cuisine, the same care given to the preparation of the food must also be extended to the serving of it. The new interest in Continental foods and service, Bisson says, extends to all the generations.

will be rolled inside the "crepes"

CREPES

½ cup flour
1½ cups milk
3 eggs
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon butter

Mix above ingredients. On griddle heat a little salad oil or shortening. Drop batter in 4-inch rounds on griddle; cook, turning once, until light brown on both sides. then lay crepes out flat on table and roll each one around the force meat. Trim both ends off for uniform size.

Place a thick tomato sauce about ½-inch deep in a 2-inch deep baking dish. Then arrange Cannellonis in this dish on the tomato sauce, spacing them about an inch apart. Place in a medium hot oven (325-350 degrees) for about 10-12 minutes. When Cannellonis are golden brown, place strips of Monterey Jack cheese on top of each, let cheese melt and serve immediately.

Unused Cannellonis will keep in refrigerator three to four days, or can be frozen for later use.

LOOKING BACK through his years of involvement in the preparation and serving of food, Bill Bisson says the big development in American eating habits has been the phenomenal growth in popularity of Continental-type cuisine.

And why this growth?

Bisson attributes it at least in part to the boom in European travel of the 1950s and 1960s that enabled many people from all over the United States to experience "haute cuisine" for the first time.

He praises, too, a younger generation that, he says, "continually amazes me with their knowledgeability of foods and fine wines."

THIS GENERATION now in its 20s has also played a major role in the upgrading of food service in the United States, he says.

Hot dogs, hamburgers and apple pie may still be America's national fare.

But there is a demand, as well, for Cannelloni and for Crepes Suzettes that is to be found on both sides of the so-called generation gap.

The Sullivan Reading Program made him a reading "all-star."

It's great to be a winner. No one wants to be a loser, yet many, many kids lose out every day in school because they can't keep up in the classroom. They just can't read adequately.

The Sullivan Reading Program has been making winners out of kids for years. In fact, more than five million school children have used nationally acclaimed Sullivan Reading Materials to improve their reading skills. Sullivan Reading Centers utilize these well-tested Sullivan materials to provide supplemental reading instruction for children at all school levels. (Ask your child's teacher about the Sullivan Reading Program.)

Sullivan Reading Centers offer personalized reading instruction and self-paced group instruction for your child. Classes are small, and a step by step Sullivan teaching program of reading success builds confidence while it improves your son or daughter's reading skills. He'll work at his own pace, competing only with himself, and he or she can come to the Center any day of the week or on Saturday morning. If he needs additional time to make sufficient progress during the course, he's given the extra time at no additional cost. Initial testing and all materials used by the students are also included in the $60 fee for the four-week course.

If your child's like most of our students, he'll enjoy the time spent at the Center as much as he does on the baseball diamond. He knows we believe in "all-stars," too.

CARLEKEMP PRIORY SCHOOL at New Berwick is housed in a well-preserved Elizabethan mansion that has been expanded to serve as an educational institution. From it most of the boys move on to the Fort Augustus Abbey School. Both schools are operated by the Benedictine monks from the Fort Augustus Abbey.

Schools Of Scotland Impress Marinites

Curriculum May Sound Old-Fashioned Admit The Johnsons, 'But It Works'

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON

A Ross teaching couple, who went to Scotland for the husband's sabbatical leave, have returned to Marin with new appreciation of the value of the "old school tie."

Woodward Johnson, chairman of the science department at Redwood High School, was granted a half-year sabbatical to study geology and paleontology at University of Edinburgh in Scotland.

He and his wife Ysabel — a former teacher — took their four children along and enrolled them in Scottish schools. This turned out to be a fringe benefit which the Johnsons think may be more important than what the husband learned at the university.

THE ELDEST son, Michael, 13, was enrolled in Fort Augustus Abbey School in the Scottish Highlands at the foot of Loch Ness on the Caledonian Canal.

Sons Patrick, 12, and Timothy, 10, were enrolled in Carlekemp Priory School at North Berwick, where the Firth of Forth meets the North Sea. This and Fort Augustus Abbey School are both operated by the Order of St. Benedict.

Daughter Teresa, 5, entered first grade at a neighborhood state-operated school in Edinburgh — for while in Scotland there is no kindergarten, children start the first grade at age 5.

MICHAEL IS still at Fort Augustus. The rest returned home last month, for the father to resume teaching biology at Redwood High with the start of the second semester.

The two younger boys re-entered Ross School and picked up their Independent-Journal paper routes. Teresa found herself in Ross School kindergarten —about which she is a bit unhappy, since she had started learning first grade readin', writin' and 'rithmetic in Scotland.

The Firth of Forth and the foot of Loch Ness ("Many in Fort Augustus, both from the shore and while on the loch, have had excellent sightings of the Monster," says a brochure describing Fort Augustus Abbey and its school) might seem unlikely places for a pair of Marin County educators, trained in the modern thought and techniques of California's public school system, to acquire a new idea of the meaning of education. But it turned out that way.

"THE REALLY significant difference" between the schools of Scotland and those of California, said Johnson— choosing his words carefully — is the "much broader general educational background" provided there.

He said this applies to English schools, also, of which he visited several while on his leave.

Other significant differences, he said, are that the Scottish (and English) schools offer fewer electives in early years — thus assuring more uniform, well-rounded education for all; that they have concommitant study of subjects which are treated in isolation in California schools (this applying particularly in Johnson's field, the sciences), and that before going on to higher education, all students must pass one of several national examinations.

THE RESULT is what is being talked about here as "accountability."

Although Fort Augustus and Carlekemp schools are operated by Benedictine monks, they are organized along much the same lines as the English "public" (i.e., private) boarding schools. And though neither has its Arnold of Rugby, they are run today much like the Rugby of Thomas Arnold, immortalized in "Tom Brown's School Days" well over a century ago.

The boys attend school six days a week, although Saturday's is a short session, with much time for sports (rugby, hockey, cricket, tennis, swimming and golf at both schools). There is Mass on Sunday for the Catholic boys, who make up a small majority of the enrollment of 140 at Fort Augustus and of half that number at Carlekemp.

BOYS ENTER Carlekemp at age 8 and may continue there until 14 or go on to Fort Augustus at 12.

Besides the sports, there are hikes and outings. Movies — selected to appeal to the boys — are shown each weekend at the schools themselves.

But there are eight class periods a day, plus supervised study hall, after tea. The boys are assigned to "houses," with each house supervised largely by the older boys themselves. They must clean their own rooms, make their own beds, and appear washed, combed, uniformed and with shining shoes each morning. And the uniform includes a tie.

BOTH THESE schools, and the Scottish state-operated schools, said Mrs. Johnson, probably "are comparable to good U.S. schools 50 years ago." All emphasize basic studies, patriotism, and moral training — non-sectarian religious education is included in the state schools also.

The eight-period day makes possible a wider curriculum than students can take in even the largest U.S. schools.

Johnson produced a class schedule from Leominster Grammar School in England, which does not have Saturday classes. Its 40 periods per week include at a single grade level five of mathematics, six of English, two of history, three of geography, five of French, two of chemistry, two of physics, two of art, two of domestic science for girls or woodwork for boys, two of religious education, four of physical education and games, two of music, and a

"form period" which is somewhat like California's "home room."

EACH PERIOD is 35 minutes, and Johnson said teachers do not feel longer classes would be an advantage.

In the fourth and fifth forms (first and second year high school), each student takes nine subjects of which four may be electives.

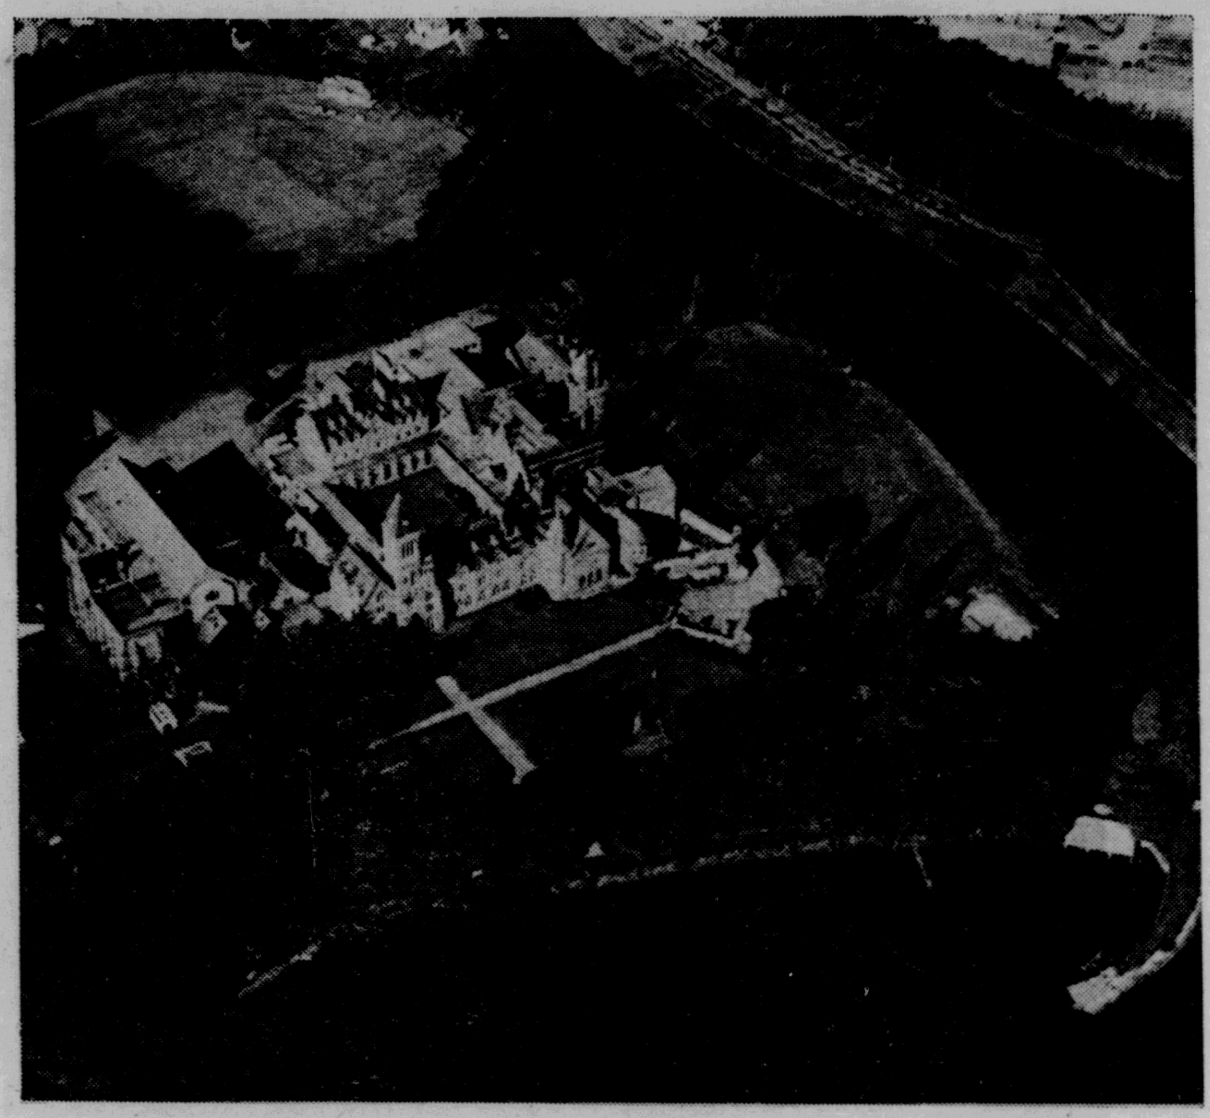
It all sounds very old-fashioned, the Johnsons admitted. So does the Carlekemp claim in a prospectus: "In educating boys in a friendly atmosphere, we aim at developing in them a sense of responsibility, self-discipline and a true sense of values so that they may one day take their place in society."

But, insist the Johnsons, it works.

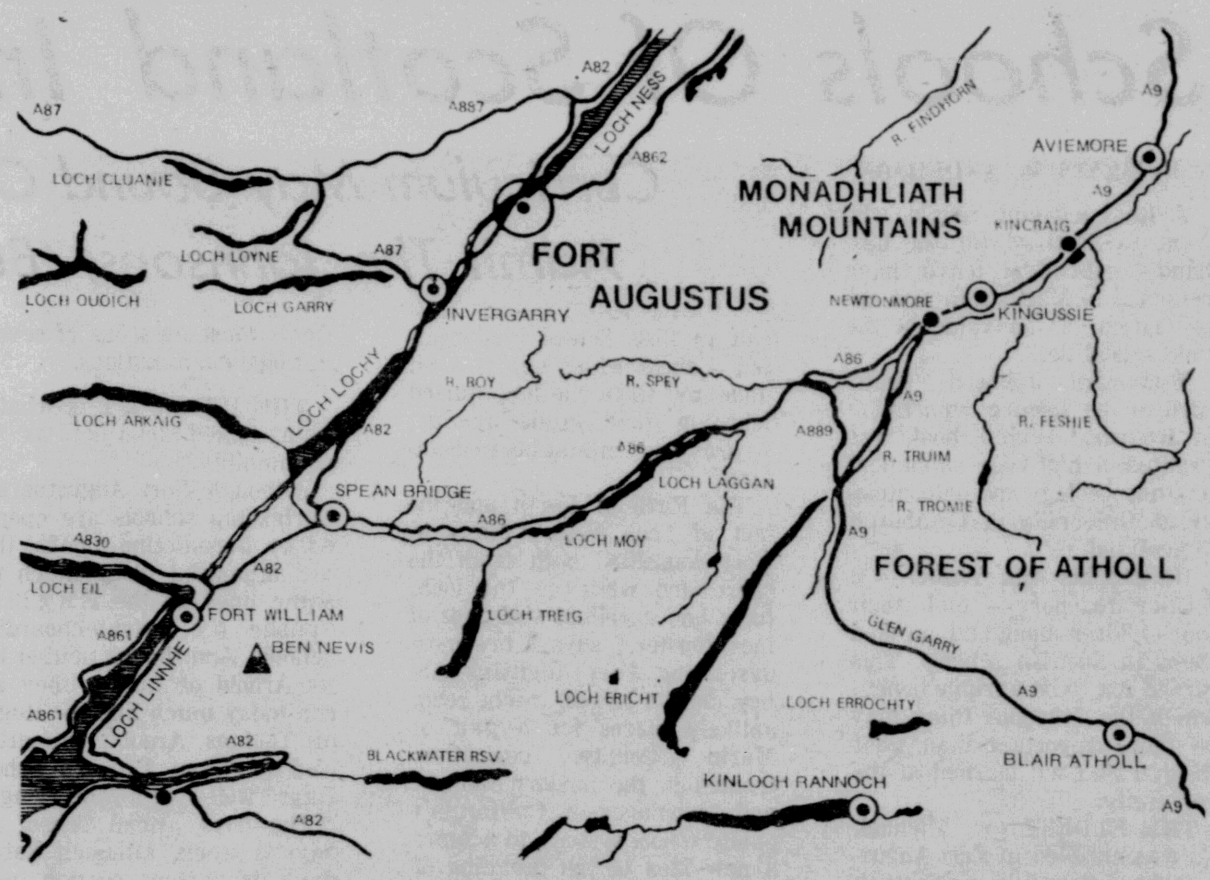
IT SOUNDS very expensive, too — particularly since both schools feature small classes. But the cost at Fort Augustus, including board and room, is $1,200 per year. That's why the Johnsons left Michael there.

They figure it's worth it to get an "old school" education in a Hanoverian fort in the Scottish Highlands, with views of Loch Ness (with or without monster) and of Corrieyalrick Pass, over which Prince Charles Edward Stuart marched his army in 1745 to overthrow the Hanovers.

(Incidentally, from his single term of history at Carlekemp, Patrick can tell you about that Jacobite Rising, and about a lot of other things in the histories of Great Britain, Europe and the United States.)



A HANOVERIAN FORT built between 1729 and 1742 forms the core of Fort Augustus Abbey and School on a Scottish peninsula laved by the River Tarff, Loch Ness of monster fame, and the Caledonian Canal.



FORT AUGUSTUS where young Michael Johnson is attending school is located in the mid-point of the Great Glen of Scotland, some 30 miles south of Inverness and 30 miles north of Fort William, and between Loch Ness and Loch Lomond.

He's Behind The Mike At KTIM

Young Clint Weyrauch Presides Over Marin Station's New Rock Show

By DON KEOWN

Those who dial 100.9 on their Frequency Modulation sets find themselves listening from 8 p.m. to midnight, Mondays to Thursdays, to rock music on the station that has long been known for its more traditional music and public affairs programming.

It is all, says Hugh Turner, KTIM president and general manager, part of a movement "to add a new dimension to our programming."

IN OTHER words, it represents a bold bid by the Marin station for the younger radio audience that in the past has customarily tuned their sets to one of the several San Francisco stations specializing in rock.

KTIM has dubbed its new four-hour program simply "The Show."

The man behind the turntabie and microphone for "The Show" is Clint Wyrauch, a slender and energetic 23-year-old of moderately-long hair and an inordinately-wide range of interests.

WEYRAUCH, San Francisco born, continues to live there, commuting between that city and San Rafael for his KTIM job. But he is on the alert for a Marin apartment that would suit his bachelor needs.

Weyrauch attended San Francisco public schools, but for his college education traveled across the country to attend College of New York at Schenectady where he earned a Bachelor of Arts Degree in economics.

With him to New York Weyrauch took a long-felt interest in rock music and a special fascination for radio.

ON DAY, he remembers, he just happened to stroll into the offices radio station, WRUC, "just out of curiosity — to find out how they operated."

This led to a discussion with the management of Weyrauch's favorite subject, rock music, "and before I knew it, they had put me to work in the studio."

Soon Weyrauch was presiding over a program that he says was quite similar to his present show on KTIM.

"I FELT THERE was a real need for rock music at the college," he says. "It was not only what the students wanted, but also what they needed."

His show there ran from midnight to 2 a.m. which, with his studies, made for what Weyrauch admits was "a rough schedule." Still, he stuck with it, and radio became more and more a part of his blood stream.

Among his listeners were not only the college of New York students, but also the co-eds of the all-girl Skidmore College nearby. There the girls lived in all-steel dormitories that shut out all radio programming except for WRUC which was piped into the buildings by carrier current through the electrical system.

"WE HAD A monopoly," smiles Weyrauch.

His new-found satisfaction in radio caused Weyrauch to obtain summer work during vacations at home with San Francisco's KMPX for whom he did the broadcasting from the much publicized Teen Fair at the Cow Palace in 1966.

Weyrauch graduated at Schenectady in June of 1969, and went to Europe for awhile, touring that continent by motorcycle.

BACK IN this country, he went to work for KTIM which broadcasts from the Independent-Journal Building, Fifth and B, San Rafael, in May of 1970.

Not too much later Weyrauch found himself shifted to KTIM's sister city in Lake County, KBLC at Lakeport, and found that experience a somewhat traumatic one.

"I did a little of everything there," he says. "I announced, sold spots, even presided over a show called 'The Trading Post' on which I sold goats and pigs and just about anything else."

BUT WHAT troubled Weyrauch was the Wake County reaction to his beloved rock music that he tried to introduce to KBLC's programming.

"It's a real farming community," he says, "and when I made the mistake of playing some of the underground stuff, we got complaints that included some threats to turn me in to the sheriff's department.

"There's a world of difference in the attitudes between Lake County and Marin County. Up there even the young people — and there aren't too many of MARIN'S radio station, KTIM, calls its 8 p.m. to midnight, four nights a week, rock music show simply "The Show." And the man behind the microphone and at the turntable is young Clint Weyrauch who is making a strong bid for youthful music fans who in the past have listened to San Francisco's rock stations. His aim, says Weyrauch, is to give his audience only the best of the rock music, and to present it in a pleasing format.

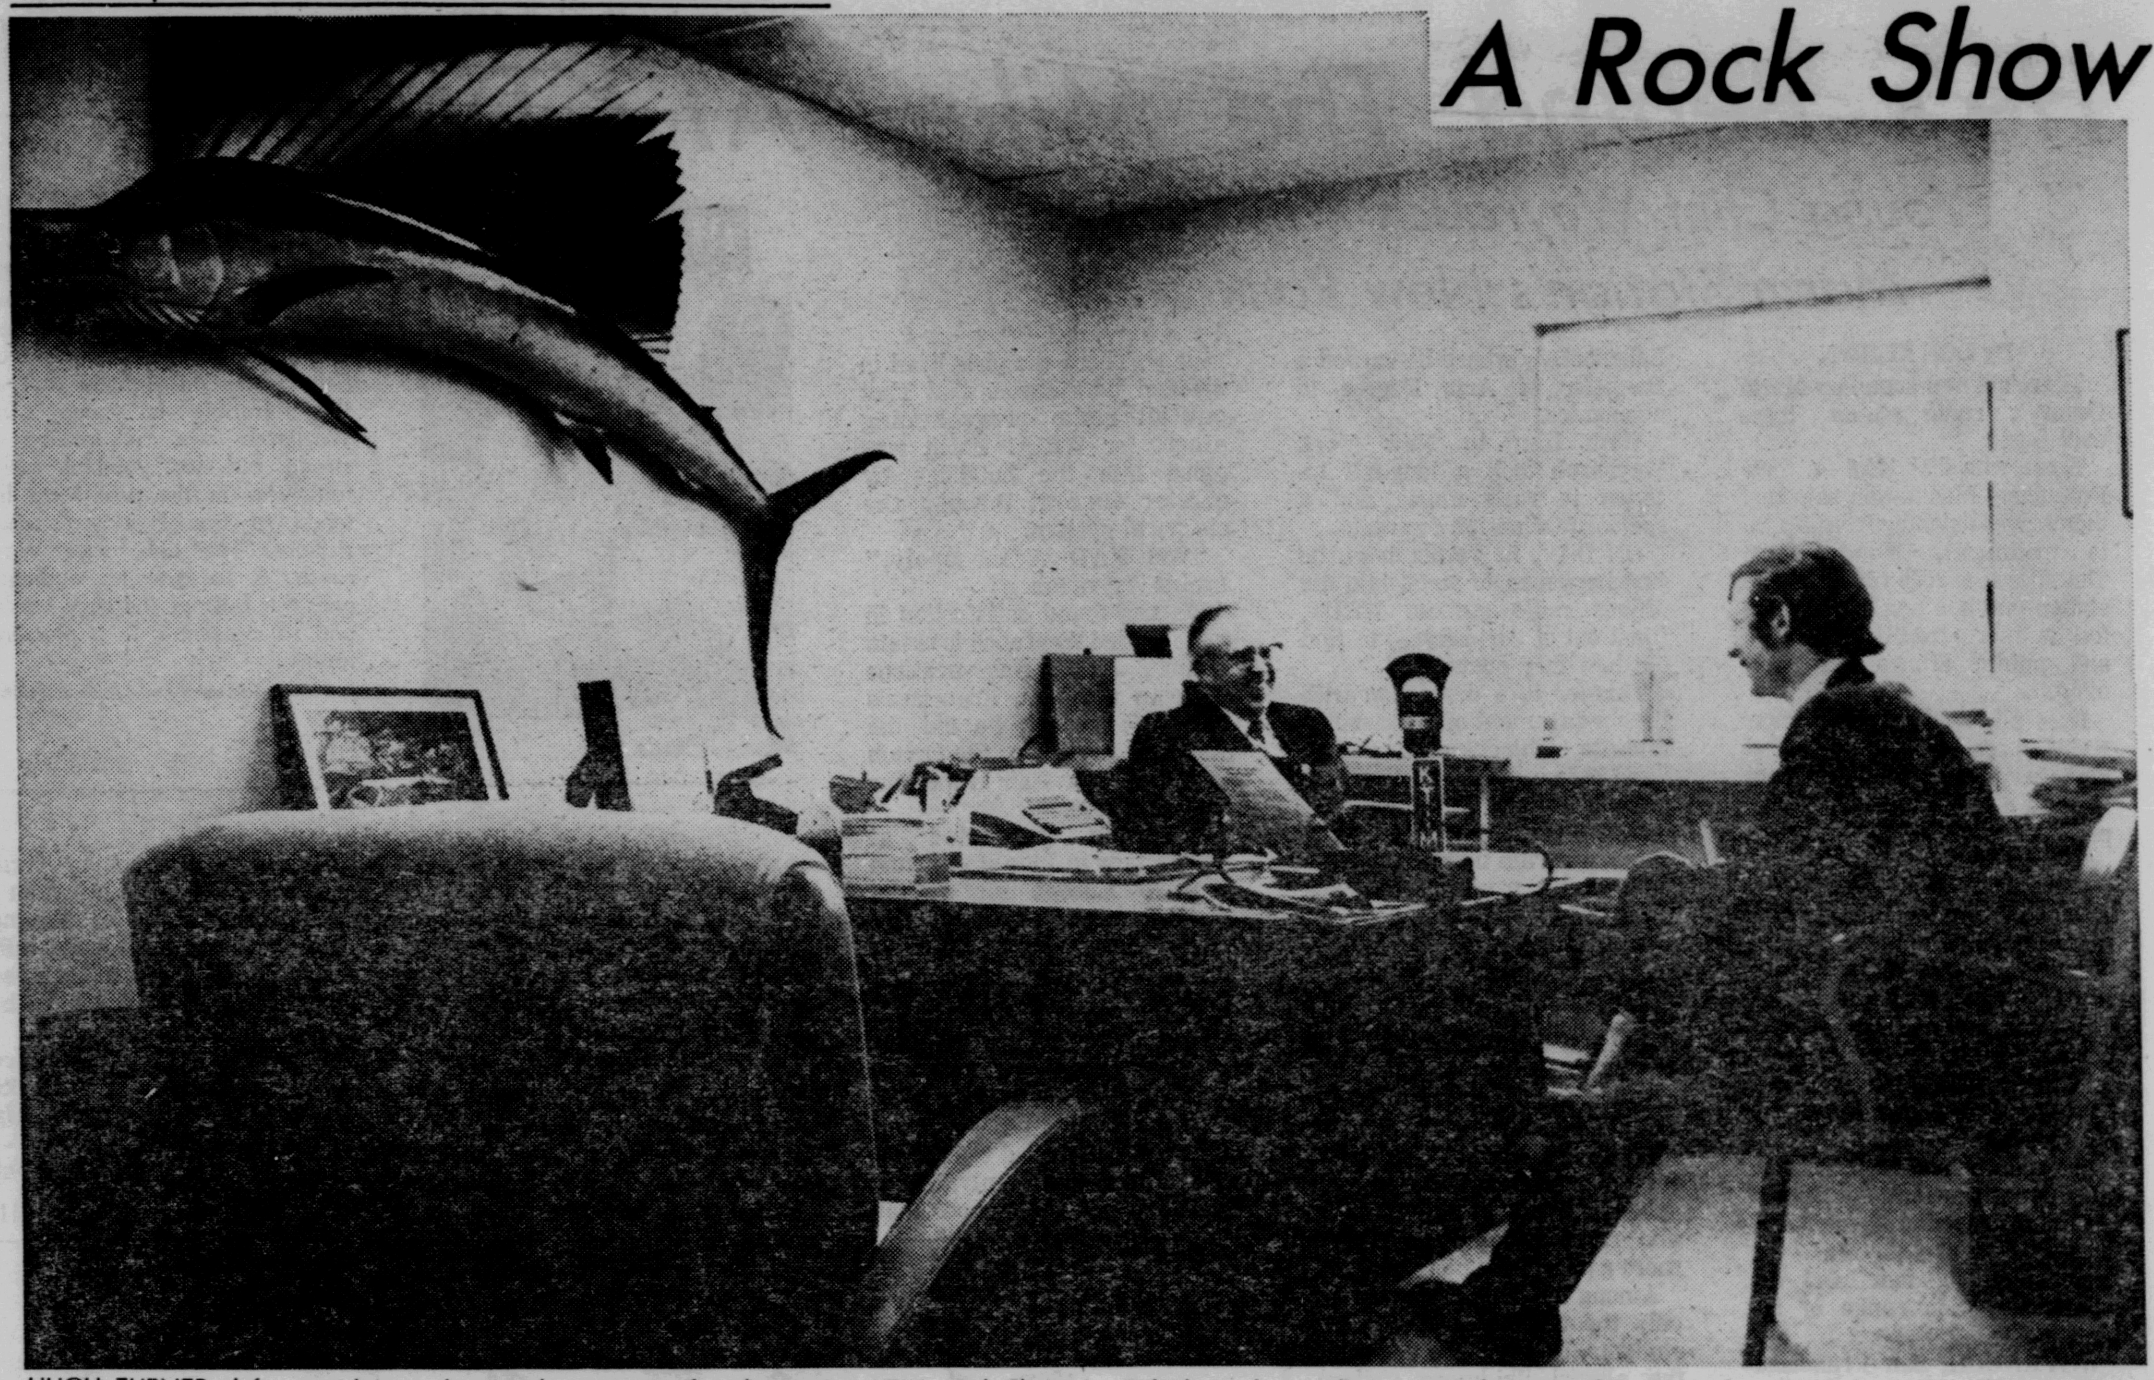
A Rock Show



HUGH TURNER, left, president and general manager of radio station KTIM, and Clint Weyrauch meet in Turner's office in the Independent-Journal Building, Fifth and B, San Rafael, to discuss the success of Weyrauch's new rock music show, and to chart its course for the future. It marks the first time the Marin station has presented such a regularly scheduled rock program from its studios.

CLINT WEYRAUCH exercises considerable care in the selection of the records to be heard on his KTIM-FM rock music program, "The Show." Much of the music heard Mondays through Thursdays, 8 p.m. to midnight, come from Weyrauch's own collection of records, acquired over a period of years.

On Marin's Radio Station

KTIM Makes Strong Bid For Listeners Among The Younger Music Fans

them — have very little interest in rock music. The country or the popular stuff is their bag."

WEYRAUCH was happy to return to Marin and KTIM in November of 1970. "There just didn't seem to be enough stimulation up there," he says of the Lake County job.

Soon after his return KTIM general manager Turner and Weyrauch began laying plans for that station's first regularly scheduled rock music show.

Previously KTIM had carried some "live" rock music from The Lion's Share, but had offered no disc jockey programming to challenge the big San Francisco rock stations of KFRC and KYA for the attentions of young listeners.

WAYRAUCH says: "Hugh Turner has been behind me all the way. This surprises some, since KTIM has something of a reputation for a more conservative, traditional broadcasting. But a closer examination would show that KTIM has always been innovative, willing to try something new and striving for a variety in its programs."

What can KTIM offer young Marinites in the late hours that they cannot already hear on the San Francisco stations?

Greater selectivity, for one thing, answers Weyrauch. "We try to play the very best rock music."

And a sensible, appealing format, for another.

"WE DON'T go off on tangents with a 15-minute jazz cut or an hour of talk," he says. "In fact we try to hold the talk down to a minimum. We keep a tight show."

But Weyrauch does work in announcements and comments that he feels will be of special, local interest to his audience — what is coming up at pep-

Most of the recordings Weyrauch plays come from his own collection, which he estimates to number 1,000 discs and tapes "dating back to 1955 or so and the heyday of Elvis Presley and Chuck Berry."

MARIN RECORD shops such as the Sound Shop provide him with more music. "And of course we get some records from the promoters."

Is there any good reason for offering Marin four hours of rock music four nights a week? Are the songs really worth the listening? Are they better, or worse, than the music of earlier generations?

"Music has evolved," says Weyrauch. "From the ordinary love songs of the past we have progressed to music today with more depth and with real social portent. Each song, if you listen, has a social message for our day.

"IN OTHER words, today's music has socially redeeming features that go beyond the sound itself which many young people find so pleasing. There is a whole new depth to music."

To create interest in "The Show," KTIM launched it by giving away a Magic Mountain waterbed.

So far, says Weyrauch, the response to the new program has been "very good — in fact, fantastic. It is evident that we are picking up a lot of listeners who used to dial the San Francisco stations."

AT THE station, Weyrauch also sells commercials for the A.M. programming "which I enjoy less than the music show, but which I realize is invaluable experience," and does some of the less technical engineering tasks required of all personnel by today's smaller radio stations.

Outside the station, Weyrauch has a number of interests, three of them his modes of travel.

He owns a big Harley Davidson motorcycle and he also owns a Ferrari automobile "that makes me look like a real capitalist." And he also holds a pilot's license, having received his flying training in New York and at San Carlos, and he sometimes rents a Piper or a Cessna for a flight.

HE ATTENDS automobile rallies and admits a liking for speed although he has not raced competitively.

He is a devotee of a number of sports, principally water and snow skiing, and he takes in the football games.

As for his social life, he says: "I came close to getting married once, but was saved."

He says he will remain with radio as long as he finds it interesting — "and I found it absolutely exhilarating now" — but notes that he always has that schooling in economics to fall back upon if he needs another profession. The mortality rate among disc jockeys is high, but less so on community stations such as KTIM than one of the big city stations. So Weyrauch feels that "The Show" has a long and bright future on the KTIM-FM (100.9 on your dial) schedule.

A WEAKNESS, or an enthusiasm, to which young Clint Weyrauch admits is fast transportation. He alternates between his sleek Ferrari automobile, above, and his big, powerful Harley Davidson motorcycle, at right, in commuting between San Francisco and Marin for his work, and in his pleasure rides. He also holds a pilot's license and sometimes rents planes for flight. (Independent-Journal photos)

THE BAHAMAS and their capital city of Nassau offer Americans a chance to savor a delightful blend of Caribbean and British cultures only a short distance from U.S. shores. And the markets dispense a wide variety of wares, ranging from conch shells and tropical fruit to the finest European-manufactured goods. This tourist finds the colorful straw market at Nassau an attractive backdrop for his picture-taking. It is an ideal spot, too, for the collection of some shopping bargains.

Conch Shells Sell Briskly In Bahamas

The Travel Pages

Vacationers searching for the unusual around the Bahamas capital of Nassau, and on Paradise Island across the harbor, are doing a great deal of note-making nowadays.

Not with pencil and paper as you might imagine, but with conch shells.

Visitors to these popular shores are finding that the conch, a source of beauty and food, can also be the source of a powerful trumpet-like sound. Sales of this easily obtainable souvenir continue to be brisk.

Bahamians have been blowing the conch (pronounced konk) for countless generations — using the loud blasts over stretches of water to herald the arrival of their boatloads of produce. Lately, more and more tourists, intrigued be the idea, have been "horning in" on the act.

To prepare a suitable conch shell for blowing purposes, (the Lamb Conch is an excellent one to use) the point is carefully sawed off about an inch from the tip, leaving a hole about three-quarter-inch in diameter. This opening is filed until smooth for the lips. The conch is then blown like a bugle.

Uncut conch shells can be purchased inexpensively along the docks in bustling Nassau. Conches already prepared for blowing are also available around town at slightly higher cost. A place you can buy both is at the Seafloor Aquarium, one of Nassau's prime attractions, where visitors peer through large windows into mammoth tanks and come face to fin with hundreds of fascinating fish. There is also a regularly scheduled show featuring performing dolphins and sea lions.

Aside from its unusual horn-blowing characteristic, the conch also possesses the quality of great beauty. Even more lovely than the common pink shell are the King Conch, Twist Conch, Lamb Conch, Screw Conch and Porgie Conch.

In addition, this gift from the crystal clear sea, is a highly valued food — with the mollusk eaten raw or cooked. Local recipe books cover such tasty dishes as conch fritters, conch chowder, curried conch, creamed conch and conch salad.

Indicative of the close association of the conch with the region was the first Bahamas postage stamp, issued in 1859. An illustration of the shell appeared along with that of a pineapple and the head of Queen Victoria.

Traveling Alone Has Advantages

If your best friend has let you down, and you are now faced with spending a two-week vacation on your own, perhaps you should consider the positive aspects of going it alone.

Many women actually travel by themselves by preference. When there are no one else's plans to consider, you can do what you want, when you want to do it. You can eat at oddhours, or take a nap in the middle of the day, and no one will consider you strange, or resent it. You have time to think, and to develop a new and clearer perspective about yourself, and people and situations around you at home.

You also have the satisfaction of knowing that you can be self-reliant.

Is it safe?

A number of women who have been lone travelers for a number of years were asked this question, and all agreed that safety was never a problem. However, they all also agreed that one of the reasons for this was that they took normal precautions — usually the same ones they exercised at home.

It is a good idea to read a couple of guide books on the area you plan to visit before the trip, so that you become familiar with local customs. In Milan, Italy, for example, one of the women interviewed, who wanted to see this beautiful city after dark, was told politely by a kindly gentleman, that "nice" women were not usually seen out on the streets alone at night.

Other recommendations from seasoned women travelers include:

Insist on written confirmation of travel and hotel reservations. Do not overpack. Porters are not always readily available, and with new permanent press materials one suitcase is not only possible but also practical. Take a supply of travelers checks instead of cash. Plan a basic sightseeing tour for each area you visit, before going out on your own. This is also a good way to meet other travelers.

A common fear is that you may become ill in a strange city or country. Most hotel managers, airline personnel, and the U.S. Consulates in cities outside the U.S. are prepared to direct you to a qualified physician, usually one who speaks English.

It is also a good idea to bring some basic medications with you for sudden upsets, which always seem to happen when the local drug store has closed for the night, even if it does carry your medication.

Fear of not making travel connections, new foods, and anxieties about unfamiliar places often put a strain on the digestive system. Take with you a preparation for diarrhea, and an antacid. (There are also new medications especially for relief of gas pains.)

Aspirin, an antiseptic liquid or cream, and Band-Aids should also be part of a basic kit.

Will you be lonely?

In spite of keeping busy and having a good time, there may be occasions when you will be. At such times, put on your best dress and makeup and treat yourself to a special dinner at an elegant restaurant, go see a play, or do anything else that you know usually your spirits. The idea is not to sit in your room and feel sorry for yourself.

The fact that many women who started to travel on their own for business reasons continue to do so on their vacations, is perhaps the best recommendation for your going ahead with the trip you planned — even though your friend may have cancelled out.

THE BIBLICAL-minded visitor to Israel is certain to include the village of Bethlehem in the Judean Hills just 12 miles south of Jerusalem in his Holy Land itinerary. The hamlet is dominated by this bell tower of the Church of the Nativity which is built over the manger where the infant Jesus was born. David, the shepherd who became king of the tribes of Israel, was also born in Bethlehem.

Irish Plan Different Kind Of St. Pat's Day

The Irish have done a switch. From being a stay-at-home type holiday they have made St. Patrick's Day (March 17) the center of their Spring Festival.

This year there will be parades in major cities like Dublin, Cork, Galway, Limerick, which while not necessarily trying to rival New York, Boston and Chicago, will nonetheless have strong U.S. representation.

Irish International Airlines reports that 12 bands will fly over to take part in parades in Ireland. They come from New York, Connecticut and Washington, D.C.

As part of the national day attractions, the Irish have also changed around the social calendar.

This year the Dublin Theater Festival — generally a Fall event — goes on between March 8 and 20: and affords the visitor the chance to premiere some works that sooner or later end up on or off Broadway.

And in Dublin the best theater seats start at less than three dollars!

THE UNIFORMS encountered by Americans touring Europe are very much a part of the fascination that continent holds for its U.S. visitors. None of the garb is more colorful than the uniform worn by the Greek soldiers who stand guard outside the Royal Palace in Athens.

Berlin's Center For Arts And Research

A center of the arts and scholarly research is rising gradually from the ashes of what used to be Berlin's diplomatic quarter.

The unique complex of impressive proportions will become the permanent home for many of West Berlin's priceless art treasures and historic documents, bringing to an end a long and dramatic odyssey.

THE FIRST building was the Philharmonic Hall — which was dedicated in 1963. Since its opening, this bizarre, tent-like structure designed by Hans Scharoun of Berlin has won wide acclaim among musicians, music lovers and architectural critics as one of the world's greatest concert halls.

Like a piece of sculpture, the ochre concrete exterior should be viewed from all sides, to be fully appreciated. Inside, a last arrival for a concert may consider it a challenge to find the way up the multitude of swinging and straight stairs to find his seat.

The auditorium itself is simply awe inspiring. Scharoun has placed the audience on various terraces surrounding the orchestra stage, so that it is in full view from each of the 2,200 seats.

Mies van der Rohe's magnificent New National Gallery — with its clear and uncompromising lines — harmonizes with the graceful 19th Century St. Matthew Church which will become the focal point of the cultural forum. It was among the last and most beautiful creations of the great architect who died in 1969, a year after the gallery was dedicated.

FROM THE almost austere square steel and glass pavilion, stairs lead down to vast halls where Berlin's collections of 19th and 20th Century art are on display.

Across the street from the New National Gallery, the gigantic State Library is under construction. The first sections of this ultra-modern archive — housing the latest word in technical equipment, reading, research and storage facilities — will open later this year.

This building, too, was designed by Hans Scharoun, now an honorary citizen of Berlin, to blend with his own Philharmonic Hall as well as with Mies' Museum. It is expected that by 1975 about three million volumes will be installed here. The ultimate goal for this library is about eight million volumes.

With the opening of the State Library vast collections of invaluable volumes, documents, oriental and occidental manuscripts, original music scores by famous composers, incunabula and historic maps will return to Berlin. It will be the end of their long odyssey which started during the war when the most important collections of the Prussian State library were shipped out of Berlin.

PLANS FOR the Tiergarten Cultural Center include five additional museum buildings to house the various collections of occidental art, a new home for the Institute of Music Research (another contribution by Scharoun), and the transfer of the Latin American Institute to the new State Library complex.

The Tiergarten area close to the wall was carefully chosen as the site for the Cultural Center to form a continuation of the cultural buildings in East Berlin. City planners hope that one day Berlin's people will be able to move freely between East and West and view entire collections.

THE BOOK PAGES

Brazilians Understand Their Spirit Worlds

DRUM & CANDLE by David St. Clair; Doubleday, 304 pages, $6.95.

By DON KEOWN

Brazil, says the Vatican, is the world's largest Roman Catholic country.

True, says David St. Clair. But it is also the world's largest Spiritist country.

The same worshipers who attend mass in the churches of a Sunday morning are quite likely to have been present for rituals in the spirit house the night before.

There are prayers to the Father, the Son and Holy Ghost. And there are exhortations to Yemanja, Oxala and Ogun as well.

St. Clair, Ohio-born, Columbia University educated, has spent 12 years in Brazil as a news magazine correspondent and freelance writer with a special interest in voodooism and its kin cults.

In "Drum & Candle" he records his observations and his impressions of a country and a people saturated with beliefs in ancient gods and spirits.

And it is not, St. Clair makes plain, simply the poor and the illiterate who nourish such beliefs. Brazil's more sophisticated and more affluent whites have their own religious rituals that are quite apart from their Catholic faith.

St. Clair breaks down the religious beliefs of Brazilians into four divisions.

First, there is the Roman Catholicism which most Brazilians profess.

Second, there are the Candomble beliefs and rituals brought to Brazil by black slaves mainly out of the culture of Africa's once great Yoruba nation. This, basically, is what Americans call "voodooism." Its strength lies with the blacks, particularly the less educated and those living in the backwoods.

Third, there is the Spiritism derived from 18th Century European mysticism and particularly from the writings and teachings of Allan Kardek. Here the followers are most likely to be white and from the more affluent strata of Brazilian society.

And last there is Umbanda, a more complicated, highly organized series of religious practices combining some of the aspects of Kardekism with Candomble beliefs.

St. Clair has studied all these in far greater depth than have most visitors, and eventually confronts himself with this question: "Do I, a white, educated Christian American believe in the powers of the Brazilian spirits?"

His answer: "I cannot truthfully answer no. I must answer, truthfully, that I do. There it is. In print."

And he goes on: "I do believe in the pagan spirits that inhabit that vast South American nation called Brazil. I have seen too much not to believe . . . "

Much of his book is a recitation of the evidence that has convinced him despite the strong doubts with which he began his studies — spirit manifestations, table rappings, spirit operations, prophecies come true, cards that foretell the future, "events that cannot be explained in any other way."

With St. Clair the reader attends exotic rituals and meets a diverse assortment of practitioners.

The flamboyant Edu upon whose powers Brazil's most successful soccer team relies, and Umbanda medium Tancredo da Silva Pinto, "the black pope of Brazil," are but two of many others.

Spirit worship, St. Clair reports, has the advantage over Catholicism in the struggle for the minds of the Brazilians in that the former is strictly a Brazilian belief. "It is theirs without outside interference . . . as much a part of their lives as their own families, their friends and their country. They accept it and take it seriously.

"Foreigners may laugh and criticize, but they don't understand. The Brazilians understand. The spirits understand the Brazilians. The two planes — worldly and unworldly — work together and help each other.

"It's that complex, and yet it's that simple."

And Catholicism in Brazil has found it necessary more and more to accommodate itself to and even to accept spiritism as a companion belief, the author asserts.

And St. Clair suggests that just perhaps "these uneducated black-skinned descendants of illiterate slaves have something we modern sophisticates do not. That these people have managed to stay pure and natural and close to Nature in such a way that the secrets of Nature are revealed to them.

"Now maybe the ways they interpret these secrets are not 100 per cent correct. Maybe they see spirits and demons and talk to dead friends because this is the way that the Great Force of Nature (God? Buddha? Jesus? Oxala?) can get through to them.

"Maybe this is the way that the Brazilians understand things we refuse to see."

St. Clair suggests that for all our vaunted science, our own society falls far short of the Brazilian in its exercising of the powers of the mind. In Brazil, he contends, what we would regard as miracles are commonplace. And he predicts that some day we, too, will be performing such miracles, although probably not to the accompaniment of beating drums and lighted candles. Indeed, he suggests, there seems to be already an awakened interest here in a fuller exploration of the powers of the human mind.

St. Clair is no great shakes as a writer, although he warms up as his book progresses. But it is his material that makes his book such engrossing and provocative reading.

And trilingual, motivated by a keen curiosity and an adventurous character, he has been in a unique position to collect information upon a subject about which North Americans have been only poorly informed.

He won't convert you to voodoo or spiritism. But he will start you to thinking —and wondering.

JOHN SLOAN'S STUDY of a woman hanging out her wash from a tenement fire escape is reproduced in "American Painting, 1900-1970," the newest volume in Time-Life Books' excellent Library of Art series, as an example of the Ash Can School that set U.S. painting on a new course in the early 1900s. The details of everyday life became the artists' concern. And Sloan charged this canvas with rough-brushed vitality, color and detail. The book continues through the successive waves of art schools and trends — realistic and abstract — on into the pop-op minimalists of the 1960s and 70s. An interesting array of exemplary art is reproduced, much of it in color. The text is credited to Time-Life editors, with an introductory chapter by Dr. John W. McCoubrey of the University of Pennsylvania, who also served as consultant. Price of the 192 page book is $7.95.

DOUBLEDAY and Co. has published a paperback edition of "The California Feeling" by writer Peter Beagle and Marin photographer Michael Bry presenting a fresh and stimulating overview of contemporary California.

At the time the hardcover version was printed, we said of the book: "Beagle. . .has written a perceptive narrative that is the equal of Bry's photos and perfectly in tune with them. The two have not sought to present California's pretties face. Rather, they have scratched behind the rouge and powder to find the truest face."

At $3.95, the softcover book constitutes a considerable bargain for the student of Californiana or theconnoisseur of fine photography.

"NEW WAYS in First Aid" is a $2.45 paperback by Dr. Joe Hartley, M.D., outlining the newest techniques for meeting those emergencies that are likely to confront us all from time to time — the injury accident the bite, the burn, the bullet wound, the food poisoning, the foreign object in eye or ear, the sunburn, the sting, the splinter, the toothache, etc. Dr. Hartley's instructions are clearly stated and practical in application. And the small book would seem to be a valuable addition to the reference shelves of any home.

"RIGG'S HANDBOOK of Nautical Etiquette" (;4.95) is a small, handsized compilation of the rules, customs and traditions of boating, both sail and motor. Compiled by H. K. Rigg, and published by Alfred A. Knopf, it should be a popular manual for yachtsmen, since it not only deribes boating practices but also explains their origins. It is likely to become a standard among boatsmen.

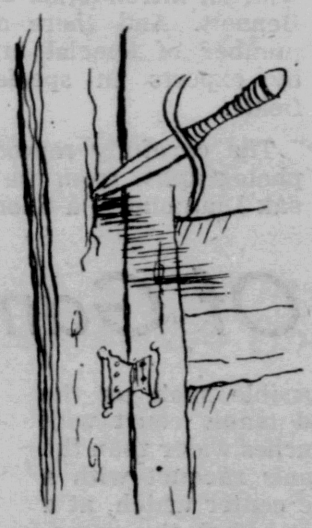
Sleuths & Suspense

THE KIDNAPED CHILD by John Creasey as Gordon Ashe; Holt, Rinehart and Winson; 186 pages, $4.50. Reviewed by Don Keown.



We much prefer John Creasey's George Gideon or Roger West yarns to his other fiction. But under any of his several pen names and using any of the several characters he has created, Creasey is simply incapable of writing a bad crime novel.

So if "The Kidnaped Child" is not first-rate Creasey, it is nonetheless entertaining reading.

It is a first U.S. printing of a Patrick Dawlish adventure that appeared in England 15 years ago. The husky and handsome Dawlish, a private operator in the days before he became the deputy assistant commissioner of police, becomes involved in the highly complicated kidnaping case in which the child of a close friend is the victim. The Dawlish story is much more physical (in current sports parlance) and less cerebral than a West or Gideon novel. Our hero is up against a whole and evil gang. But eventually, of course, good wins out over the bad.

We can understand why there was no great hurry to publish "The Kidnaped Child." Yet it would be a shame to miss out on anything by Creasey, even one that is not his very best.

Jan Myrdal: Mao's Charlie McCarthy

Liu Lung is a hamlet in the Yenan area of China's hinterland. Jan Myrdal spent most of 1969 there, observing and interviewing the villagers. He did the same in 1962 and wrote "Report from a Chinese Village." This sequel compares present village life to the earlier time.

Myrdal's purpose is to give a "true picture of the cultural revolution" and its impact upon a microcosm of the Peoples Republic.

To the extent that we learn something of the modes, manners and aspirations of agrarian Chinese there is merit to this work. It is also a polemic, and a hopelessly inept one.

Myrdal swallows Maothink without a burp. if you would believe him, the tug and pull of life in Liu Lung centers on finding the broadest application of Mao Tse-tung Thought. Soil erosion, pig production, manure spreading, it's all there in the aphorisms of the little red book. (Question: is Maofarming superior to Jewish farming, or is that a kibbutz?)

Almost any classic polemic I've read pulled me into the orbit of the author's rationale, for a time at least. Not so Myrdal.

He believes a report on episodes in one village constitutes an exegesis and a justification of the cultural revolution. In fact, he gives a chilling indictment, albeit unintentionally. Because the whole thrus of Maothink in Liu Lung is Thinksame. Mindless application of Mao's political and social philosophy to food production, social structure, school curricula and family relationships.

Trenchant questioning, intellectual honesty, understanding of individuality — all are lacking in Myrdal.He is no more than a Swedish Charlie McCarthy for mao Tse-tung.

When Innocence Came To An End

THIS FABULOUS CENTURY, VOLUME II by editors of Time-Life Books; Time-Life, 288 pages, $9.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Time-Life continues its wonderfully illustrated Fabulous Century series of "pop" histories, recording the events, moods and trends of the 20th Century a decade at a time.

The years 1910-1920 are covered in volume two. It was, of course, a decade dominated by World War I.

But it was also a decade of suffragettes on the march, Prohibition, the silent motion picture, the "Tin Lizzie," George M. Cohan, Theodore Dreiser, Eddie Rickenbacker, Irving Berlin, the chautauqua show, patriotic fervor, witchhunts and much, much more.

Most generally, it was, for America, an age of innocence coming to an end. And the beginning of a new international ego that was to bring responsibilities and eventually involvement in a war that took the lives of thousands of its young men.

They were very different times from today, and yet they were, in Time-Life's words, "afluent times roiled by increasing ferment and discontent," a description that could be accurately applied as well to the late 1960s and early 1970s.

The Time-Life book captures the flavor and spirit of the era splendidly, and the collection of period illustrations is simply marvelous.

The "This Fabulous Century" series ranks as a most commendable use by Time-Life of its tremendous resources so ideally suited to this sort of thing.

EMANCIPATED LADIES try out men's pipes, drinks and haberdashery in this photograph from Time-Life's "This Fabulous Century 1910-1920," proving that Women's Lib is not all that new.

Cookbook For The Vegetarian

VICTORY THROUGH VEGETABLES by Joan Wiener; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 16 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

This book is aimed at vegetarians and the macrobiotics mob, but there is no reason why the cook who has simply tired of bland vegetable dishes that detract from her other delicacies cannot make fine use of it.

In all, young Mrs. Wiener has gathered more than 200 meatless recipes, from Florentine beans, to syrupy sweet applesauce cake, from vegetable roast, to applecream biscuits, from Indian lentil soup to herbed chickpea salad.

They're on the health food side, and almost all of them sound delicious.

The macrobiotic dishes provided by Barbara Thralls are something else — strictly for the believers. Boiled carrots and spinach in sauce, squash soup, fruit tempura, the like. But even here there are some promising suggestions — a barley bean soup for instance, an apple crisp and sesame crackers.

For Sale: 100 Million Dollars Worth Of World's Treasures

What are shown and described are a sampling from the best pieces sold at auction during the 1969-70 season by Sotheby's of London and Parke-Bernet of New York City.

There is no inclination to dispute the assertion that the sales made through these two houses "represent the major part of all important works of art sold at auction throughout the world" during the season, totalling as they do something over a hundred million dollars.

The items reproduced in the illustrations are arranged in categories, each with an introduction by Ian Bennett. And there are a number of special articles by experts in specialized fields.

The carefully reproduced photographs, from the Nassak Diamond to a George II soup tureen, from a Francis Bacon painting (that sold for $55,200) to an Edgar Degas canvas that went for $168,000, are the big attraction. Audubon bird art, 10-century-old ritual wine vessels a magnificent Russian ikon, Samuel Cooper's miniature of Charles II, German carvings, a Van Gogh ($875,000), a Matisse ($230,000), rapiers, cups, plaques, exquisite jewelry are among the other delights for the eyes. But one should not overlook the importance of the knowledgeable and literate commentary that has also been provided as a worthwhile accompaniment to the pictorial splendor.

THE COMPLETE UPMANSHIP by Stephen Potter; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 349 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Gordon Parr.

Stephen Potter authored a number of books having to do with the principal of upmanship or the art of being one-up on your fellow man in every conceivable circumstance from cocktail party conversation to business. This volume combines all of the previously published books by Potter on this topic and as such is probably a more successful book than each of the individual efforts.

Prolonged comment on any one aspect of Potter's theories gets to be a bit much, but if the reader can pick and choose from among the various applications and examples as in this book it is a much more amusing exercise.

Gamemanship, Potter defines briefly as "The art of winning games without actually cheating". This body of knowledge was put together after much personal observation and participation in games of various types such as tennis, croquet, ping pong, etc.

Potter found that certain clever. individuals often prevailed over those more skilled in these sports through the use of conversational gambits designed to place the other fellow in an awkward position, one of unease. Other devices were also employed when possible such as the home-constructed tennis court with one back line 6-inches wider than the other or the tennis racquet with a piano wire in the center which, at a strategic moment before the game, would be plucked — accompanied by the comment, "Always like a tightly strung racquet." This methodology was, of course, easily extended to other areas of human endeavor.

Thus the salesman is taught to act the role of the kindly idiot, allowing the prospect to explain the seemingly complex contract to him and in fact take it out of his hands and sign it with a good-natured flourish.

Another natural is winemanship wherein the most ordinary bottle of family red is clucked over and the cork removed with such ceremony that the guests are quite in awe of it by the time it is finally poured. If in spite of everything it is after all a really horrid wine it can then be treated with academic interest: "Superb wine, but it has its periods of recession."

You may also learn that art of Not Rock-Climbing, Christmas Giftmanship, and Conversationship. They are more than amply covered in Potter's very British, very subtle style. Once over the hurdle of the quite dated mannerisms and references, there is a chuckle or two here. A bit strained perhaps but a chuckle nonetheless.

PERT AND PRETTY, these two little zinnias, the Peter Pan Pink and the Peter Pan Plum, both won All-America Selections gold medal awards for 1971. Planted together, they make for an outstanding color show in the garden.

Tiny Zinnias Smash A Record In The All-America Scoring

Small Annuals Lead The Way In Testing Of New Flowers

Two little zinnias have broken a record!

For the almost 40 years that All-America Selections has operated test gardens in many states and several countries, that judges have observed and scored thousands of entries in the trials, none has received so high a score as Peter Pan Pink and Peter Pan Plum. Both are gold medal winners.

They're dwarf, they're decorative and they're delightful. Except for flower color they are twins — dwarf, bushy, very early to start blooming, free-flowering all summer and "self-cleaning" because the new leaves cover the older flowers.

Both are first generation hybrids, grow from 10 to 12 inches tall, have blooms from three to four inches in diameter and start to blossom when only six inches high.

Even their colors contrast beautifully although you'd never guess it from the written description. Peter Pan Pink has coral pink blossoms which become two-toned as they age; salmon-rose in the center while the outer petals retail their coral pink hue.

Peter Pan Plum, striking when planted with Peter Pan pink, has flowers described variously as lavender-rose or rosy purple, in other words a believable plum color.

Petals of flowers of both varieties are slightly curled and the flower forms vary from plant to plant; some are cactus type with pointed petals, some resemble dahlias in thier fullness and others have flattish blooms.

Here are two zinnias that will perform well in pots or planters, may be massed in beds or borders or even used as hedges. To see them is to wish you had them in your garden.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

✓Check your nursery for early spring-flowering trees and shrubs; make your selection while the plants in containers are in bloom.

✓If peach trees haven't as yet received their second spraying for peach leaf curl, do so immediately.

✓Citrus trees may be planted in March. Don't overlook the dwarf varieties for use in the landscape — or in tubs for decoration accent on the patio or deck.

✓When frost danger in your area has past, all tender plants may be pruned. Examples are fuchsias, pelargoniums, hibiscus and bougainvillea.

✓Set our Daylilies now, for long-lasting summer bloom.

Magnolias Ideally Suited To The Suburban Garden

Remember the name: Magnolia soulangeana.

Too difficult to pronounce? Try Saucer Magnolia, then. It's one and the same and no matter how you say it, it's beautiful.

SAUCER MAGNOLIA is just one of several deciduous magnolias which are fast becoming favorites of California gardeners. They provide a spectacular winter-time show of color — with bare branches suddenly being hidden from sight by a burst of bloom that smothers the plant. Because of the cool season color and the modest growth habit of deciduous Magnolias, they are being relied upon to provide special effects in modern landscapes.

They are considered small trees or large shrubs —this intermediate size has great value in suburb-size gardens.

The Saucer Magnolia grows to about 15 feet in hight — at maturity it is a lovely multiple-trunked specimen. Flower color of this hybrid ranges from white through pink and rose to a vivid red-purple.

ANOTHER IS the Star Magnolia, whose white blooms command attention from far and near. The flowers are split or pinwheel in nature, and resemble a large star. Similar in appearance, but a more vigorous grower, is Merrill's Magnolia.

The Lily Magnolia has more tubular blooms, white on the inside and purple outside. This one has a long blooming season and the flowers are large.

Impressive, velvety purple flowers adorn Magnolia Veitchii (Rubra). It has the darkest colored blooms of the deciduous varieties.

Each has distinguishing foliage characteristics which can be used to advantage in the landscape. The bold textures add a lovely dimension to the garden.

The Daisy Can Do Many Jobs

There is something about a drift of fresh-faced daisies that adds charm to the garden setting.

There are daisies for massing at the far reaches of the property or near the outdoor living area, some which excel in border or edging situations, and others that create lavish displays in long-lasting beds. Many can be grown in pots or tubs — and provide portable color.

And, who can deny the pleasure afforded by blooming daisies tucked-in at random throughout the garden?

One of the most useful varieties is the Shasta Daisy. You can choose from single or double, frilly or plain, tall or short varieties, all of which bloom ever-so-freely. You'll find a wide range of Shasta Daisies available at your nursery right now, ready for planting wherever you want a sturdy, free-blooming white perennial.

The flowers are excellent for cutting, and enjoying indoors.

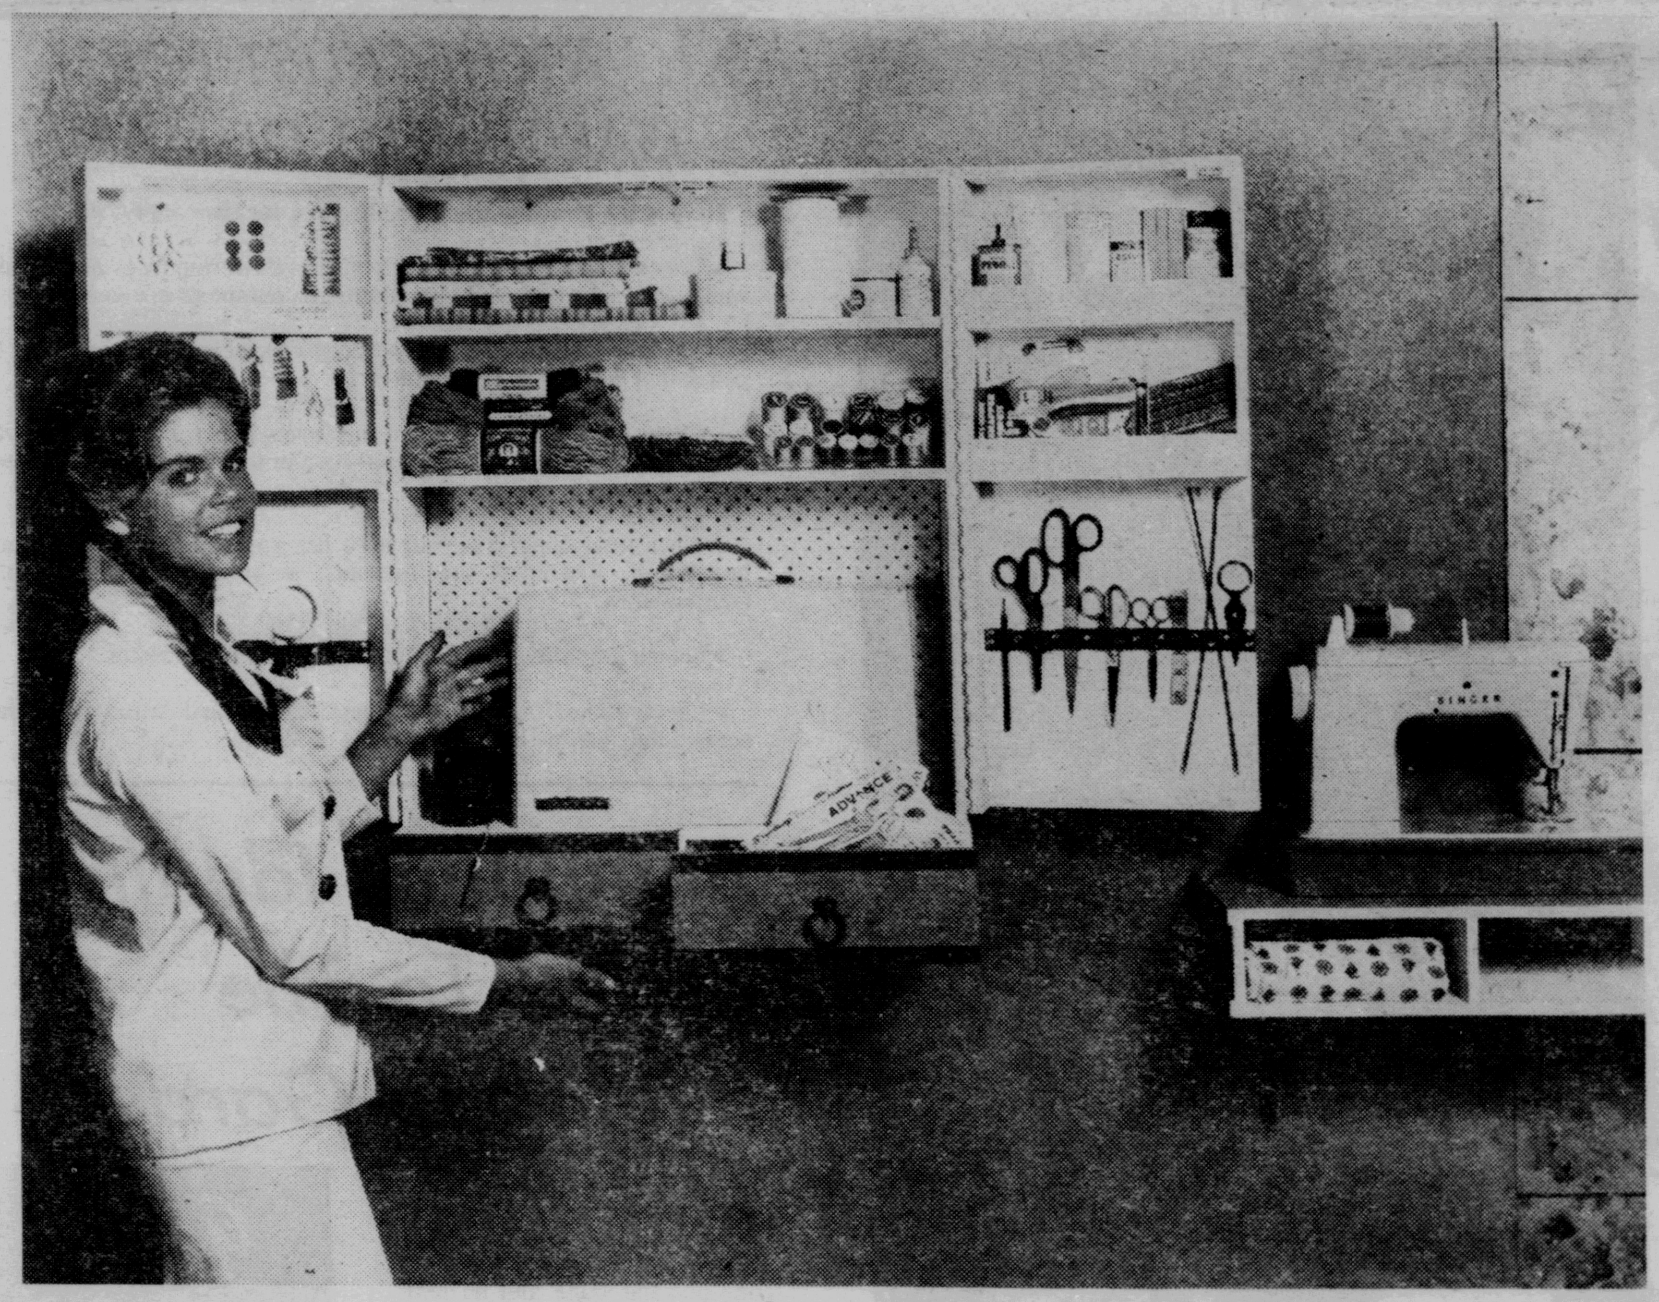
There are white, yellow and pink Marguerites; each has its own growth characteristics. The white one is the most vigorous grower, achieving up to four feet in height. The daisy-like blooms all but smother the plant.



Handyman's Pages

FOR THE homemaker who would love to have a sewing center "except we simply do not have the space," there is an answer to the dilemma: a fold-away, space-saving wall cabinet. For a dollar, sent to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif. 91409, you can request and receive Pattern No. 405 on how to build a sewing center shown at left. Add 25 cents for air mail delivery. The entire cabinet is built of half-inch plywood, with butt joints fastened together with glue and finishing nails. It provides storage not only for sewing supplies but also for a portable machine. Along with special places for patterns, thread, fabrics, buttons, scissors, etc., there are two roomy drawers at the bottom for miscellaneous articles. Actress Sara Lane is the pretty miss in the photo.

New Hardboard Sidings: Labor-Savers, Dent-Resisters

Vertical Panels, Horizontal Laps Come In Diversity Of Patterns

If your son throws a wild pitch that sends a baseball smack into the side of your house, will the siding be damaged?

That depends on what you have on the outside of your house.

CONSIDERABLE attention and research has been devoted by the building industry in recent years to the development of exterior siding materials, many of them maintenance-free. All too often, however, the new materials had drawbacks, such as brittleness or susceptibility to impact.

Builders have known for many years that hardboard paneling, because of its density, is practically dentproof indoors. The same quality has made exterior hardboard ideal for siding.

Some residential builders use it for as much as 80 per cent of the homes they build, not only for siding but for soffits, fascia, porch ceilings, eaves, overhangs, and even for decorative devices such as cupolas and under-window panels.

To avoid bad weather delays and cut on-site labor costs, they often fabricate and pre-assemble gable ends and other hardboard components in a shop, then truck the units to the building site. Or they can buy ready-made accessories from the hardboard suppliers.

Exterior hardboard is easy to handle and can be sawed and nailed without being chipped, split or dented. And if workmen accidentally walk on a long piece of the siding, there's no breakage or damage from scuffing and heel marks, builders report.

HARDBOARD siding, fabricated in both vertical panels and horizontal lap boards, goes up swiftly for additional on-site labor saving. Both panels and the lap siding are available in several designs, including smooth, striated, and wood textured, either primed or pre-finished.

The panels, some of them V-grooved or U-grooved, come in standard widths and lengths, including a 16-foot panel for two-story houses.

EXTERIOR HARDBOARD is a wood product that can take a beating from workmen and the weather. The lap siding shown here has a rustic, wood-like texture with eye-pleasing, deep shadow lines. Other exterior hardboards come in smooth, striated or grooved panels.

A Facelifting For Your Fireplace

Fireplaces oftentimes lag behind the rest of the house in modernization, so if yours isn't a huge stone fixture you may want to give it a facelifting.

Many fireplace walls have too many ins and outs — projecting mantels, recesed bookcases alongside, and cluttered shelves.

Paneling the wall is an easy way to update it. First step is to remove the mantel and frame out the wall with furring strips.

Then nail tongue-and-groove boards over the furring. Vertical grain western hemlock flooring makes a handsome wall, as do ponderosa pine, sugar pine or resawn cedar paneling.

Wood molding may be added as a frame for the brick or marble facing of the opening, mitered for a snug fit against the paneling.

If the space is there, consider adding a built-in cupboard for storing fuel adjacent to the fireplace.

The updated fireplace wall may be sealed and stained, either with a tint or clear stain, simply waxed or left unfinished.

THE AMERICAN Plywood Association has created this two-way storage divider that provides a new means for separating adjacent rooms while giving both access to a handy shelf area. It can be used, for example, to divide a kitchen from a family or living room to give both areas greater privacy and to shut off the clatter and appliance noise of the kitchen. It is designed with a drop-leaf desk and shelves that can accommodate stereo equipment, records, tapes and other space-consuming items on its front side, while providing cupboards for china and glassware on the rear side. Much of the shelf space is open for display of decorative items, but there are also storage drawers providing undercover spots for small clutter-creating items. The contemporary look lent to the divider by the curved edges of the sliding doors can be sharpened by alternating the shelf colors in bright-coordinated hues. The plans for this useful and decorative plywood shelving wall can be obtained for 25 cents from American Plywood Association, 1119 A Street, Tacoma, Wash., 98401. Ask for Handy Plan No. 59-660.

Some Ceiling Decorating Tricks That Will Give A Room A Lift

One of the quickest, easiest and most inexpensive ways to give any room a lift is to decorate the ceiling.

This large — and often ignored — area can be used to effectively highlight decor, or offer a solution for "problem" rooms.

HERE ARE some useful eye-fooling tips:

Low ceilings look higher with a white or delicate tint. On the other hand, high ceilings in an older home appear lower when a darker hue is used.

If you have a large expanse of glass, tile the ceiling and paint the opposite wall with a deeper color. The room will lose much of its glare and take on a dramatic appearance. Aqua, blue or green ceiling tile accents will help to bring out the richness of tone and grain in wood paneling.

Tile and lay-in panels are available in more than 250 designs with a completely factory-finished surface. Textured or embossed designs can add an interesting note to a room. Fissured tile simulates the look of travertine marble.

ACOUSTICAL ceiling tile has fissures or tiny holes. They can absorb up to 70 per cent of the excess noise within a room, claims the Acoustical and Insulating Materials Association.

Don't Let Scraps Pile Up

Better Homes and Gardens' "Handyman's Book" offers these helpful suggestions for preventing the accumulation of scrap materials around your workshop:

Throw away most scraps of ordinary one-inch-thick lumber. Its common use continually produces more pieces you'll be able to use.

Throw away most scraps from cutoff sawing. They are difficult to work with and seldom prove useful.

Save larger ripping scraps for cleats, nailing strips, and so on. They may save your ripping a good board.

Save scraps of five-quarter or full two-inch thick stock. These slightly thicker pieces are very often useful.

Save scraps of plywood for use as corner braces and for other uses where its two-way strength makes it essential.

Save nearly every scrap of the expensive cabinet woods. The larger pieces can make attractice assessories.

Save useful lengths of moldings, especially types you've used in the house. They will simplify matching for repairs to existing moldings.

Store small scraps of ordinary lumber in a tall cardboard carton. When the box is full, burn it, scraps and all, and start over again with a new, empty box.

Don't let scraps and shavings pile up so as to constitute a fire hazard. It is better to buy new than to risk a fire. A sound storage place can minimize that risk.

While wood scraps make good fireplace starters, never use painted lumber for that purpose. Too much smoke.

A Weekend Project: Cedar In The Closet

Want to be a handyman and save money on home improvements?

The way to start is to undertake an easy project, one that will be inexpensive and satisfying.

A good "starter project" for the unpracticed handyman is lining closets with aromatic red cedar.

EVEN THE unhandiest do-it-yourselfer can accomplish a closet-lining project with ease over a weekend — and usually for a cost of less than $65.

Housewives who sometimes frown on their hubby's home improvement ideas usually change their tune when they learn he's going to build a moth-repellent storage area.

The job is easy because it requires only a hammer and saw. Each piece of red cedar closet lining is tongue-and-grooved to simplify fitting. Cedar closet lining is sold at lumberyards in packages, each containing pieces of random or uniform lengths.

IT'S SIMPLE to figure how much material is needed.

Multiply the height and width. A section three by eight would require 24 square feet of material. When making calculations, don't forget to include the floor and ceiling as well as the inside of the closet door.

The reason for lining the closet completely is to achieve maximum protection from moths.

The appealing feature of lining a closet with red cedar, from the novice handyman's view, is that it can be applied directly over the old wall surface. First, of course, clear the wall of any fixtures or hooks.

CEDAR SHOULD be applied from the bottom up. Place the first piece of cedar, groove down, in a horizontal position at the bottom of a wall. If it is too long, cut it to fit.

The best way to fasten cedar strips to the wall is with small finishing nails. Nail into the stud, which can be located by tapping the wall with a hammer. When the tapping has a flat sound, the stud has been located. To be certain, drive a nail.

After the closet lining has been applied, trim the closet with quarter-round cedar molding. Check the door to be certain it closes tightly. If it doesn't, use weather-stripping to insure an airtight area.

Cedar shelves are recommended, too.

THE STEREO SCENE

Some Pop Albums From A & M

By JOHN SUNIER

One of the most satisfying and beautiful albums I have had the pleasure of hearing in many a moon is "The Winter Consort" (A & M 4170). Never has there been an LP so completely un-pigeon-hole-able.

The titles may look classical, what with "Allemande" by Weiss, "Little Train of the Caipira" by Villa-Lobos, or a Chorale by the organ composer Alain, but the glorious chamber sound often swings — and in a manner so tasteful as to make everything from Alec Templeton to Switched-on Bach sound crude. Instrumentation includes lute, cello, sax horn, English horn, alto flute, marimba and others.

I'm wearing this one out already; please let's have more quickly from imaginative former modern-jazzman Paul Winter and his Consort!

OUR NEXT ALBUM says it was "recorded by Denis and Craig at home, Sausalito," and is titled "Lambert and Nuttycombe at Home" (A & M 4250).

The contents are two young men and their acoustic guitars, with a dozen quiet, harmonious and tuneful duets, mostly their own originals. Best of the bunch is probably the opener, the tender "Morning." Very nice unamplified and sensitive music-making, boys.

"Sea Train" (A & M 4171) is one of the outgrowths of the former "Blues Project," and retains a strong influence of modern jazz with sax and flute featured, as well as some swinging violin. Their sound on the eight originals is finely honed and tasteful, much as the Winter Consort, but much more in the rock vein. Titles are difficult to spotlight — tunes seem to flow into one another.

PROCOL HARUM IS easily one of the very best of the British groups, yet has been generally ignored since their big hit, "A Whiter Shade of Pale." Their work is always concise and polished, yet they can shake it up like the Stones when they wish to.

Their albums usually have a theme, and this time it is obviously nautical in "A Salty Dog" (A & M 4179). The title tune, with a big fat orchestral backing, keeps up the theme, as does "Wreck of the Hesperus."

An astounding variety of instruments are heard, most of them seemingly played by lead vocalist Gary Brooker, who wrote many of the fascinating tunes as well.

BRAVO PROCOL Harum, and bravo A & M, for setting such high standards of musicianship and good taste as evidenced by all the above pop albums.

If owner Herb Alpert has anything to do with these policies, he deserves high praise and full freedom to go on bleating out his Tiajuana brassiness from now til Doomsday.

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

Surprise! Bob Hope will be on the telecast of the movies' Oscar Award ceremonies on NBC April 15. It will be only his 16th Oscar participation.

CBS will telecast one of the first-round games of New York's National Invitation Tournament for college basketball teams on March 21, and the championship game March 28. Both are aired at 1 p.m. EST.

Rex Harrison is busy in England making a television version of Anton Chekhov's "Platanov," a play in which he starred in London in 1960. The work will be recorded in March and shown on British television at the end of the year.

Now that he has established his new television series, "The Smith Family," on ABC, Henry Fonda has found time for stage work. He will star in "The Trial of A. Lincoln" for four weeks in April at Los Angeles' Huntington Hartford Theater. He also is scheduled to appear in this James Damico drama on Broadway next fall.

Lucille Ball will be one of the guest stars on Jack Benny's March 10 special on NBC.

Rock Hudson will make his television dramatic debut in a forthcoming "NBC World Premiere Movie" entitled "McMillan and Wife," a suspense comedy in which he plays a police commissioner with a madcap frau, played by Susan Saint James. No air date as yet.

"Once Upon a Wheel," an ABC special about auto racing to be seen April 18, will have Paul Newman as narrator and participant in this behind-the-scenes look at this sport. The star is a devoted racing buff.

David Janssen stars in the title role of "O'Hara, United States Treasury," a two-hour television movie directed by Jack Webb for CBS.

Gilbert Roland Stays Fit Exercising, Busy Acting

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Gilbert Roland has been integrated in the cast of "High Chaparral" and may find himself starring in a series of his own next year as a result.

Former husband o the late Constance Bennet, Roland has been married the past 16 years to Guillermina, a chic Mexican lass who was at one time a junior tennis champion in Mexico.

And a good thing, too. Gilbert plays tennis almost every day when he isn't working. He is a charter member of the Beverly Hills Tennis Club where he has been a singles and doubles champion off and on for years.

HE AND Guillermina play doubles at the Jack Warner home and on Dinah Shore's court.

Roland, who is approaching 70, looks as if he were in his 50s.

In addition to a minimum of two sets of tennis a day, Roland spends an hour each morning exercising.

He uses no machines or weights. Roland does situps, pushups and other body exercises that keep him slender and tough as rawhide. His waist is a meager 28 inches.

THE ROLAND home is an English cottage in the heart of everly Hills. Guillermina has decorated it with white carpeting and draperies. The furniture is modern and comfortable.

GILBERT ROLAND

Lorinda won New York's Guggenheim and Tiffany awards for sculpture. It is modern and stunning.

Roland, of Spanish descent, was born in Mexico where his father was a distinguished bullfighter. Gil returns to the land of his birth once or twice a year driving to Mexico City or Acapulco.

"I don't like to take the plane because you don't have the chance to talk to people and get to know them," he explains.

In the evenings Gilbert and Guillermina enjoy watching television in his den. He is especially fond of sports.

On weekends during the season Gilbert drives across the U.S.-Mexico border to Tijuana where he has four of the best seats reserved for the bullfight in the new arena there.

At other times Lorinda, who lives at the family home, joins her father and stepmother at the beach. Roland is a sun worshiper and spends hours basking poolside at the Beverly Hills Tennis Club.

BECAUSE HE does not work every day, Roland has set aside a regimen whereby he writes short sories and scripts, some of which he hopes will be purchased by television with — of course — a fat role for himself.

All three members of the household speak Spanish at all times unless there is company. But they switch to English the moment they leave home.

Mexican food is steady fare under Roland's roof and he thrives on it.

"My father once told me to drink wine every day," Gilbert concludes. "Wine is good for your soul, the beauty of your heart and the tranquility of your life."

Construction Ban Threat Casts Heavy Pall

By MARY LEYDECKER

The mere threat of a housing construction ban because of Richardson Bay pollution has thrown a heavy pall on Mill Valley area developers and builders, who contend such a ban would ruin them.

The thought that voters in the area probably would cheer their demise and cheerfully vote against any project that would allow future building sends the developers off for more aspirin.

Gathered around a table in a real estate office yesterday, a group of developers, builders, engineers, architects, land owners and city and sanitary district officials mulled over its common problem.

Under discussion was a threat made Feb. 25 by the Regional Water Quality Control Board that all new construction may be banned in Mill Valley and the Richardson Bay Sanitary District area if new tough sewage treatment standards are not met.

The men from the construction industry were pleased to learn from Mill Valley city engineer Stanley M. Bala that new construction is not what is causing the main problem, but were gloomy about solving the problem.

Bala told the group that he thought the water quality control board had worked with two-year-old information in assessing the sewage situation and added that Mill Valley has spent over $600,000 to improve its sewage system since 1967.

"We've done more than any other city of 12,000 anywhere," he said.

Bala saw the board's stand as having two aspects. First, the board is dissatisfied with sewage lines in the old sections of Mill Valley which allow infiltration during storms, and secondly, the treatment of sewage does not come up to the new standards.

"I think they're telling us that we have to take our sewage to the ocean but they haven't said so in words," Bala said in reference to the new high standards for effluents dumped into Richardson Bay.

He said that a ban on new housing would not affect residents in the older areas of Mill Valley and that in fact they probably would be pleased about it.

As for a $400,000 sewage bond proposal that the city is considering for July, Bala said that the money would be a "drop in the bucket" toward reaching the water quality control board standards.

Futher, Councilman Jerome C. Hauke told the group that if "Mill Valley people think that the bond issue would allow development, they'll vote against it."

Bala said that "each new house pays more than its share" toward sewage systems, and a developer, Edward H. Kuykendall, added, "Everyone in this room would happily agree to doubling sewage connection fees" if that would solve the problem.

Bala added that the regional board doesn't seem to understand that threatening to stop new construction will have no effect on getting residents in the older sections of Mill Valley to fix up their sewage lines.

That the ban threat is already being felt in the construction industry was confirmed by many at the gathering.

Dean A. Rhodes, a civil engineer, said that his office has stopped work on three of five subdivisions that were in the planning stage because "there's no sense in going ahead with something if a month from now you're not going to be able to proceed."

(The regional water board will meet again March 25 in Hayward to consider replies from the sanitary districts about its ultimatum and could issue an order that no new sewage hookups be permitted until its standards are met.)

Kuykendall said that while he is going ahead with an 18-lot subdivision, if the ban went into effect, "I'd go broke in a year."

Timothy O'Donoghue, another developer, agreed the ban could cause him "to lose a lot of money," and blamed the Richardson Bay Sanitary District for "doing nothing for years."

He strongly advocated raising sewage connection fees for new houses in order to help solve the problem.

Real estate man Jeffory Moreshead, who called the meeting, told of lot sales under way which had been halted because he couldn't guarantee clients they could get sewage hookup.

"The real victims will be the people who rent apartments or houses," said architect Edmund C. Heine Jr., who predicted a rise in rents if new housing is halted.

Although Bala said that "if we had all the money we needed it would take four or five years" to meet board standards, Councilman Hauke said that he was "optimistic" that the ban will not be imposed.

CEASE-FIRE

Egypt Likely To Accept Military Restraint Plea

By United Press International

Political sources in Cairo said today Egypt will probably accept the call by United Nations Secretary General Thant for military restraint when the cease-fire in the Middle East expires Sunday but reject any formal extension of the truce.

The Cairo sources spoke after Egypt's semiofficial newspaper, Al Ahram, said today Egypt would agree to a cease-fire extension only if the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France promise to persuade Israel to withdraw from occupied Arab lands.

The cease-fire began last August.

Egypt's position will be announced by President Anwar Sadat in a speech Sunday night, Cairo sources said. These informants said Sadar would announce that Egypt does not plan to renew hostilities unless its diplomatic efforts are exhausted but would not reject the idea that military action may be the only way to achieve a solution.

As the expiration of the truce approached, the Suez Canal front was quiet but reports from the waterway said Israeli troops were wearing helmets and flak jackets as a precaution against renewed fighting.

On the eve of the cease-fire, Israeli troops clashed with Arab guerrillas on its Syrian and Jordanian fronts. A military spokesman said three guerrillas were killed including two along the Jordan frontier and one in the occupied Syrian Golan Heights while Israeli troops suffered no casualties.

Israel made it clear it accepts U.N. Secretary General Thant's appeal for a cease-fire extension but resents his urging for more consideration to a full withdrawal from lands seized in the 1967 war.

"We do not need any foreigners to advise us or Egypt on how to draw up peace maps," said Israeli Deputy Premier Yigal Allon. "We prefer direct negotiations.

"Our heart is open for a generous solution, not as victors but as equals among equals," Allon said. "Therefore, the sooner Egypt rids itself of its illusion (about total withdrawal, the better it is for her."

Israel's government-run radio station criticized today Thant's report delivered Friday, saying it was a "mendacious prevarication" that "brazenly flaunted" quiet diplomacy.

"The Secretary General has clearly violated in his report the ground rules of quiet diplomacy," the Israeli radio said.

The Egyptian viewpoint was front-paged in Al Ahram, which said the idea was passed on to the Big Four powers.

"Egypt is not interested in an appeal by the Big Four to refrain from firing," Al Ahram said. "More is needed—a clear condemnation of Israel and a clear pledge of positive action to implement the (U.N.) Security Council resolution (of Nov. 22, 1967) particularly its first provision which is Israeli withdrawal," Al Ahram said.

The newspaper said Egypt based its position on the following:

—An extension of the cease-fire is not acceptable because Israel had declared in an official document to the United Nations that it refused to withdraw to the June 4, 1967 borders.

The Egyptian viewpoint was passed on to British Ambassador Sir Richard Beaumont who met with Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad, Al Ahram said.

In Cairo, Palestinian commando leaders failed to achieve their declared aim of national unity, guerrilla sources said.

The sources said a meeting of the Palestinian National Council failed to establish a unified body to takeover political and military command of the various factions of the guerrilla movement.

Impasse In Union, Rail Talks

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The United Transportation Union and the nation's railroads tried again today to break the impasse in their contract talks, with the 15,000 train crewmen in the UTU ready to begin selective strikes if the stalemate continued.

The bargaining at the Labor Department resumed shortly before noon following a long session Friday at which spokesmen said no progress was made.

Assistant Labor Secretary W. J. Usery Jr., the government's chief mediator in the year-and-a-half old dispute, started today's negotiations by meeting separately with union and management officials. Prospects for joint bargaining later were uncertain.

Labor Department spokesmen said neither side had shown any new willingness to make concessions on the main unresolved issue of work rules, with management demanding that they be revised to increase operating efficiency and union leaders resisting any move that might reduce jobs.

Usery said a nationwide work stoppage appeared unlikely but that walkouts against selected rail lines could begin at any time.

The UTU's members have been free to walk off their jobs since last Sunday night when congressional legislation which ended a one-day strike last Dec. 10 expired.

The union has expressed willingness to accept pay increases of 44 per cent over three years, a figure accepted by three other unions that joined in the December walkout.

But UTU negotiators have balked at accepting work rules changes proposed by a White House panel and advocated by railroad management.

Spokesmen said one of the main unresolved issues was management's demand for work rule changes to permit more so-called "interdivisional runs" which usually exceed 100 miles and do not require any change of crew personnel.

Another point at issue appeared to be the UTU's demand for an increase in the allowance given crewmen for away-from-home expenses.

Union negotiators have refused to accept the proposed work rules changes without commensurate pay increases.

The talks broke down briefly early Thursday and a strike appeared imminent. But the UTU agreed to go back to the bargaining table after Usery held a breakfast meeting with union officials.

S. Vietnam Claims Sepone Capture

Main Objective Of 27-Day Laos Drive

SAIGON (UPI)—A force of 2,000 South Vietnamese advancing after heavy U.S. air attacks swept aside light Communist resistance today and claimed capture of the Ho Chi Minh Trail hub of Sepone, main objective of South Vietnam's 27-day-old offensive in Laos.

Field reports said South Vietnamese commanders counted 283 Communist bodies and took 13 Vietnamese prisoners in the charred ruins of Sepone where a huge cache of weapons and ammunition was found. An official communique announcing the seizure of Sepone said South Vietnamese casualities were light.

Most of the Communist dead were apparently slain by U.S. air strikes and artillery which supported the South Vietnamese push against Sepone, 27 miles deep in Laos.

Jubilant South Vietnamese officers at Khe Sanh, the support base in South Vietnam for the offensive said South Vietnamese troops will push even deeper into Laos from Sepone to inflict further damage on the Ho Chi Minh Trail, North Vietnam's lifeline to troops in South Vietnam and Cambodia.

Muong Phine, 14 miles southeast of Sepone, was mentioned by some commanders as the next target of the Laos offensive involving 20,000 South Vietnamese troops.

Communist gunners shelled Khe Sanh today, and field reports said two Americans were killed.

About 12 hours later, a barrage of Communist rockets struck the U.S. Army support base at Quang Tri, 40 miles east of the Laotian border, UPI correspondent Barney Seibert reported. There was no immediate word on casualties or damage.

The unit which pushed into Sepone discovered a one-square-mile supply dump crammed with at least 1,000 tons of rice and canned goods as well as munitions and other war materiel. Sepone was described as the main transshipment point on the Ho Chi Minh Trail winding south out of North Vietnam through a myriad of roads, paths and passages into South Vietnam and Cambodia.

South Vietnamese president Nguyen Van Thieu sent congratulations to victorious units at Sepone. The South Vietnamese radio and television network interrupted regular programs for special news bulletins announcing the capture of the town.

U.S. Troops Will Leave Korean DMZ

SEOUL (UPI) — After 18 years American troops today were preparing their final withdrawal from the Korean demilitarized Zone (DMZ) where 33 Americans have been slain since the Armistice was signed in 1953.

The pullback will give Washington more flexibility in deciding whether or not to commit American men to war if fighting should break out again in the peninsula.

The withdrawal from the DMZ is part of the general cutback that will lower the number of American troops in Korea from 63,000 to 43,000 by June.

Although the Pentagon has been advertising the cutback as primarily a money-saver, high U.S. military officers in Seoul said the major reason was to get Americans away from the immediate area of the DMZ.

"The main purpose of the withdrawal was to get our boys off the front line. If the bayonets coming across the DMZ go into American boys, we're committed to war," one officer said.

He said if no American blood were shed in a North Korean invasion, the United States might not want to commit its forces.

American officers believe the South Koreans soon will be able to handle any North Korean invasion successfully and alone —provided that Chinese or Russian forces do not also pour across the DMZ.

These officers caution, however, what this will be true only if Congress comes through with enough money to modernize Soul's forces. South Korea recently asked for about $1 billion for new equipment to modernize its forces. U.S. military sources would not put a price tag on the amount they believe Korea needs since that would depend on how much was

W. Berlin Hopeful Of East Passes

BERLIN (UPI)—West Berliners today hoped to receive passes to visit friends and relatives in East Berlin for the first time in nearly five years.

The question of passes for Easter formed the basis of talks between a West Berlin delegation and East German officials at the government building in East Berlin.

West Berlin government sources said Ullrich Mueller, head of the Western delegation, had instructions to discuss only Easter passes in his talks with Guenter Kohrt, state secretary in the East German foreign ministry.

When he first offered the negotiations last week, East German Premier Willi Stoph suggested the agenda include a general dialogue on the East-West Berlin situation. But West Berlin Mayor Klaus Schuetz has made it clear that border questions on Berlin, such as traffic access to West Berlin, should be dealt with only in the current round of meetings here of the Big Four ambassadors.

On Wednesday, and again on Friday, Communist border guards halted traffic

Kidnapped Quartet Believed Still Alive

ANKARA, Turkey (UPI)—U.S. Embassy officials said today four kidnapped American servicemen were believed to be alive despite the fact that the deadline for their threatened execution had passed.

Leftist demonstrations touched off by the abductions flared anew. U. S. Ambassador William J. Handley issued a new appeal to the kidnappers — "The Turkish People's Liberation Army — to free the four U. S. Air Force men.

"It is my fervent hope that those who are holding the American airmen will heed this appeal and release the men soon and safely," Handley said.

About 400 leftist students blocked the main highway linking Izmir, a port on Turkey's Aegean coast and a major operations point for U.S. forces, with Istanbul to the northeast.

Firing pistols in the air and exploding dynamite and gasoline bombs, the students held the road for an hour. Witnesses said police did not intervene, although student barricades blocked traffic in both directions. The students eventually dispersed after protesting a move by police and army troops into Ankara's Middle East Technical University.

Ankara remained quiet.

Ambassador Handley said American officials assumed the kidnaped airmen were still alive more than three hours after the dawn deadline for their execution expired.

Mrs. Barbara Sexton, of San Angelo, Tex. wife of one of the kidnapped men, appealed today in a newspaper interview for her husband's life.

"We need Jimmie for my son, for myself and for my family," Mrs. Sexton was quoted as saying. "Please give him back."

One of the kidnapped men issued an appeal Friday night saying "Help us, I want to live."

The Turkish government rejected the kidnappers demands for ransom by failing to broadcast acceptance by the 6 a.m. (11 p.m. Friday EST) deadline.

Government security officials said they expected any indication of what happened to the Americans to come in a note the kidnappers presumably would deliver to Ankara newspapers and broadcasting stations. That was how the kidnappers had made previous demands known.

Diplomatic sources said U.S. Ambassador WilliamJ. Handley called on Foreign Ministry Secretary-General Orhan Eralp and advised him the United States wanted the men back safely. But embassy sources said the decision whether to

KARACHI, Pakistan (UPI)—President Mohamad Yahya Khan, in a move to end political chaos in East Pakistan, announced today the National Assembly will meet on March 25 to draft a new constitution.

The assembly was scheduled to meet in Dacca, East Pakistan, last Wednesday, but Yahya postponed it because of a conflict between the country's two major political leaders, Sheikh Mujibur Rehman of the Awami League in East Pakistan, and Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, of West Pakistan's People's party.

The postponement touched off a general strike, called by Mujibur, and widespread protest riots in East Pakistan. The unofficial death toll stood at 173.

The assembly is charged with framing a constitution as a first step to restoring parliamentary democracy after 12 years of military rule.

Yahya, in a nationwide radio broadcast, appealed to political leaders to help end the crisis. He said he hoped the national assembly would produce "a lasting constitution" to provide "security, integrity and solidarity" in the nation.

The political crisis arose from the Awami League's six-point plan that, among other things, would give East Pakistan virtual autonomy except in defense and foreign affairs. Bhutto, contending that home rule for East Pakistan would weaken the central government in West Pakistan, threatened to boycott the assembly, and it was postponed. The Awami League has 160 seats in the National Assembly, while Bhutto holds 65.

West Pakistan, with about 85 per cent of the nation's land mass and only 45 per cent of

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

28 Fire Deaths

ZURICH, Switzerland (UPI) —Fire and dense smoke swept through one wing of a Zurich University clinic where 60 aged, mentally disturbed persons were sleeping early today.

Police said 28 persons died behind the clinic's barred windows and locked doors. Two other patients were in serious condition from smoke inhalation.

Police said the fire began about dawn and was probably caused by a hospital orderly's electric heater.

Candidate Fever

MADISON, Wis. (UPI)—Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., has told newsmen it would be accurate to describe him as a potential presidential candidate.

Bayh said Friday he would be "sorely tempted to enter the Wisconsin primary next year because it is an important stepping stone to the White House."

He said that if he were President, he would increase the tempo of negotiations in the Indochina conflict, set a timetable for U.S. withdrawal from Southeast Asia and get an answer to the prisoner of war issue.

Jobless Count

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—The ranks of California's unemployed shrunk to 6.7 per cent in February but the rate continued well above the national figure, the state government reported Friday.

The state figure fell off from 7 per cent in January—the biggest one-month decline since November 1968. The national rate dropped last month from 6 to 5.8 per cent.

There were 696,000 Californians unemployed last month—an increase of 15,000 from January and 182,000 above the figure for February 1970.

The 6.7 per cent figure represented the number of persons in the California work force who were jobless.

Kidnap Suspects

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) —Interior Minister Lorenzo Fernandez announced Friday the capture of the kidnapers of Leon Taurel, 13, son of a department store owner, and recovery of the record $880,000 ransom paid for the child's release.

Police arrested more than a dozen persons Friday and Fernandez said the boy was released Thursday at a mountain village 30 miles west of Caracas.

The ransom exceeded the $600,000 paid for the release of Bobby Greenlease, 6, who was kidnaped Sept. 28, 1953, in Kansas City, Mo., then slain.

Judge's Threat To Pushers Of Heroin

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI)-A Florida judge sentenced an 18-year-old youth to prison for possession of heroin Friday and then warned he would consider killing anyone who addicted his son.

"I personally would be willing to shoot and kill any person who addicted my son to heroin and would be willing to be hanged or electrocuted for the murder, said criminal court Judge Russell McIntosh.

Another Storm In The Midwest

By United Press International

The southern plains and midwest endured the beating of another winter storm early today, while New York State counted eight storm-related deaths from the last one and all of New England was digging its way out of snow drifts.

Travelers warnings were posted from northeast New Mexico to north Illinois as snow, sleet and rain cut a swath through the nation's midsection.

Up to eight inches of snow piled up in central Iowa. Moderate to locally heavy snow extended from southern Wisconsin and northern Illinois to eastern Colorado and Kansas.

An eight-inch blanket of new snow shrouded North Platte, Neb., and six inches covered Scottsbluff, Neb., early today. Many schools in the area were closed Friday because of snow drifts.

Light thunderstorms and showers covered central Illinois and Missouri. Three-quarters inch hail pounded Springfield, Mo. this morning.

In the northeast, winter resort operators appeared pleased with their overgenerous supply of snow.

A spokesman at Holiday Mountain in the Catskills, asked if the ski center was operating at capacity, said, "What capacity? We can always put a few more on the slopes."

New York State reported eight deaths, four caused by vehicles stalled in drifts. At least six persons died near Montreal after the worst 24-hour snowstorm ever hit Canada's largest city.

Officials in Montreal said the dig-out would take ten days and cost $2 million to $3 million dollars.

"Everything is plugged. As soon as we plow it out, the winds blow the snow right back in behind the plow," Grand Isle, Vt., Civil Defense Director Charles Cassidy said.

Many major highways and most back roads in Vermont remained closed Friday. Most schools in the state were closed and bus and air transportation was at a virtual standstill.

Snowmobiles provided the only method of transportation in several rural counties of northern New York State. A 273-mile stretch of the state thruway, clogged by 10-foot snowdrifts, was cleared late Friday.

The U.S.-Canadian border north of Plattsburgh, N.Y., was closed for the first time this winter due to huge drifts.

Booneville, the New York snow capital recorded an 80-inch mantle of snow on the ground, including three feet of new snow.

Humble Claims 'No Sabotage'

LINDEN, N.J. (UPI)—No evidence of sabotage was unearthed by the Humble Oil Co. in its investigation of the massive explosion at its main refinery here Dec. 5.

The company said Thursday the cause probably was an overheated reactor wall. The reactor wall had "a localized overheating ... not resulting from anything that happened outside the reactor," the company said.

Local officials had suspected sabotage, because an anonymous male telephoned police headquarters just 90 minutes before the explosion, and threatened that the Humble refinery would "burn, burn, burn."

Another Riot Death In Belfast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — British riot troops opened fire on a Roman Catholic bomb throwing crowd early today killing one civilian and wounding two others, an army spokesman said.

The troops opened fire after warning a crowd of youths who had attacked an armored vehicle with gasoline and nail bombs.

The fatality brought the death toll in the province to 14 this year—including nine civilians, three soldiers and two policemen.

The violence has been going on more than two years and results from contention of Northern Ireland's Roman Catholic minority that the predominantly Protestant government discriminates against Catholics, particularly in jobs, housing and voting.

At the same time, paratroopers swept through alleys of the working-class district to seize stocks of gasoline bombs being guarded by women and children.

At least five soldiers were injured by nail bomb attacks which began early Friday and lasted into the early hours of the morning. At least six men and a woman were arrested by troops.

An army patrol was fired upon in Catholic White Rock area and a sniper fired at a sentry in North Howard Street. One bullet lodged in the sentry's bulletproof jacket but there were no injuries in either incident.

Troops fought with Catholic youths in at least four areas, in the Ardoyne, where two policemen were killed last week, in North Queen's street and in the Springfield Road area.

Apollo 14 Moonrocks Puzzle To Scientists

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI)—Apollo 14 returned the oldest and most puzzling moonrocks yet seen by man, a team of lunar scientists said Friday.

Scientists said the Apollo 14 rocks were fragments of several types of rocks fused together by meteorite impacts billions of years ago and may be part of the original lunar crust.

One of the samples that escaped the battering was a gem-like sphere "that looks like a small Chinese checker," said Dr. Howard Wilshire, a lunar geologist.

He said the stone was "too pretty" to be scarred by testing and would be stored for safekeeping. Wilshire said one of the astronauts remarked it would be pretty as a ring or pendant for his wife.

"We're dealing with a very complicated group of rocks," Dr. Robin Brett, vice chairman of the preliminary investigation team, said at a news conference at the Manned Spacecraft Center.

"If we had got rocks as complicated as this on Apollo 11, we would have really just about gone out of our minds, because on Apollo 11, nobody knew what to expect at all. Fortunately, the rocks were relatively simple compared to these," Brett said.

Dr. Michael B. Duke, curator of the lunar receiving laboratory where the rocks are inspected and tested, said he expected tests next month would date the Apollo 14 samples from 3.5 to 4.5 billion years old.

Most of the solid, crystaline rocks gathered from the lunar maria or seas by Apollo 11 and 12 averaged 3.2 to 3.4 billion years old and were formed from molten rocks that cooled, scientists believe.

The Apollo 14 samples "presumably were emplaced on the lunar surface before the maria were formed and have gone through a continual battering and hammering by meteorites," Duke said.

Emergency Surgery In Ambulance Dash

LONDON (UPI)—A doctor performed an emergency throat operation on a 17-year-old boy during a 50 mile per hour jolting ambulance dash to a hospital, a hospital spokesman said today.

Dr. Abdur Rahim, 30, said he noticed the condition of Harry Bywater deteriorating during a 40-mile drive from Bedford General Hospital to London. He performed a tracheotomy on the boy, cutting into his throat and inserting a tube to assist his breathing.

Plea Made To Drunken Driving

Don Edward O'Brien, 32, of Novato, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of drunken driving.

A jury trial was set for Aug. 16.

O'Brien was one of five persons arrested early yesterday after high-speed chases by the California Hghway Patrol on Marin highways.

The other persons arrested are to appear in municipal court Monday.

O'Brien was arrested on Highway 101 near Corte Madera after a chase at speeds of up to 120 miles an hour, the highway patrol reported.

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI)—Alberto Dines, managing editor of the newspaper Jornal do Brasil, was freed Friday night after five hours' questioning by political police, a spokesman for the newspaper said today.

Alioto Will Let Height Rule Stand

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Mayor Joseph Alioto won't veto that city ordinance limiting building heights along the waterfront.

Alioto, who opposed the measure which blocked U.S. Steel Corporation's plans for a 550-foot skyscraper in the area, said Friday he would let it become law without his signature.

The measure limits waterfront to 84 feet along about 90 per cent of the waterfront and 175 feet in an area near the Ferry Building.

In a four-page message Friday announcing his decision, the mayor said he planned to "bring together the various community elements with legitimate interests to create a plan for the rational and balanced treatment of the entire waterfront."

He indicated new legislation might then be proposed on the waterfront height issue.

Supervisors passed the height limit by a 6-3 vote.

Alioto said a veto would be meaningless because all waterfront zoning is inoperative until the powers of the Bay Conservation and Development Commission are clarified.

BODC has forbidden any non-water-related building along the city-owned waterfront. The San Francisco Port Commission filed suit this week to overturn the ban.

38 Public Health Hospitals To Survive

CHOLLA

The sun stretches out across the sand,
Its lanky fingers clutching at the dark
Ripping shadows of surrender from the unwilling night;
Snuffing out lumens with its sweetened breath
Of fresh dawn and a new day.

The first warm rays of sunburst
Are Borealis chilled.
But time soon devours the frigidness,
And Zephyr blows a warmer breath
As Sol climbs higher in this new-born day.

The desert sky is blue and clear —
Yesterday's haze has blown away.
The tufts of clouds pass spritely by,
Caressing mountain tops on their way,
Fleeting umbrellas for a "hottest day."

The cacti stand like sentries
Of this deserted place
As though to warn the traveller, that,
Beauty is found in disgrace, though misplaced,
Upon the desert sand, far away.

NOVATO — ROBERT J. EDDY

THEN ONE FALLS

Brown leaves of autumn drifting
In the embrace of crisp, cool breezes
Soon land on a body of water —
A meadow preparing itself for winter.

As winter sets in, the quiet of nature
Becomes loud; White snow engulfs
Everything and challenges all who
Dare intrude on nature's sleep.

When icicles begin to cry tears
Of joy at the coming of winter's
Warmer sister — spring —, greens, blues
Yellows and reds begin to reappear.

Animals begin their happy and carefree
Frolic, lovers stroll hand in hand
Into the longer days of summer;
Nature seems to burst at every seam.

Then as the days give way
To longer nights again,
We see a leaf starting to turn brown —
Then, one falls . . .

TIBURON — WALTER TORRENS

BEER CANS

Stacking beer cans, one on another,
Reading the funnies,
Who is my brother?

Listening, waiting, watching TV,
Stare at the wall,
What is me?

Building castles rising in air,
Fantasy blossoms,
Truth is where?

Cigarette butts ground out in the glass,
The room is quiet,
Will all this pass?

Cars, houses in rows.eternal,
People running,
What is a funeral?

Laughing freely, while wildly we dance,
Why waste life,
We've only one chance!

Safety Rules For Use Of Flammables

With spring approaching and fires involving flammable liquids likely to increase, Lt. R. E. Dougherty, fire prevention officer of the Novato Fire District, has recommended a list of safety rules.

Spring usually is accompanied by an increase in use of equipment such as portable containers and gasoline-powered tools, and with this activity there is usually an upward trend in fires, Dougherty said.

To avoid such fires, he suggested the following rules:

1. Always store flammable liquids in a sound metal container with a screw-on-type cap.
2. When not in use, keep in a cool ventilated location, out of the reach of children. An outside storage locker is best.
3. Avoid long-term storage. Purchase only as needed to minimize the amount of such material in the home.
4. Label all containers accurately, such as "stove gas," etc.
5. Perform filling and transfer operations outdoors, well away from sources of ignition.
6. When spills occur, use garden hose for washdown. If rags are used for wiping up spills, place in a closed metal container such as garbage can after use.
7. When pouring flammable liquids into or from a container, maintain contact between tank and container to avoid the chance of static sparks.
8. Never fuel while the engine or appliance is operating.
9. Avoid substituting. Gasoline should never be used as a cleaning solvent or paint thinner.

SEOUL, Korea (UPI) — The South Korean government announced today it will commission two chewing gum firms to manufacture a new flavor laced with ginseng, an herb which many orientals believe increases sexual potency.

Span Panel Endorses Buying Second-Hand Float For Pier

A committee of Golden Gate Bridge District directors yesterday endorsed buying a second-hand float for the district's ferryboat to use at the San Francisco terminal.

The building and operating committee also worked its way through 13 other long-pending items of unfinished business, disposing of most of them under the urging of chairman Daniel F. Del Carlo.

The ferry float which will cost $5,000, is located in the Sacramento area, according to Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring.

He said district engineers predict a total outlay of about $38,000 for refurbishing the float, and modification of the pier near the San Francisco Ferry Building. The ferryboat has been using the nearby Harbor Tours float, but has encountered design problems.

The committee dropped from its agenda an item placed there on Dec. 20, 1968, seeking a share-the-cost decision on widening Doyle Drive, the San Francisco approach to the bridge. Luehring reported that state officials are working on the project without requiring the bridge district or San Francisco each to contribute 25 per cent of the cost.

Since the item was put on the committee agenda, Doyle Drive was the scene of San Francisco's worst traffic crash, a two-car collision that killed nine persons.

The length of the agenda drew a protest from Director C. Paul Bettini, mayor of San Rafael. He complained that the notice he received in advance listed only one item — the float discussion — and that his schedule was too full to allow him time to discuss the other items. Del Carlo defended the surprise agenda as necessary to clean up long-undecided questions.

In other actions yesterday, the committee:

RADAR — Heard from the staff that it is cooperating with the Coast Guard in placing radar reflectors on the bridge to avert a repetition of the ship collision and oil spill of Jan. 18.

TOLL PLAZA — Took no action on toll plaza modernization, maintenance shop construction and highway bypass plans for the Marin end of the span after staff reported a number of delays involving outside agencies and groups.

SPAN WEIGHT — Delayed a request by the Pacific Telephone Co to install additional cables under the bridge, pending proposals for the utility to pay the cost of lightening barrier and walkway structures to gain the additional weight capacity needed for the cables.

Nod Given On Sewer Line Plan

Directors of the Bolinas Public Utility District have authorized Kennedy Engineers of San Francisco to proceed with engineering plans for sewer lines to feed the district's proposed $1.8 million sewage treatment system.

The board also told the engineering firm to go ahead with plans for establishing an assessment district to finance the collection system, Gen. Mgr. Archie Goldsberry reported.

Goldsberry said the assessment district will include the entire mesa area of Bolinas, the Canyon Road area and the flat land between Bolinas School and downtown Bolinas.

He said the engineers should complete their work in about six weeks and the matter will then be referred to the Marin County Board of Supervisors, who has the authority to set up the district.

The utility district board also passed resolutions outlining the duties of the general manager and Jane Boyer, district clerk-secretary.

Low Rate Quake Help Introduced

I-J Special Report

WASHINGTON — Rep. William S. Mailliard, R-Sixth District, has co-authored legislation which would provide earthquake insurance to citizens at what was termed "reasonable" rates.

Insurance against temblors now is available, according to the congressman's office, but at high rates.

The measure, co-sponsored by Rep. Craig S. Hosmer, R-32nd District, is entitled the National Earthquake Insurance Bill and would make insurance available through either private companies or the federal government. The Secretary of Housing and Urban Development would be empowered to set rates.

The bill also would require state and local adoption of land use measures to reduce the potential of earthquake losses.

News Source

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A group of congressmen has called for early hearings on legislation that would ban federal officials from forcing newsmen to disclose confidential information on their news sources.

Tiburon Recreation Survey Is Scheduled

The Tiburon Parks and Recreation Commission has agreed to make a survey of what recreational programs Tiburon residents want and need, chairman Donald K. Loomis reported.

Loomis said the commission voted Thursday to prepare questionnaires which will give residents an opportunity to decide what their community's recreation goals should be.

He said the survey will include questions on the possibility of establishing a parks and recreation department or a special recreation district and means of financing recreation projects.

The board will complete preparation of the questionnaire at its March 18 meeting and decide on methods of getting the survey to residents, according to Loomis, who said the Reed District Parent-Teacher Council is assisting in the project.

Residency Rule In Santa Cruz Booted

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — The California Supreme Court yesterday struck down City of Santa Cruz charter requirements of three years' residency for city council candidates, and hinted it may do the same thing statewide.

Residency requirements in excess of the one-year general law requirement violate the constitutional guarantee of equal protection of the laws, the tribunal said.

On Tuesday, Marin Superior Court Judge Joseph G. Wilson voided a three-year residency requirement for a candidate for San Rafael Board of Education. Wilson ordered the name of James Lamantia of San Rafael placed on the April 20 ballot.

The Santa Cruz case was the first of several California cases ruled on by the state's highest court. In a brief order following its 4-3 decision of the case of Santa Cruz candidate Edward Camara on the ballot for the city's April 13 election, the court said it would outline its reasons further when it makes public its decision on another pending case.

That dispute involves a five-year residency requirement for Sacramento City Council candidates.

The court also is considering a challenge of the five-year residency rule for Butte County supervisors.

Another suit challenging San Francisco's five-year requirement is awaiting a decision in superior court.

Judge Wilson based his San Rafael decision on a District Court of Appeal ruling last November in the Sacramento case, which subsequently went to the Supreme Court.

pay ransom belong to the Turkish government.

A note by the kidnapers, who identified themselves as the "Turkish Peoples Liberation Army," and sent to an Ankara newspaper Friday gave what it said was a final warning against failure to meet the ransom demand.

The note was accompanied by letters from each of the men and the identity card of one of them, Larry J. Heavener of Denver, Colo.

"Help us, I want to live," wrote James M. Gholson of Alexandria, Va. "Tell my family I love all of them and I think all of this will end happily."

Heavener wrote, "Come and save us quickly."

Heavener, Gholson, Jimmie J. Sexton of San Angelo, Tex. and Richard Carazzi of Stamford, Conn., all Airmen first class, were kidnapped early Thursday as they were returning from a U.S. Air Force radar station outside Ankara.

Premier Suleiman Demirel met with President Cevdet Sunay late Friday and Demirel presided over a 90-minute council of ministers session but there was no statement.

Students fought police with rifles, pistols and Molotov cocktails Friday when truckloads of police and troops arrived to search Middle East Technical University for the kidnapers and their hostages.

the population of more than 100 million, and East Pakistan are separated by nearly 1,000 miles across India.

On Friday, the fourth day of violence, angry mobs were reported ripping up railroad tracks and blockading key roads leading into Dacca in an attempt to isolate the east wing capital.

Sources in Karachi said Yahya sent additional troops into East Pakistan to deal with the rioting and the strike. They said all assembly buildings and airports in the east were heavily guarded.

The government also imposed total censorship throughout the country. It prevented publication of one report by a local news agency that at least 2,000 persons were machine gunned to death in Dacca. There was no way to confirm that report.

Suspect In Ex-Convict Death Held

REDWOOD CITY (UPI)— The arrest of a St. Louis man as a suspect in the slaying of a former San Quentin convict was announced by local authorities Friday —four months after he was jailed.

San Mateo County sheriff's office said Watson T. Curry, 49, a storage company employe, was accused of killing Donald J. Grenier, 28, whose badly decomposed body was found on a hillside last Sept. 12.

Curry was arrested in St. Louis last November and held there during extradition proceedings. His arrest was publicly disclosed after he was transferred to the county jail here.

Grenier, who lived in San Francisco after his release from San Quentin in 1969, had served a seven year term for armed robbery. His body was found wrapped in a heavy green canvas bag with its skull fractured and ankles and wrists tied.

INDO

The good news for the allies was dimmed by a report from Khe Sanh that a barrage of about 40 Communist shells had killed some Americans just before noon today. The shells exploded near the end of twin runways used by U.S. transport planes to ferry supplies to South Vietnamese forces in Laos.

A major battle had been expected at Sepone in some quarters and it remained to be seen whether the force of 6,000 North Vietnamese regulars believed to be in the area would counterattack once South Vietnamese units solidified control of the town.

There have been occasions in the past when Communist troops have held back only to lay siege to South Vietnamese positions when attack is least suspected. Some officers believed that the North Vietnamese might be trying to set up an attack of the type which decimated French forces at Dienbienphu in 1954.

There were reports Friday that North Vietnamese troops in the Sepone area had massed antiaircraft missiles and at least 50 tanks to defend Sepone. But field reports told of little resistance today and no sign of tanks as the South Vietnamese swept into Sepone. Military sources said the North Vietnamese probably pulled back into heavily jungled hills surrounding Sepone.

South Vietnamese headquarters in Saigon would not say how long the task force would remain in Sepone. A communique stressed the "air mobility" tactic of leapfrogging from one point to another in helicopters so as to avoid becoming set targets.

The Saigon units in Sepone were reported clearing areas around the town tonight for artillery bases with howitzers flown in by American helicopters.

The sources said that modernizing the Korean forces would allow the United States much more flexibility if war should again break out.

"I'm not sure what our reaction would be any more," one officer said. "We have to give Washington the maximum number of options. We don't want to be forced into something we don't want to get into."

Even with the withdrawal, American ground troops still will be only 20 to 25 miles south of the DMZ so that if the North Koreans turned out to be stronger than anticipated or the South Koreans weaker than believed, the Communist would soon run right into the American 8th Army.

OBITUARIES

ALLAN NEVINS

MENLO PARK, Calif. (UPI) — The dean of American historians, Allan Nevins, 80, died in a nursing home Friday, just months after completing a massive 12-volume work on the American Civil War.

Nevins' career won him two Pulitzer Prizes and included a journalistic stint on three New York newspapers and professorships at Cornell, Columbia, Oxford and Cambridge Universities.

Despite a stroke in 1967, he continued work on his favorite subject, the Civil War, until chronic illness forced him to enter the Sharon Heights Convelescent Home here in June, 1970.

The final two volumes of the Civil War history will be published later this year.

Born May 20, 1890, at Camp Point, Ill., Nevins received bachelors and masters degrees for the University of Illinois and held honorary degrees from 28 institutions.

The historian considered his most noteworthy books to be the biographies of John Charles Fremont, Grover Cleveland and Hamilton Fish. His Cleveland and Fish biographies won Pulitzer Prizes in 1932 and 1936.

Other books written by Nevins included "Ordeal of the Union," "The Emergence of Lincoln," "The War for the Union" and biographies of great figures in the American industrial age including Henry Ford and the Weyerhauser timber family of the Pacific Northwest.

Nevins is survived by his widow, Mary, whom he married in 1916, and two married daughters. Memorial services will be held March 12 in Pasadena, Calif. The body will be cremated and the ashes buried in New York.

$10,000 In Apartment Fire Damage

Marin County firemen today blamed a plumber's torch for starting a fire at the Dolphin Apartments outside Sausalito yesterday which did $10,000 damage to four units and their contents.

Chief Louis J. Bloom said the blaze broke out in Apt. 15, occupied by Norleen Brewer, at about 10:30 a.m. but wasn't reported until an hour later.

He said a plumber was repairing a leak in a water pipe in a wall between the bathroom and living room. Apparently sparks from his torch or the heated copper pipe touched off the fire Bloom said.

"The fire had a good start," Bloom said, "but it melted the pipe and the water sprayed on the fire. Otherwise it could have been much more serious with extensive damage."

Bloom said two county and three Sausalito units fought the blaze at the apartment, which lies in county jurisdiction at 1 Ebbtide Street.

Apt. 15 and the unit above it sustained fire damage, while two adjacent apartments were damaged by water. Bloom estimated damage at $8,000 to the structure and $2,000 to contents.

IN QUAKE AREA

Major State Water Projects Survive

PALM SPRINGS (UPI)— Major works of the State Water Project survived the disastrous Southern California earthquake last month without "as much as a crack," Water Resources Director William Gianelli reported yesterday.

But he warned that there is "no guarantee of freedom from damage in all future earthquakes."

"If an earthquake should cause much movement along the Tehachapi mountain faults where they are crossed by the California Aqueduct, our tunnels or aqueducts could be ruptured," he said.

He said during a careful "foot-by-foot" inspection of project works after the quake, "we didn't find as much as a crack in any of the structures that were designed and built to resist the earthquakes that may shake the Tehachapi mountain region."

The inspection included the California Aqueduct and the Castaic Dam, 14 and 17 miles from the epicenter, respectively. The cracked Van Norman Dam was 14 miles from epicenter.

Gianelli's report, prepared for the California Water Commission, confirmed the department's analysis issued shortly after the quake.

He also reported a continued "shrinking" in the department's manpower as construction of the State Water Project nears completion. He said from a peak of 4,476 employes in 1967, the civil service work force stood at 3,390 last month and is expected to shrink to 3,150 by next July 1.

He said despite the net reduction in staff, only 71 layoffs occurred during four years but forecast "it is probable our layoff rate will increase."

"As a reflection of the difficult market, our voluntary separation rate has dropped off and if this continues, the number of layoffs will necessarily increase," Gianelli said.

Sheriff's Investigative Staffs To Be Reorganized

Investigative staffs of the Marin County sheriff's office will be reorganized Monday in an effort to provide more manpower to unincorporated areas of Marin, Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos said yesterday.

The move will consolidate adult and juvenile investigation staffs and the identification bureau into one staff, Mountanos said.

Lt. Guido Battaglia, head of the adult investigation unit, will be in charge of the day shift of the new unit; Lt. William Johanson, now head of the juvenile investigation unit, will supervise the evening and early morning shift, and Lt. Earl Cummesky, head of the identification bureau, will serve as relief for Battaglia and Johanson two days a week each.

The new operation will be under the overall supervision of Capt. Harvey Teague, Mountanos said.

The shift will combine the three lieutenants and 11 investigators — three from identification; four from juvenile bureau and seven from adult investigation — into the one new unit.

Mountanos said the new unit should provide for a more efficient operation at no increase in costs.

Until now, he said, when a crime was reported to the sheriff's office, a deputy would respond. From the scene of the crime, the deputy would call for an investigator from one or more of the three bureaus.

Now, Mountanos said, an investigator will respond along with a deputy to begin immediate investigation of the crime.

All of the investigators are trained to handle duties previously divided among the three bureaus, Mountanos said.

Loans For Hospitals Are Ordered

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Third District Cout of Appeal yesterday ordered the state Public Health Department to begin a loan insuranceprogram for private and public hospital construction.

Dr. Louis F. Saylor, state health director, balked at implementing the plan authorized by the legislature in 1969. He said such a program may violate constitutional debt limitations.

But the unanimous three-judge ruling held that a state program insuring hospital construction loans was constitutional so long as the money came from a premium fee on the insurance.

The court, however, invalidated a section of the law which would have permitted the state to issue debentures to set up the loan fund.

"We have concluded that the constitutional debt limit bar debentures exceeding the assets of the Health Facility Construction Loan Insurance Fund," the opion said.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Alcoholics Aren't All Wife And Child Beaters Or Poor Providers

DEAR HELEN:

Why is it that everybody assumes an alcoholic is a wife-and-child-beater who keeps his family in poverty and tears?

My father was an alcoholic. But he was also an excellent provider. He never hit my mother or any of us kids, or even yelled at us. He always cared a lot for us and he's a strong yet gentle person. I was never ashamed of him. I wouldn't trade him for anyone else in the world, even when he was drinking. I say was because he hasn't had a drink in three and one-half years and the best part is, he doesn't even want one. — PROUD

DEAR HELEN:

I'm glad you told the girl who wrote "What is an Alcoholic Father?" to seek our Alateen, whether her father realizes he is an alcoholic or not. My heart goes out to her, for I too had a father like that. Now I am happily — yes, happily, married to an alcoholic, and am the mother of three well-adjusted children. (I did not know my husband had this problem when we were married.)

Alcoholism is not an illness to be ashamed of and it has no regard for the type of person it attacks. My husband is vice president of a large company. We are both college graduates with masters degrees.

After indulging in "Poor Me" for the first six years of marriage, I discovered Al Anon and learned:

1. I was not responsible for John's drinking.
2. The only person I was responsible for was myself.
3. Total detachment from his problem was my only salvation, and the chance to give my children at least one parent they could be proud of — and not a screaming shrew.
4. To detach does not mean to stop loving. It means simply that his drinking problem is his problem, and I will not let his illness ruin my life.
5. Only John would have to take the consequences of his drinking regardless of what they were.

I learned to take one day — sometimes even one hour — at a time, and to ask God for courage. Gradually, it worked. It's been four years since I went to my first Al Anon meeting and three years since A.A. said to John, "Welcome Home." — ONE WHO KNOWS

DEAR HELEN:

My father was a "mean drunk." Sick? No, I think he drank so he'd have an excuse for cruelty. My mother stuck it out and died early. We children have scars, physical and mental, that will never disappear.

Maybe some alcoholics can be helped, but a family shouldn't waste its life trying. Let him kill himself alone — and (in the case of my father) good riddance. — EDNA

DEAR HELEN:

I'm glad you "took it all back" about putting the man behind the wheel regardless of who owns the car.

Not too long ago I was a college girl with a car of my own. My parents had only one stipulation: No one but myself could drive. You see, the car had only liability insurance and no young man under 25 was covered. Many high school girls are given the same rules — but so many boys think they should drive to show "manliness." Several of my dates argued that my folks would never know — wouldn't get into a wreck. They're the type who would clip your column as a further talking point.

Believe me, it's complicated enough, saying "No" when guys offer to take over the wheel. You might add to your retraction, Helen, a note to guys: Please don't ask to drive your girl friend's car. If she wants you to — and her insurance covers you — she'll ask. — T.F.L.

Livestock Census

While the "people" census is taken only once every ten years, livestock numbers are calculated annually. Perhaps it's because there aren't as many demographic groups to tabulate. At any rate, the nation's cattle, hog and sheep industries have managed — through business like efficiency and know-how — to keep the meat animal population high enough to feed the human population adequate amounts of beef, veal, pork and lamb. Here's what the livestock population amounts to in 1970: 112.3 million cattle and calves, 56.7 million hogs and pigs and 20.4 million sheep and lambs.

TWINS FOR SPRING

Full Cut For Cape Pattern

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

I have heard so much about the unlined double knit wool capes. They sound so easy to make. My question is, do I have to find a special pattern or will any cape pattern work?

MKRS. J.A.P.

DEAR MRS. J.A.P.:

You will want a pattern that is cut rather full so that it will drape nicely when you have it on. Most of the unlined capes I have seen do not have a slit for the armhoes. A strip on lining fabric is applied about 4 inches from the finished edge of your cape, on the wrong side, for your arms to slide through which helps keep your cape on your shoulders. This strip of fabric should measure about 6 inches.

The nicest finish for your seams is to bind them in a matching colored lining fabric. These bindings are cut about 1 inch wide on the bias. Machine stitch the bias strip to your fabric, right sides together, about 1/8 inch from the cut edge. Next, fold the bias strip over the seam you have just stitched. To the wrong side, pin to avoid shifting of the grain, and machine stitch from the right side, in the well or crack that forms where the two fabrics were joined. This stitching will not be noticable because it is not on the binding itself.

Cut off the additional binding if it extends more than 1/4 inch from the stitching. It is much simpler to finish all the raw edges in this manner before you have done any construction seams. This method of seam finishing gives the unlined cape a very neat, professional look when you aren't wearing it. The above method of seam finishing is often referred to as the "Hong Kong finish."

MRS. ERIKA Schmid, Binghamton, N.Y. is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her following sewing suggestion.

"The application of an invisible zipper used to be a joy, until recently, when working with a knit fabric where I had to meet horizontal stripes. After two failures and much frustration, I solved my problem as follows:

"After applying one side of the zipper, I closed it and marked the horizontal lines with pencil on the opposite zipper tape. Matching the marks with the stripes on the fabric assured the perfect outcome."

DEAR READERS:

Mrs. G.P.M. says: My mother and I do quite a bit of sewing and have never had trouble with thread until they started putting it on plastic instead of wooden spools. The thread seems to feed through the machine too fast and causes the annoying problem of loops and bunchiness under the fabric. We have solved this problem by placing a metal washer on top of the spool of thread, the extra weight seems to adjust the speed and for us it has worked perfectly.

DEAR EUNICE:

When making garments out of solid colored Ban-Lon, which is the right side? I have seen it rolled both ways at our shop. One side seems to have a decided up and down ridge, the other side seems to have a cross weave.

DEAR MRS. L.A.M.:

The easiest way to decide the right from the wrong side of these sheer tricot knits is to stretch a small area between your fingers, near the cut edge of the fabric. It will automatically roll or curl over to the right side.

I might also add a little word of advice about sewing on these fine tricot nylon fabrics (it also works with the sheerest of polyester knits,) keep your fingers in front and also in back of the needle and apply a slight tension in both directions. However, be sure to allow the fabric to feed itself naturally. If the length of your stitches is not uniform, it means you are applying too much tension or stretch with your fingers.

DEAR EUNICE,

I'm at my wits end and have tried everything possible to avoid skipped stitches when I am sewing on knits. I brought this up at a recent meeting where most of the women did their own sewing and was surprised to find that many others are having the same difficulties. However, this doesn't solve the problem, sure hope you can help all of us.

MRS. H.H.

DEAR MRS. H.H.:

We have found in our sewing school, where incidentally, everything I write about in this column has been tested, that the secret in sewing with knits and usually avoiding the skipping of stitches, is the use of the new ballpoint needles. These needles are available at all the better fabric shops and department stores, and fit all machines.

Marin Women

Police Wives' Group Formed

Mrs. Kenneth Ankeny of Novato is the first president of a new women's organization, the Sausalito Police Wives Auxiliary.

The group was founded recently when the women met at the home of Mrs. Ankeny, who is the wife of a Sausalito police sergeant.

"The auxiliary will have two purposes," she says, "a social one of providing wives with opportunities to become better acquainted in meetings and social gatherings, and a more serious one of working on community relations in Sausalito and supporting some charitable projects that will be selected soon."

Meetings will be held the third Wednesday of each month at 7:30 p.m. in the homes of members.

A native of Tulsa, Okla., Donna Ankeny was graduated from Alhambra High School and the California Hospital School of Nursing in Los Angeles. Until last year she was regularly employed as a registered nurse.

She is a Cub Scout den mother and enjoys all kinds of arts and crafts but especially likes painting in oils and acrylics. She is taking a drawing class at Novato High School.

The Ankenys have lived in Marin three years and are the parents of Kirt, 8; Kelly, 7; and Keri, 18 months.

Other auxiliary officers are Mmes. Walter Potter, vice president; William Palmini, secretary; and John Ellis, treasurer. Mrs. Witt Simpson is sunshine chairman, and Mrs. James D. Wright, wife of the Sausalito police chief, will handle publicity.

And Linda Bird's Wedding Cake Had 1,511 Raisins . . .

By JOAN LISETOR

Liz Carpenter lost her last job on Jan. 20, 1969.

"That is the day the Johnsons went out, the Nixons came in and Billy Graham stayed on at the White House," says the former press secretary to Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson.

LIZ CARPENTER

Speaking yesterday in a program of the A.M. Series at the Tamalpais Theater in San Anselmo she recalled her five years at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue — a house of history, a house of tensions and the home of a family.

MRS. CARPENTER was a Washington, D. C., reporter for 17 years before becoming an executive assistant to then Vice President Johnson. The former Texan became Mrs. Johnson's press secretary in 1963 when Mrs. Johnson became the First Lady.

"I thought I knew everything there was to know about covering the White House. I had been in on press briefing since Eleanor Roosevelt's time, but there is a very different view from inside the fence," she says. "The press secretary walks a tightrope over what is personal and what is private, and naturally there is curiosity about the family."

As overseer of two White House weddings after none had been held there for more than 50 years, Mrs. Carpenter lead a parade of 500 reporters trying, she says, to bring a little order out of the chaos and answering questions like, "How many raisins were in Linda Bird Johnson's wedding cake?"

That one she says she solved by delegating the reporter who asked it to the chore of counting the raisins.

"SO YOU won't hold your breath another minute — there were 1,511," she says.

Another problem with the President's eldest daughter's wedding cake resulted in a translation problem between the Swiss chef and Mrs. Carpenter, who says she speaks "Texas."

"I gave the cake's ingredients to the press since it was not a state secret," she says. "And I listed the sugar as powdered. It was actually very fine granulated sugar, and we started getting letters from housewives complaining that their cakes had fallen. "At that time I thought President Johnson was going to run again, and I wondered how big the dropped cake vote would be."

Luci Johnson's wedding date offended the Ambassador to Japan because she chose the anniversary of the bombing of Hiroshima.

"I AM SURE it never occured to Luci, and I probably would have rescheduled it to Dec. 7," Mrs. Carpenter says.

The White House has its housekeeping problems, according to Mrs. Carpenter. A vacuum cleaner sat unnoticed in the middle of a hallway as a king was arriving on the South Lawn by helicopter. Mrs. Johnson noticed it, looked around for a staff member to move it and, seeing no one, tossed it into a nearby China closet.

"The king was none the wiser," Mrs. Carpenter recalls, but it is incidents such as these that emphasize the human side of the administration.

The Johnsons were a calorie conscious administration, says Mrs. Carpenter and also exercise conscious.

"Mrs. Johnson swam 50 laps every day and often I would shout questions from the side of the pool to her, and she would swim along shouting back something like, 'Yes tell the ladies in Akron, Ohio, I will be there to plant the trees."

Mrs. Carpenter estimates her travels took her more than 200,000 miles as Mrs. Johnson's press secretary — to some very remote areas. Comparing notes with Dean Rusk, who claims to have travelled more than 800,000 miles as the Secretary of State, Mrs. Carpenter asked him what the most remote spot he had ever visited was.

"MR. RUSK said it must be the Fiji Islands," Mrs. Carpenter says. "When he was greeted by the foreign service officer there, the greeting was, 'Welcome, Mr. Dulles.'"

Mrs. Carpenter wondered during her White House years if after it was all over life would be like playing poker for match sticks, as a friend had suggested.

"By moving the game out of the limelight I found time to do things I had been shelving for all of those years," she says.

She has written a book, "Ruffles and Flourishes," and is on what she calls the book selling trail.

"THE TRAIL is difficult for a woman," she says, "because of hair and eyelashes. False eyelashes came to me late in life, and I have managed to glue my eyeballs in 50 states, but I have learned a trick when I need them for a television appearance. Get to the studio early and look for the girl with the shortest mini-skirt. She is the assistant to the executive and will be good with (false) eyelashes.

"I did get fooled that way once, though. I arrived at the studio early and there was no girl with a mini-skirt — only a dentist. He said he could do the job if he could stand behind me and I held my mouth open."

It was, she says, the best eyelash job she ever had.

Hair does become a problem on the lecture circuit, she explains, because you usually arrive in a city when the beauty shops are closed. Recently she called a beautician who was listed in the telephone book.

"She didn't seem at all surprised when I told her I wanted her in my hotel suite at 5 a.m.," Mrs. Carpenter says. "When she arrived she looked at me and said, 'You are the first live customer I have had in a long time."

IN NEW places, Mrs. Carpenter says she doesn't like to just see the airports and theaters. She was delighted to be spending yesterday afternoon sightseeing with Mrs. Jack Van Wort of Corte Madera.

"Jane Van Wort called me in Sacramento yesterday and invited me to stay the night. We worked on a newspaper together in Texas and hadn't seen each other for 25 years," she says.

"Jane told me she liked my book and asked who wrote it for me. I told her I was glad she liked it and asked, 'Who read it to you?"

Everyone in government writes a book, she says, "Martha Mitchell is going to call hers 'The Mouth of the Potomac' and Spiro Agnew is working on a how-to-book on spectator sports. The Secretary of State's will be called 'What To Do In Case Of Peace.'"

Following her talk Mrs. Carpenter autographed copies of her book and donated the profits from those sold in the theater lobby to the Family Service League, sponsors of the A. M. Series.

Picnic In Freezer

Keep a picnic in your freezer. When the sun comes out and you're in a picnic mood, go. No need to let food slow you down, not if picnic fare is tucked in your freezer. The food thaws as you travel. Have hamburgers preshaped and ready to cook. Have a variety of meat sandwiches clearly identified. Take along lettuce and tomato to add at serving time. Also slip cookies from freezer in the picnic basket.

Breakfast Loss

It is estimated that 50 per cent of the American population starts the day with a totally inadequate breakfast. By skipping or skimping on this important meal, individuals can miss 25 to 33 per cent of their daily allowances of a variety of nutrients.

DANCE REVIEW

Makarova Dazzles Audience

By MARIE RAMEAU

SAN FRANCISCO — American Ballet theater has not lost its touch. After Tuesday's disastrous "Swan Lake," one could only hope that the company would find some way to vindicate itself. It did, Thursday evening, in a program of strange contrast at the Opera House.

The evening opened with Jose Limon's "The Moor's Pavane," subtitled "Variations on a Theme of Othello." Set to Purcell's suite "The Moor's Revenge," it was a puzzling piece but a tasteful, different introduction to the main fare.

The Moor and his wife were Bruce Marks and Cynthia Gregory; the friend and his wife were Royes Fernandez and Sallie Wilson. All communicated a sense of poise, continuity and Shakespearean elegance.

A disturbing point emerged in the discrepancy between the intensely dramatic Othello theme and the studied, formal music which in the 17th Century was a ballet interlude to a play by the same title. If the theme really were to work with the music, the choreography should have been more tightly structured and more consistent with the style of the English Baroque.

It appeared accidental, therefore, that some interesting yet anachronistic Renaissance lines emerged. However, a very effective integration of modern dance and ballet techniques became apparent immediately. Although the piece left behind a certain uneasiness, the idea still brims over with possibilities.

The Romantic masterpiece "Giselle" was, of course, the high point of the evening. The early 19th Century choreography by Jean Coralli and Jules Perrot remained more or less intact, and the score by Adam, never musically strong, has still not lost its ethereal beauty to the ravages of time.

Even the hopelessly mediocre orchestra, conducted by Akira Endo, surpassed itself by playing with some degree of sensitivity. The corps de ballet was fairly precise, but Roni Mahler as Myrta looked strained and woody, lacking the necessary ballon for this part.

Ex-Kirov ballet star Natalya Makarova stole the show, and it was truly refreshing to see that her tremendous reputation is not contingent only on her defection from the USSR. It could be said without exaggeration that hers is the most moving and aesthetically perfect Giselle since Ulanova's.

This blonde, long-necked young genius conceals a phenomenal technique, completely transcended by a prodigious artistry, sensitivity and musicality. In Act I she is refreshing untheatrical, with none of that "ballerina presence" which too frequently detracts from librettist Theophile Gautier's portrait of a naive and fragile peasant girl.

In Act II she is the poet's dream and the incarnation of Heine's phantom from a distant world. All she does is rendered with a simplicity and openness so transparent that pirouettes, arabesques and pointes seem to occur only as an illusion. Russian to the core, she dances with the essence of her being.

Erik Bruhn as Count Albrecht was a little down, although he never fails to give a consistently fine performance. Always the perfect partner, he and Miss Makarova were in complete harmony, and his own acting was natural and thoroughly convincing.

American Ballet Theater concludes its San Francisco performances with Makarova and Bruhn in "Swan Lake," tomorrow at 8: 30 p.m. at the Opera House.

Body Found; Believed Napa Co-Ed

NAPA, Calif. (UPI)—A body believed to be that of a missing 20-year-old co-ed was found buried Friday in a mountainous area near where the elusive Zodiac killer has claimed four of his victims.

Lynda Kanes, a Pacific Union College student, disappeared eight days ago. Zodiac's third victim, found Sept. 7, 1969, on the west shore of Lake Berryessa, a few miles from the grave found Friday, was also a student at the college.

Police said they were "checking all angles" during their investigation of the latest murder.

The body was found under a stack of old logs and debris by Sgt. James Munk, the leader of a search party, only 250 yards from where Miss Kanes' abandoned car was found Feb. 26. Police said today they had not yet positively identified the body.

Homicide inspectors found her neatly folded bra and a windbreaker 60 feet north of the mountain road where the car was found with its radio blaring. They also found a piece of paper with biblical references scribbled on it.

Zodiac claims he has killed 13 victims in the past several years, but detectives credit him with only five.

Four of those known victims of the killer who signs his cryptographic notes to police "Zociac" were in the vicinity of the grave found Friday. They included two teen-agers, a waitress, and Cecilia Ann Shepard, also a student at Pacific Union College.

Corte Madera Liked In Report As Best Ferry Terminal Site

An economic analysis of properties being considered by the Golden Gate Bridge District for a Central Marin ferry terminal lists the Corte Madera site as the most favorable.

Prepared by Grubb and Ellis Co. of San Rafael, for the bridge district, the report maintains the Dominic Muzzi property in Corte Madera has "present and future value that far exceeds" that of the Hutchinson Quarry property in Larkspur.

Factors that influenced the preference for the Corte Madera site, according to the report, are flat, readily developed terrain; more valuable waterfront property, proximity to future rapid transit routes, a large enough parcel to permit multiuse development and absence of potentially annoying neighbors.

"A fully developed parcel containing some 266 acres (Muzzi's) is a far more valuable piece of property than a similar site containing only 25 acres (Hutchinson's Quarry)," the report stressed.

According to Grubb and Ellis executive William Root, who drafted the plan, it was formulated from a land economic standpoint and does not take into account additional engineering and construction costs required.

Root said the report does not deal in depth with the Lakspur site because "what can you do with a rock quarry other than create another Butchart Gardens? (A park at an old quarry in Victoria, British Columbia.)"

The report said the Corte Madera site could sell "easily for $28.6 million, and would have an appreciation rate of 6-10 per cent a year. At that growth rate, the parcel could be worth more than $50 million in 10 years.

Land values of the two proposed ferry terminal sites were discussed behind closed doors Thursday by the bridge district board. Dist. Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring said the Grubb and Ellis report was not discussed, however.

Developers of the Larkspur site have offered to sell the bridge district 25 acres of property for about $1.5 million. Muzzi has offered to give the district 25 acres free.

Presumably the district may purchase additional space at either site under the proposals.

"Because of the unique attributes and almost limitless possibilities of land use for this site (Muzzi's), it is recommended that the Golden Gate Bridge District undertake an in-depth study of its potential," the report adds.

Houseboat Idea Not Acceptable

The Army Corps of Engineers declared yesterday it will not accept old houseboats which the county wants to dump on the Army's doorsteps.

Last week, at the suggestion of Supervisor Michael Wornum, the Marin County Board of Supervisors decided it could get rid of nine dilapidated houseboats in Richardson Bay by towing them to the Army Engineers depot in Sausalito and informing the Army: They're hazards to navigation; please remove them.

Deputy County Counsel Joseph E. Forest had told the supervisors that an old federal act made the Army Corps of Engineers responsible for "clearing navigable waters of any old hulks and wrecks."

Col. Charles R. Roberts, district engineer for the Army, disagreed.

"This is to inform you that such proposed action is illegal as a deliberate and intentional creation of an obstruction to the navigable waters of the United States," Roberts wrote. "To avoid litigation and expense, it is urged that you take action to rescind the resolution directing the deliberate and intentional creation of an obstruction."

Richard L. Larson, marine inspector for the county, who was instructed to tow the boats to the Army Corps depot, will propose an alternative solution at the Supervisors' meeting Tuesday.

Larson said that a tug boat could be hired to tow the abated boats to the edge of the houseboat community at high tide, leave them for 48 hours to give the boat owners time to remove their personal effects, and then have contractors remove the hulks.

He said the county could get rid of the nine houseboats for about $2,000. Wornum had said last week the demolition job might cost $6,000.

Comic Ballad Opera Proves Good Offering At Dominican

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

Good fun and interesting as a period piece was the one-act comic ballad opera "The Devil to Pay" or "Wives Metamorphos'd," , performed last night by Dominican College students under the auspices of the college's American Music Research Center.

Sister Mary Dominic has done an excellent job of setting the play to music appropriate to its 18th Century period, and the staging by Dan Caldwell effectively employs the conventions of ballad opera genre that consist of spoken lines interspersed with solos and ensembles sung to popular tunes of the day.

Acting is highly stylized and exaggerated in a farcical manner, with many asides and much playing directly to the audience. Adding authentic touches were the harpsichord-flute-cello trio on stage throughout the performance to provide an overture and all necessary accompaniment; whistle blasts to signal changes and changing of scenes by the entire cast with curtain open and lights down.

Slow and confusing at first, the plot — in which the devil's magic causes a shrewish noble lady and humble but charming cobbler's wife to change places — was soon rolling merrily along.

Top musical and dramatic honors went to soprano Bettina Weinstein as Nell, the cobbler's wife, who showed great flair for comedy. Her bewildered attempts to act the part of a grand dame were hilarious. Almost equally impressive in her comic antics was soprano Carol Blumlein, as the real Lady Loverule who found herself the cobbler's wife.

Outstanding in male roles were Clay Roni, whose fine bass voice is frequently heard in Marin, as the cobbler, and baritone Jerry Dixon, handsome and musically pleasing as Sir John Loverule. Bass-baritone Don Loegering was satisfactory as the doctor and as the devil, who turns out to be a benevolent one.

Best work in minor roles was done by tenor Arthur Bliss as the butler and Alicia Snyder in the speaking role of the maid Lucy. All the others in the cast contributed their full measure to the success of the production.

Sets consisting of four scenes — the Loverules's mansion the cobbler's hut, a boudoir in the mansion and a forest — were simple. They adequately suggested the locales, except the forest, which was too dark, and the nine changes were commendably accomplished with an efficiency and speed that kept the pace of the production lively. Costumes, from a professional house, were very good.

I almost hesitate to mention the usual acoustical difficulties in Angelico Hall that cause loss of comprehension of both spoken and sung words, since nothing can be done about them. It is all the more to their credit that some of the performers, such as Miss Weinstein, Miss Blumlein and Roni, overcame the handicap to some extent through exceptionally careful enunciation.

The opera will be performed again tonight at 8 o'clock.

Slides Of Show To Be Presented

Slides of the National Chrysanthemum Show and a speech on fertilizers are planned for the Monday meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of Marin, according to Mrs. B. H. Keener, the group's publicity chairman.

She said the meeting will be at 8 p.m. at the Crocker-Citizens National Bank, Fourth and B streets, San Rafael.

Governor's Son Ignores Agnew

OLYMPIA, Wash. (UPI)—Vice President Spiro Agnew should be happy that the son of Gov. Dan Evans is only four-years old and a long way from voting age.

Blond, curly-headed Bruce Evans broke into tears and had to be persuaded by a little shoving from his mother, Nancy, before he would shake hands with Agnew.

30 Days Jail On Reduced Charge

Frank S. Lynn III, 23, of Sausalito, has been sentenced to 30 days in jail after he pleaded guilty to a reduced misdemeanor charge of possessing marijuana.

Judge Peter Allen Smith of Marin Municipal Court on Thursday ordered the sentence to be served concurrently with a six months sentence Lynn faces in Santa Barbara.

Lynn, who was earlier charged with a felony count of possessing pot, was arrested at his home Nov. 20 when officers allegedly saw him smoking a cigarette that appeared to be marijuana.

Navy Doctors Discover Rifampin To Stop Meningitis' Spread

Outbreaks of meningitis are most common in military installations, especially during winter and early spring. Recruits are bothered most, possibly because they lack immunity and are exposed to career personnel, many of whom are healthy carriers. Sulfadiazine is an excellent remedy, not only in the treatment of meningitis, but also in the elimination of the causative bacteria (meningococci) from the nose and throat of carriers.

WE DO NOT KNOW why so many adults harbor these virulent organisms without becoming ill. We assume some immunity remains from a past infection that localized in the nose and throat area. In 1963, tests began to show that some types of meningococci were becoming resistant to sulfadiazine. Luckily physicians from Great Lakes (Ill.) Naval Training Center found a substitute.

It is called rifampin, and is a semisynthetic antiobiotic. According to their report in the Journal of the American Medical Association, rifampin was tested because it belongs to a family of drugs effective against a wide variety of bacteria, including the tubercle bacilli. Of more importance to the Navy physicians, was the ability of rifampin to eradicate meningococci from the carriers.

MANY BACTERIA are capable of infecting the meninges (a thin membrane covering the brain). Meningococci are the most common offenders. They enter the body through the nose and throat and produce a mild infection resembling a cold. The bacteria multiply, enter the bloodstream and travel all over the body. At this stage, fever, chills, fatigue and a blotchy or spotted rash ensue.

Shortly thereafter, the microbes settle in the meninges of the brain. Intense headache, and stiffness of the neck follow. A spinal tap produces turbid, bloody fluid that is under considerable pressure. It is encouraging to know that we have more than one good remedy for this alarming condition. A new protective vaccine is being tested.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

TRENCH MOUTH

REPLY

Yes, but stubborn cases of trench mouth (Vincent's infection), may require continuous dental treatment for an indefinite period of time. The antibiotics, such as penicillin, kill the causative germs. Gargles and mouthwashes with either hydrogen peroxide (half strength) or sodium perborate are most useful. In addition, Gly-Oxide may afford some relief.

SLEEPING ON AN INCLINE

A reader writes: I nap with my head hanging lower than my feet. Would sleeping in this slant position all night cause any harm to the body?

REPLY

No, provided you sleep on the back and do not assume the position of a bat or a sloth. The heart and blood vessels adjust to reasonable changes in posture. However, there is no advantage in sleeping on an incline.

IN A COMA

W. H. writes: Is a person who is in a coma conscious of what is being said and done around him?

REPLY

No, as coma is a state of unconsciousness. The individual may be conscious while going into or coming out of the coma but the majority are too dull or ill to know what is going on.

Tam Plan Session Is Postponed

The controversial reorganization plan for the Tamalpais High School District probably will not be considered for action March 15 by the district board, as announced earlier.

Dist. Supt. Wilber D. Hawkins said yesterday he has asked that the matter be postponed to March 29 to allow additional time to discuss it with interested parties.

"I don't want anyone to feel they didn't have an opportunity to study the plan," he said.

Hawkin's controversial plan brought loud protest last Monday from district teachers and students who objected he developed it alone.

Hawkins said that besides continued discussions with staff and students during the month, he would hold a "phone-in" to answer residents' individual questions about the plan.

The "phone-in" has been set for Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Persons with questions may call the superintendent at the district office in Larkspur.

Guilty Plea To Growing Grass

Jack Martin Kelly, 22, and Ruth M. Herr, 30, both of 360 Woodside Avenue, Tamalpais Valley, have pleaded guilty in Marin Municipal Court to charges of cultivating marijuana.

A charge of possessing pot against each of them was dismissed Thursday by Judge Peter Allen Smith at the request of the district attorney's office which reported it was merely a restatement of the cultivation offense.

The pair is to appear in Superior Court Wednesday for setting of a date for sentencing.

They were arrested Feb. 2 when drug agents raided their residence with a search warrant obtained after marijuana plants were allegedly seen growing near a door of the house.

Firms Indicted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three publishing firms have been indicted for illustrating the report of the President's Commission on Obscenity and Pornography. The unauthorized expansion included allegedly erotic photographs of men, women and animals.

Simple Plan Would Prevent State Deficits

Everybody knows that California state government is facing another financial crisis. It is committed to spend more than its income.

The legislature took characteristic action in the face of the crisis. Legislators raised their own expense allowances.

The governor has a plan for meeting the crisis. It is extremely doubtful whether the legislature will accede to the governor's plan.

Where does this leave us?

In the same old bag, probably: the legislature will have to vote new taxes upon us.

There may be another alternative, a better way out.

So far as we know, no one else has yet thought of the possibility we have in mind. It is not likely that anyone in state government would think of this particular approach. If they did think of it, you can be sure that they would breathe not a word of it publicly.

We call it the Salary Suspension Incentive Plan. It is something like this:

Whenever the state finds itself with more outgo than income, all services to the public would be frozen — that is, they would neither be increased nor be decreased. They would remain constant.

But a system of cost cutting would automatically be instituted.

The extent to which this cost-cutting system was applied would be determined by the extent of the threatening deficit. Costs would be cut merely enough to bring outgo into balance with income.

The cost cutting system is simplicity itself.

The state would merely suspend salary payments to certain state employees to the degree necessary to balance outgo with income.

Salary suspensions would be instituted according to a priority list of state employees. The order of priority would be determined by the size of an official's salary. The largest salary would be first. That would be the governor.

Since the legislature shares with the governor the responsibility for keeping state spending within bounds, it is only right that the top legislative officials — the president pro tem of the Senate and the speaker of the Assembly — share top priority with the governor, although legislative officials received somewhat less salary than top administrators.

Legislative committee chairmen, in both Senate and Assembly, would constitute the next priority level, followed by individual legislators according to seniority. Those with the longest seniority (and presumably the most influence) should be the first to be affected by the salary suspension plan.

Such a system of salary suspensions in time of fiscal crisis has so many advantages and good features that there is not space enough here to touch on more than the mere highlights.

First, services to the needy, the poor, the aged, the blind, the ill, etc., would continue unaffected. Those at the bottom of the pay scale in state service, like hospital orderlies, would be unaffected. The meager salaries on which they and their families depend for existence would be protected.

On the other hand, those at the top level whose salaries would be cut or eliminated — like governor Reagan — would not be hurt appreciably. It may be that the most noticeable immediate affect on them would be an income tax deduction, an obvious benefit.

The overall effect on the top administrators and top legislators should be, from the taxpayers' standpoint, very good. Salary suspension would motivate these influential officials to find immediate solutions to the state's critical problems with a minimum of political shadow boxing.

Obviously the Salary Suspension Incentive Plan would benefit everyone in the long run.

It is pretty certain that such a plan would not be advocated by the governor nor voted into being by the state legislature, however.

If it is to be implemented, it will have to be by iniative petition of voters. We can count on little help from experienced politicans in putting the measure on the ballot and getting it passed.

The whole operation would have to be a do-it-yourself operation by voters.

Voters of California, arise!

We have it within our power to bring about our own solution to our state's recurring fiscal crises.

If we don't unite to protect ourselves against further invasion of our pocketbooks, our paychecks and bank accounts by Sacramento, we will have only ourselves to blame.

One of the great things about spring fever is that it enables a man to sit back, look up, and see more easily and more clearly how the complex problems of our day can be solved so simply.

The Consistent Audubon Society

There are conservation groups and conservation groups, but no other that over the years has shown the consistent devotion to its ideal of the Audobon Society.

Other groups have strayed into politics, have sometimes appeared to be opposing the very conservation they espoused, have split and splintered in internal quarrels. But not the Audubon Society!

It has remained true to its purpose of protecting America's bird life.

In Marin, it supports the Audubon Canyon Ranch, presents an annual series of wildlife films, is active in outdoor education, conducts field trips, presents speakers — all with protection of bird life the central theme.

The Marin Audubon Society is now conducting its annual membership campaign. Its address is Box 441, Tiburon.

Newspaper Carrier Not Job For Girl

In reference to the article printed in the News Chronicle (UPI), on Feb. 26, entitled "Women's Lib for 11-Year-Old." This young girl claims she is being discriminated against because of her sex. She wants to become a newspaper carrier for the San Rafael Independent-Journal.

Antigione Stoddard brought the complaint against this newspaper and Peter Ladow, one of the paper's distributors, before the Equal Opportunity Commission.

She and her sisters want a horse; their father says they have to be able to keep up the maintenance for this horse.

Mr. Stoddard said the newspaper violated the 1964 Civil Rights and state law passed last year which adds the word "sex" to the Fair Employment Practices Act.

A word to Mr. Stoddard, and other parents who might have this same feeling. I am a woman and have been in this business of hiring carriers for routes for over three years, and I say to you, Mr. Stoddard, and others with the same idea, I have 36 boys working for me; I love girls and they are as ambitious as the boys at this age, sometimes even more. But I agree with Mr. Ladow. This is no business for an 11-year-old girl.

Mr. Stoddard, can you truthfully say you would let your daughter out on the streets after dark, sometimes carrying a great amount of money? Sometimes making special calls after 9 o'clock in order to collect money to pay her bill each month?...

Mr. Stoddard, this newspaper man is not being prejudiced, he is looking out for your daughter's welfare.

Please from the bottom of my heart, let your daughter find another way to make the money needed to keep her horse...

Advice To Minister Of Homosexuals

To the homosexual minister, Rev. James L. Stoll, may God help you and the people that look to you for spiritual guidance.

You sir, have evidently not yet learned the difference between divine love and human love. I suggest that you read the Bible, Leviticus Chp. 20, Galations Chp. 5: 9-26. Where in the Bible does it say that man is an animal? The Bible does tell us however, that "Man has sought out many inventions." Eccl. 7:29.

I suggest sir, that you make a thorough study of the King James version of the Bible and get a better understanding of God's Law and find out just what God demands of His people. "With all thy getting, get understanding," (Pr. 4:7)

Big Burden On Vietnamese GI: Win This One For Nixon

WASHINGTON — President Nixon has given all of us assurances that the American GIs will not do any fighting in Laos, Cambodia, or even North Vietnam — on the ground, that is. Therefore, the burden of all the fighting will be on the South Vietnamese, which seems to be a fine idea with President Thieu and Marshal Ky. But nobody seems to have asked the average South Vietnamese soldier how he feels about all this.

Three South Vietnamese soldiers were dug in along the Ho Chi Minh Trail the other day discussing the situation.

"HEY LOOK, did you hear that after this incursion they want us to invade North Vietnam?"

"The generals must be out of their rice-picking minds," Cpl. Lok said. "What in the monsoon do they want us to invade the North Vietnam for?"

"So the American GIs can pull out of our country faster," Pfc. No Dem replied. "You see, every time we go into another country, it makes it easier for Nixon to pull out Americans."

"That's fine for the Americans," Pfc. Nhu Nhu said. "But what happens to us?"

"ACCORDING TO the American generals in Saigon we're as good fighters as any army in the world, providing we have aerial support and the enemy has none," Pfc. No Dem said.

"That's a crock of yak butter," Cpl. Lok said. "They're just saying that so they can pull out without losing face."

"That's no way to talk about our ally, Lok. If it hadn't been for the U.S., we wouldn't be on the Ho Chi Minh Trail today," Pfc. No Dem said.

"Getting our butts shot off," Cpl. Lok grunted.

"YOU ALWAYS think of yourselves," Pfc. No Dem said. "Do you realize there is a lot more at stake than just getting your butt shot off?"

"Like what?" Cpl. Lok demanded.

"Well, if President Nixon doesn't get enough American troops out of Vietnam he could lose the election in 1972."

"I hadn't though of that," Pfc. Nhu Nhu said.

"YOU MEAN we're dug in here getting our butts shot off just so we won't make a liar out of Nixon?" Cpl. Lok said.

"Not just Nixon, but Henry Kissinger and Mel Laird and Ambassador Bunker and General Abrams and Joseph Alsop. There are a lot of careers that could go down the drain if we don't interdict the enemy's supply lines before the rainy season starts," Pfc. No Dem warned.

"We're carrying a big burden on our shoulders," Pfc. Nhu Nhu agreed.

"And let's not forget," said Pfc. No Dem," our own President Thieu's election could depend on the outcome of this incursion."

"WHO'S HE RUNNING against?" Cpl. Lok asked.

"Nobody," Pfc. No Dem said. "But we still want him to look good, don't we?"

Neither Nhu Nhu nor Lok replied.

Cpl. Lok finally said, "okay, let's, for argument'? sake, say we cut the Ho Chi Minh Trail, secure Cambodia and invade North Vietnam and all the American troops pull out. Where does that leave us?"

Pfc. No Dem replied, "We'll be part of the free world, dummy."

Censorship Adds To Damage Done By Southeast Asia War

WASHINGTON—In any balance sheet of the damage done by nearly 10 years of the American war in Indochina, a large debit must be entered for the way it has set Americans against each other. With the Laotian adventure greatly enlarged and the outcome in doubt, a tide of opposition is rising that can mean still another encounter with officialdom.

Increasing bitterness and hostility have marked these encounters. Support of the war is being made a test of patriotism. That tactic is so divisive, so destructive of the good will prevailing in the past even between sharply opposed political opponents, as to threaten the broad sense of common cause serving this country so well across the years.

In one way in particular the division is destructive. "Kill the messenger who brings the bad news." That practice out of the ancient past has been applied in a rather less stringent form to the messengers reporting the news of the Vietnam war.

In 1962 things had gone well for Ngo Dinh Diem, who with his family had begun to exercise an increasingly authoritative rule over South Vietnam. Gen. Paul Harkins, commander of the approximately 16,000 American troops in the area, had become an apostle of optimism. Predicting the war would be "won within a year," he sent glowing reports to the Pentagon that sparked the same optimism in the highest quarters.

Then in 1963 things began to go badly. Diem ordered the wholesale arrest of Vietnamese youths suspected of sympathy with the Communists and seeking an end to the war. The Buddhists were in open revolt. As they immolated themselves in protest, Mme. Ngo Dinh Nhu, Diem's sister, applauded, saying she was never happier than when the bonzes were barbecuing themselves.

All this, together with doubts about what was happening in the field, was reported by David Halberstam of the New York Times and the other reporters who were not confined to the hothouse atmosphere of Saigon and the tender care of escorting officers. They were writing what was contrary to the official line, and the teletype between Saigon and the Pentagon burned up with angry protest.

President John F. Kennedy was finally prevailed upon to act. He called the top brass at the New York Times to suggest that the national interest would be served if Halberstam were replaced by another correspondent. The Times backed its man. Lyndon Johnson, briefing reporters about to go out to Vietnam, would cite Halberstam as an example of one who had betrayed his country.

OTHER REPORTERS have come under this same attack. One was Francois Sully, the courageous and able correspondent for 20 years of Newsweek, killed in the helicopter crash that cost the life of Gen. Do Cao Tri. Sully was expelled from Vietnam by the Diem regime in 1962, with the American Mission doing little or nothing to resist what was an act of censorship. Both Peter Arnett, Pulitzer Prize-winning reporter in Vietnam, and Horst Faas, photographer for the AP and also a Pulitzer Prize winner, were assailed.

The Laotian "incursion" has been shrouded in a greater darkness than any action during the entire war. While permission was finally granted for American reporters to go in American helicopters, there are no reporters on the ground. The South Vietnamese high command takes a jaundiced view of the presence of American correspondents.

The official view, therefore, has had greater weight than ever before.

The war has been at times over-reported by zealous young correspondents. Television for the first time brought blood and gore into the living room. The alternative was censorship blanking out all but the official line. Can anyone seriously believe this would have been better?

Russ Eye Persian Gulf As Britain Moves Out

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

The British government has confirmed its intentions of pulling out of the Persian Gulf by the end of this year, meaning that an area long considered vital to the West goes up for grabs with the Soviet Union a chief contender.

It was back in 1940 that Vyacheslav M. Molotov, one-time Soviet premier and foreign minister, told the German ambassador in Moscow that "the area south of Batum and Baku in the general direction of the Persian gulf is recognized as the center of the aspirations of the Soviet Union."

It is a Russian aspiration going back to the days of the czars and their search for a warm water entry into the world's oceans.

WHETTING THE Russian appetite since World War II has been the discovery that 60 per cent of the world's oil reserves lie beneath the coasts or waters of the gulf.

Lying athwart the Russian path is pro-western Iran which occupies the gulf's entire northeastern shore, wooed now by Soviet trade and aid and friendly calls from the expanding Russian navy.

Neighboring Iran is unfriendly Iraq, and directly across the gulf, Kuwait, Saudia Arabia, Bahrein, Qatar and the seven so-called Trucial states.

Iran, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait each have an oil income of around $1 billion. Iraq takes in about $500 million as do the sum total of the Trucial states. The others take in around $100 million each.

When Britain moved into the area more than 100 years ago, the gulf was a shallow, 500-mile backwater lined by inhospitable sand and rock, noted for pirates and pearls.

By a truce in 1853, the sheiks foreswore piracy "forever."

With Britain on the way out, the sheiks today seek, so far unsuccessfully, to unite themselves in a federation. Their success or failure may determine whether they stand united or fall separately to the forces of Maoism centering upon South Yemen, to various "liberation" forces or to mutual suspicions and jealousies among themselves.

The Trucial states are Abu Dhabi, Dubai, Sharja, Fujaira, Umm al Quaiwain, Ajman and Ras al Khaima. Cooperation among them is a must, but in their new-found prosperity, Abu Dh

Cooperation among them is a must, but in their new-found prosperity, Abu Dhabi, Dubai and Bahrain all push competitive and expensive airport and harbor developments.

Moving to assume a major protective role is Iran, in cooperation with Saudi Arabia.

But theirs is a cooperation that could be short-lived. Between them is a six-century-old clash between the Sunni Islam of the Arabs and the Shia Islam of Iran. Any Sunni-Shia conflict probably would draw in Iraq.

Another possible flash point is Iran's claim to offshore islands controlled by Britain in the name of the Trucial states of Sharja and Ras al Khaima. Adding to the uncertainty already hanging over the area is the possibility that Iraq may turn over special privileges to the Russians at its port of Basra

Car 'Dies' And As Result Big Haul Of Heroin

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Three men were arrested on charges of possession of narcotics for sale after their car "died from a heroin overdose," police reported Friday.

Officers said they followed the vehicle from Los Angeles to Tijuana, Mexico, and back Thursday night.

Two blocks from its destination in the Harbor City area, the vehicle ran out of gas. Police said the occupants jumped out, pushed the car the final two blocks, up a driveway and into a garage where they put it on jacks and began dismantling the gas tank.

Officers said 30 ounces of uncut heroin, valued at $600,000, had been secreted in the gas tank in small rubber balloons. One of the balloons had burst, diluting the gasoline and clogging the fuel line.

One officer noted in his report that it was the first time a "car had died from a heroin overdose."

Cameras Stolen At Drake High

Three cameras valued at almost $5,000 have been stolen from the movie making classroom at Sir Francis Drake High School in San Anselmo police reported.

Officers said the cameras, all Bolex movie models, were taken between 2 and 8:30 a.m. Wednesday from a cabinet in the portable building serving as the movie classroom.

The front door of the room had been opened with what appeared to be a pry bar, officers said. A nightwatchman told officers the building was secure when he checked at 2 a.m. The burglary was discovered when school opened that morning.

The three cameras and attached "zoom lens" were worth $400, $2,300 and $2,286.

Williams has been appointed to Gov. Ronald Reagan's staff to handle Indian affairs statewide.

He is widely known as Chief Lightfoot, the mascot for the Stanford Indians, the university football team. Before taking his Sacramento post, he was a documentation clerk for the Matson Navigation Co. in San Francisco.

Morris said that purchase of the club hinges on whether he can get a permit for semiprivate operation.

Marinite Seated On Museum Panel

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — The San Francisco Maritime Museum yesterday seated new trustees and elected officers, including three Marin County residents.

William Matson Roth of Ross was named a vice president. Seated on the board were Roger Kent of Kentfield and Stanley Powell of San Anselmo.

HIGH SCHOOL PROGRAM

A Taste Of Hospital Life

By LARRY MOWELL

Sorting out those who are interested in a medical career from those who only think they are is the purpose of a high school program at Marin and Ross general hospitals.

The project, known as the Work Experience Education Program, has offered 73 high school students from throughout Marin a taste of hospital life since it began in the spring of 1969, according to A. Denis Ragan, coordinator of the program.

The students, all juniors and seniors, spend a semester at the hospitals learning operations of the various departments, Ragan, a teacher at Redwood High School, said.

The students take a class from 1:30 to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday to obtain first-hand knowledge. "The whole idea is to get them out into the real world," Ragan said.

While not unique in the state, the Marin program is the most extensive, Ragan said. Currently enrolled are 10 from Redwood, four from Terra Linda High School and one from Marin Catholic High School.

The program had to turn away 11 other students, Ragan said, despite requirements that the potential doctors and nurses buy their own uniforms and arrange transportation.

While working at the hospitals requires more sacrifice than taking a course at school, the students at Marin General were enthusiastic about the program.

The young people — who had to express a "serious interest in learning more about the medical field to be selected — each said the desire for medical professions has been reinforced.

There have been only four dropouts in two years, Ragan said.

Gale McCall, a 17-year-old Redwood senior, who had been interested in nursing in a mental health facility, said, "I might change my mind because I've become interested in everything I have gone into so far."

Since her class started Feb. 8, she has worked in the pharmacy, X-ray and physical therapy sections of the hospitals.

Other departments in which the students are trained include nursing, laboratory and administration. The students are rotated through the various departments to learn about each.

Gus Roland, also a 17-year-old Redwood senior, said, "I wanted to see how interested I really was. I didn't really have any exposure."

He said his desire to be a doctor has increased during his work at the hospital. Working in physical therapy, he said, has enabled him to learn how to teach people to use their bodies again.

While the students in physical training get a lot of first-hand experience, some of the other departments provide less satisfying tasks, the students said.

Under the direction of hospital personnel at all times, the students are shown how each department functions, but in some departments their contribution is limited.

However, all the students at Marin General claimed the occasional drudgery is compensated for at other times. Sonja Horn, a Redwood senior, was excited about seeing a child born.

Others laughed about trying to revive Recusci-Annie, a dummy used to practice resuscitation procedures.

Karen Rossi said she liked the intensive care unit best because she can work with patients, but in the recovery room "you just sit around."

All of the Redwood students are at Marin General while the other five are at Ross General. The program is the same at each hospital, but in Ross, the smaller hospital, the students get to know people faster, Roland said. He began at Ross but was switched to Marin General.

Whichever hospital the students are assigned to, the experience seems to whet their appetites to study some aspect of medicine.

Miss Horn, who has been helping nurses in the emergency room, said, "I remember one time I would have liked to help, but I haven't had the experience."

She hopes to get that experience someday, using the class at the hospital as a stepping stone.

There were 105,433 post offices in India as of July 1, 1970, compared with 70,713 in 1960.

Plea For At Least 13 Pct. Hike In Salaries For Faculty

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The state's top educators yesterday pleaded for "at least" a 13 per cent jump in college and university faculty salaries in 1971-72 and warned California would otherwise face loss of its best teachers and researchers.

President Charles J. Hitch of the University of California and Chancellor Glenn S. Dumke of the California State Colleges presented the cause before the Assembly Ways and Means Subcommittee on faculty salaries and fringe benefits.

The administrators warned the Assembly committee that if salary increases were not provided the University of California and the state colleges face the possibility of becoming second-class institutions.

Hitch, in his presentation, said the university "urgently requests" the committee to support the 13 per cent salary increase.

"This is the amount of increased compensation which is necessary to retain the distinguished faculty which has produced a state university of the first rank," he said.

"It is the amount necessary to enable the university to compete with other institutions in filling vacancies."

Hitch added that the increase was "needed to raise academic compensation to the level which existed 20 months ago, before the erosion of inflation reduced the purchasing power of these accomplished and deserving people."

Dumke presented a documented study of 102 comparable state colleges in other areas relating to salary increases for the academic salary group, salary increases for the support staff and improvement in fringe benefits of all state college personnel.

"This study showed that the California state colleges are currently lagging behind the median comparison institutions of this group," Dumke said.

"The average state college salary for 1970-71 is $13,714 — the projected average salary of the median institution for 1971-72 is $15,394. This is a lag of slightly less than 13 per cent."

Dumke said a log of six per cent in the amount of fringe benefits provided the California state college personnel.

Frost Coats Trees On French Riviera

PARIS (UPI) — Snowdrifts three feet high isolated 40 villages on the island of Corsica today and coated palm trees along France's normally mild Riviera coast.

At Martigues on the Riviera, the city council ordered the palm trees covered with plastic to protect them from the frost.

49ERS ROMP TO BASKETBALL VICTORY

A team composed of members of the San Francisco 49ers football team came to San Rafael High School last night and played a basketball game against the school's faculty. The 49ers won, 91-88, but San Rafael basketball coach Mike Diaz picked up high scoring honors with 24 points. Frazier Says Left Hook Will End It In Seventh

Champion Confident Of Win

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—The waiting has started for Joe Frazier.

The training for Frazier ended today with a little roadwork and light exercise as the final preparation for his $15 million showdown with Cassius Caly Monday night.

The 27-year-old champion concluded his boxing on Friday by sparring five rounds, running his total during the last six weeks to 207. After the workout his weight was 204 pounds and Frazier said he was satisfied.

At stake is $2.5 million per man, the heavyweight title, and a niche among boxing's immortals — Jack Johnson, Jack Dempsey and Joe Louis, but Frazier says he is "cool."

"It don't do any good to worry now," Frazier said. "I'm into this thing now, and he'll find out that he is too."

Win or lose, Frazier's manager, Yank Durham, continues to talk about retirement for the fighter.

"I'd love to see him retire," Durham said. "He's been in the game long enough. He sacrificed 12 years monkeying around the fight business. If he wants to retire I'd be happy but if he doesn't, I'll be with him for his next fight too."

As for Durham, who will get more than 15 per cent of Frazier's paycheck, the bout offers security for him to "slow down and not work so hard anymore."

"I'll leave some of the training to other men and just go by the gym two or three times a week," he said.

During his entire training Frazier worked no more than eight rounds any day, and Durham predicts a knockout in seven.

After his final workout, Frazier joked with the half dozen newsmen who were at hand for the workout.

"I think Clay's upset because he didn't think of giving a victory party after the fight like I did," said Frazier, "but I'll be there, and I'll sing too if I'm not messed up."

Frazier's first relaxation in six weeks will come after the bout when he can once again see his family. Although Frazier stayed in a motel right across from his Philadelphia home, he saw his wife and children only a few minutes each day during training.

"I don't see any reason for Frazier to be interrupted," Durham said. "If he had been fighting out of town, he wouldn't have been able to see his family at all and that's the way a man should train."

Frazier planned to go to New York and isolate himself in a hotel room from Saturday until the weigh-in on Monday. The two fighters will weigh in separately to avoid any confrontation and won't see each other until they step into the ring Monday night.

Then, Frazier believes, "it'll be all over in 10 rounds."

San Marin, Drake Novato Win In Season Openers

Somehow or other, San Marin High School of Novato and Sacred Heart High of San Francisco managed to play 10 innings of baseball yesterday in less than two and a half hours. And before the darkness could overtake the proceedings, Greg Mazeres scampered home on Marty Larsen's double in the bottom of the 10th to give San Marin a season opening, 1-0 victory over the Irish at Novato.

In other opening day, preseason games yesterday, Marin County Athletic League teams broke even. Drake defeated Hogan in Vallejo, 7-5, Novato edged Petaluma, 3-2 in Novato, and on the losing side, Tamalpais bowed to DeAnza of Cupertino, 4-1 in Mill Valley and Terra Linda lost to Napa, 3-2 at Albert Park in San Rafael.

Both San Marin and Sacred Heart showed mid-season form, at least on defense, as they battled evenly and quickly through the first nine innings. Evidence of that lies in the fact that only one error — by San Marin — was committed all game.

Mustang pitchers Lenny Hoffman, Jim Learch and Ken Siler combined to limit the city team to just two hits; Hoffman was particularly impressive, striking out seven in the five innings he worked.

The only run of the game came after Mazeres walked with one out. A base hit bunt down the third base line by Mickey McCooey moved him to second, and then Larsen unloaded his double to left.

Dennis Stanley saw four pitches and wrapped three hits including a double as Novato came from behind to edge Petaluma. The Hornets' catcher also scored the winning run in the fifth when he singled with two out and came all the way around on a base hit and error combination off the bat of Jeff DeRecat.

Dave Judnick pitched the first five innings for Novato, and Mike Lamb mopped up with two innings of outstanding work that featured six strikeouts. Together they limited the North Bay team to just four hits. Lamb, who started the sixth with the score tied, 2-2, was credited with the win.

Mark Shepherd's two run single in the top of the fifth broke a 3-3 tie and carried Drake to victory over Hogan in a game that was called after six innings because of darkness.

No one got more than one hit for the Pirates as coach Dick Creighton liberally substituted, getting a look at 20 players. The San Anselmo team got some aid from the enemy in the form of 10 walks, which it put to use in scoring three runs in the third inning and two each in the fifth and sixth.

Tamalpais put its only run on the board in the first inning and had a 1-1 tie going into the seventh against DeAnza. But the Dons erupted for 3 runs in that final inning to spoil the Mill Valley team's 1971 debut.

Clifford Hall was noteworthy for Tam with a pair of singles in two trips, and sophomore Tom Collins lashed a double. The Indians' pitching ace, Mike Johnson, went the first three innings, allowing no runs and striking out four.

Terra Linda, sparked by catcher-pitcher Jerry Seefeldt, came up with a pair of runs in the seventh and final inning, but they weren't enough to offset Napa's three run fourth which included a two run homer by Ed Essy.

Seefeldt collected all three Trojan hits, knocked in one run and scored the other. He had singles in the second and fifth innings, and a line drive double to the open spaces in the seventh which plated Larry Kerr. He came home moments later on a ground ball to the infield.

Marin Cats Drop Opener In Tourney

The Marin Catholic High School Wildcats, ahead by a pair of runs going into the last inning, saw their opening game of the San Carlos Invitational baseball tournament turn sour yesterday as Serra High of San Mateo came up with three tallies to defeat them, 5-4.

Wildcat pitcher Mickey Simmons, who thwarted the Padres through the first six innings, walked the first two men he saw in the seventh, and two successive relief pitchers could not stop the victorious rally.

The final surge by Serra equalled the Kentfield team's performance in the fifth inning, when second baseman Vince Bormolini singled home two runs and shortstop Steve Sherry chased Bormolini across with a double. That put the Wildcats up by two at 4-2.

Today the Wildcats continue in the tourney, meeting Hillsdale High at 11 a.m. and San Carlos at 2:30.

Terra Linda Swim Powerhouse Romps

In a meet that could well determine the Marin County Athletic League swim title, Terra Linda High School overwhelmed Redwood High, 61-34 in Larkspur yesterday, establishing the Trojans as a Northern California prep aquatic powerhouse.

Elsewhere around the league in opening-day meets, the San Rafael Bulldogs pounded Tamalpais 61-32, and San Marin defeated Drake, 54-40.

Terra Linda, in breezing to an unexpectedly easy victory over a talented Redwood squad, relied on double wins from sophomore Rick DeMont and Thom Guthrie, each of whom also anchored a relay team to victory.

The two Trojan specialists swept the freestyle events, DeMont covering the 200 and 400 yard distance in school record time. Guthrie won the 50 free race easily, and edged out Redwood's Brian Hennessy in the 100.

In the relays, Guthrie anchored a school record effort in the 200 medley and, DeMont led a decisive victory in the 400 free contest.

Redwood was able to muster only four first places against the Trojans, two of which were recorded by Junior Paul Cane, but in the words of Redwood Coach Bill Purcell, "We lost to a heckuva team."

San Rafael got double wins from Scott Dicker and Curtis Chinn in its win over the Tam Indians in Mill Valley.

San Marin, started off the 1971 season on a strong note, with a win over Drake at the Novato pool. Turning in a double win for the Mustangs was Jay Woods, while the Pirates got two freestyle victories out of Scott Bradley.

Boxer Vs. Slugger Fight: 'I'll Out Box Him' — Clay

By CHARLES E. TAYLOR

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—Says Muhammad Ali's trainer, Angelo Dundee: "The way to beat a slugger is to box him, and that's what we're gonna do."

Ali and Dundee view the Monday night battle in Madison Square Garden between former champ Ali-Cassius Clay and current champ Joe Frazier for the world heavyweight title as a match between an aggressive slugger and Ali with his fancy footwork and jabs.

"This won't be any flat-footed fight. There'll be a lot of footwork in it—in and out, in and out, pop, pop, pop," says Ali. "I'll be back pedalin' and throwin' rippin' punches."

Ali planned a final workout here today before flying to New York this evening to relax—maybe at a "hideout," he says—and wait for fight time.

Ali skipped sparring Friday but worked 17 rounds on the heavy bag and speed bag, shadow-boxing in the ring and skipping rope. He looked like he was working hard all the way and at the end he weighed 214 pounds. He says he plans to weigh 212 by Monday—"The same as for the first Liston fight."

He said his Friday training rounds were "swift rounds—so I can go that way for 15 if I have to. I don't know if it will go 15, but I'm always ready in case it does."

"I've never been this serious about a fight—I never worked this hard, never trained so hard," said Ali.

"The only way he's gonna win is a knockout—it's the only way," he said. "There's no way he can out-box me—it's impossible.

"And he's gonna have too much trouble catchin' me for a knockout."

Ali is the underdog in the fight, which he says is all right because it increases his desire to win. But he says he shouldn't be.

"I don't see how people can pick him to win," he said. "This is my style of fighter—a man who keeps coming at me."

"I've been tagged, I've been hit. But when you get hit you take two or three steps back and jab him. As long as Ellis was doing a little moving, he was hitting Frazier with everything. He just didn't have the strength and the stamina to keep moving and hit harder. I'll be a lot stronger than that when I come in."

CAL SLAUGHTERED

UCLA Gives Coach His 500th Victory

By United Press International

It was a happy 500th birthday party for Johnny Wooden of UCLA.

His team gave the Bruin cage coach win number 500 Friday night with one of its best showings of the year, a 103-69 slaughter of a hot California team.

The victory kept the Bruins atop the Pacific 8 standings with a 12-0 record with two games to go. Wooden's teams have dropped only 140 while winning those 500.

Curtis Rowe hit 11 of 17 shots and 23 points while front-court mates Sid Wicks and Steve Patterson had 21 each.

On Thursday, Wicks was named college player of the year by the Sporting News.

UCLA's eternal shadow, nationally third-rated USC, got a stiff battle from lowly Stanford before prevailing 83-74 with Mo Layton and Paul Westphal combining for 39 from the backcourt.

USC is also 23-1 and that win total equals the all-time Trojan record for the most wins. The Trojans are 11-1 in conference play.

The two Los Angeles powerhouses swap foes today, which means USC catches the tougher Cal team.

In the Northland, Oregon flattened Washington 101-76 with Stan Love and Larry Holliday hitting 24 apiece. Oregon state took care of Washington State 81-67 as Freddie Boyd and Neal Jurgenson teamed up for 35 points.

Brodie Official Champion

NEW YORK (UPI)—John Brodie, 35-year old quarterback of the San Francisco Forty Niners, was the No. 1 passer in the National Football League during the 1970 season, according to figures released Saturday.

The figures showed that Sonny Jurgensen of the Washington Redskins ranked second with Fran Tarkenton of the New York Giants third and Daryl Lamonica of the Oakland Raiders fourth. Lamonica was the American Conference leader.

The ratings are based on percent of completions, touchdown passes, per cent of interceptions and average yards gained.

Brodie, who had a 59.0 per cent completion mark, 24 touchdown passes, a 2.6 interception percentage and averaged 7.78 yards, was placed first with eight points. Jurgensen had 17 points, Tarkenton had 23 and Lamonica had 40 1-2.

Brodie was second in the league in percentage of completions, first in touchdown passes, had the lowest interception percentage and was fourth in average gain.

Craig Morton of the Dallas Cowboys, who ranked fifth in the point standings, and Don Horn of the Green Bay Packers, who did not qualify for the ratings because he did not throw at least 140 passes, shared the honor of throwing the longest touchdown pass of the season —89 yards. Morton and Bob Hayes collaborated for a touchdown against the Kansas City Chiefs on Oct. 25 and Horn and Carroll Dale combined against the Atlanta Falcons on Sept. 27.

The Forty Niners were both the league and National Conference team leaders, finishing first in three categories Raiders were the American Conference team leaders.

Milwaukee Sets Pro Cage Record

By United Press International

Larry Costello just may have been guilty of taking himself a bit too seriously Friday night.

In the giddy moment of triumph after the Milwaukee Bucks set the NBA record with their 19th straight victory, the Milwaukee coach said the victory was "the greatest personal achievement for me in coaching. You take an expansion team like we were and in only three years set a record—it's fantastic. It took New York 25 years to do the same thing."

But, of course, Costello didn't actually do it all by himself. He had the rather good fortune of having Lew Alcindor join his club after the Bucks' first season. If Milwaukee hadn't won the coin flip with Phoenix for the right to pick Alcindor two years ago, the Bucks' rise wouldn't have been so sudden.

And Lew, who scored 34 points in the Bucks' 108-95 victory over Detroit that broke the mark of 18 straight that New York set last year is one of the great winners in sports history. By his standards, 19 straight isn't much. His high school team won 71 straight and his college team won 47 straight.

If you throw out last year, Lew has played in 14 losing games in eight years—an average of less than two per year. He played in one losing game in his last three years of high school ball and two in four years of college play. The Bucks have lost just 11 this year with a 64-11 mark and can break the season record of 68-13 set by Philadelphia in 1967.

The Bucks were out to get the record and they almost blew Detroit off the court by grabbing a 23-6 lead and then coasting in the rest of the way.

In the other games, Philadelphia edged New York 121-117, Chicago routed San Francisco 130-103, Cincinnati topped Portland 117-111, Atlanta beat Los Angeles 105-104 and Seattle edged San Diego 111-110.

Spencer Haywood scored 25 points, 13 in the fourth period, as Seattle outlasted San Diego in the second game of a doubleheader at San Diego. In the first game, Bob Love scored 44 points as Chicago downed San Francisco.

Billy Cunningham scored 34 points and grabbed 16 rebounds as Philadelphia beat New York and snapped the Knicks' four-game winning streak.

Tom Van Arsdale scored 30 points as Cincinnati blew a 21 point lead but held on to down Portland. Geoff Petrie had 25 for the losers.

Jerry Chambers sank two free throws with eight seconds left to give Atlanta the victory over Los Angeles.

MAJOR LEAGUE TRAINING

Atlanta Displays Power In Exhibition Openers

By Gary Kale
UPI Sports Writer

Sonny Jackson was asked to report early to the Atlanta Braves training camp to acquaint himself with a new centerfield position, but used the extra time to strengthen his hitting.

Jackson, converted into an outfielder after five major league seasons as a shortstop, was told he'd have to produce to keep his new job. He did.

The speedy Jackson walloped a long triple Friday to drive in two runs during a seventh inning rally and give Atlanta a 4-2 victory over the Montreal Expos in the 1971 opener of the baseball exhibition season.

"I think Jackson is going to like it out there," said manager Lum Harris. "Unbelievable as it may sound, he has a stronger arm as an outfielder than as a shortstop."

Atlanta, a disappointment last year after winning the National League's Western Division title in 1969, received further evidence of power when Earl Williams brought in the other two Braves runs with a double and Ralph Garr collected four hits.

Bobby Mitchell drove in the deciding run with a fourth inning double as the New York Yankees beat the Washington Senators, 6-1, on a combined two-hitter by Stan Bahnsen, Bill Burbach and Ron Klimkowski.

Vida Blue, Chris Fothe and Art Boyd hurled a three-hit shutout in Oakland's 2-0 triumph over San Diego. Joe Rudi's run-scoring single in the sixth inning broke up a scoreless game.

Rookie southpaw Hal McClain walked in the winning run in the seventh after errors by infielders Bill Melton and Lee Richards permitted Pittsburgh's first unearned run and the Pirates went on to edge the Chicago White Sox, 2-1. Jay Johnstone tripled and scored Chicago's run in the first inning.

In today's Grapefruit League openers, Steve Carlton starts for the St. Louis Cardinals against the New York Mets. Carlton is only one of five members remaining from the club's 1967-68 pennant winning teams. Others are Lou Brock, Dal Maxvill, Bob Gibson and Julian Javier.

Minnesota has three faces missing from the twins' 1970 American League Western Division champs as the club opens its exhibition season against Detroit today. Pitcher Ron Perranoski and outfielders Tony Oliva and Cesar Tovar are still listed as holdouts. Perranoski is asking $65,000, Tovar wants $80,000 and Oliva is gunning for $100,000.

The Philadelphia Phillies automatically renewed the contracts of infielders Tony Taylor and Don Money and outfielder John Briggs when they failed to sign by the specified date in the uniform player contract.

Slugfest As Giants Rip Cubs

TUCSON (UPI) —The Giants may wish they could save some of the 18 hits they clubbed against the Chicago Cubs in their exhibition season.

The hitting barrage came off an assortment of Cubs rookie pitchers Friday as San Francisco breezed to a 9-4 victory.

Bobby Bonds wasted no time in getting things started when he led off the first inning with a homer over the rightfield fence.

Willie Mays began his 20th exhibition season with a hit, a Texas League blooper into centerfield.

San Francisco continues the pre-season schedule today with a contest against Cleveland in Scottsdale.

Three-Ball Rule Gets First Test

Mesa, Ariz. (UPI) — There won't be any 3-2 counts today when the Oakland Athletics meet the Milwaukee Brewers in an exhibition baseball game.

The reason: the A's will be using a three-ball walk rule in all their home pre-season games.

A's owner Charlie Finley had installed the three-ball rule in his intra-squad games, causing quite a furor with his pitchers.

The A's announced Friday that commissioner Bowie Kuhn and American League President Joe Cronin have approved a request to use the rule, but only at home exhibition contests.

The A's got a three-hit performance in their Cactus League opener Friday from Vida Blue and rookies Chris Flothe and Arthur Boyd to take a 2-0 win over San Diego.

AN UNSPECTACULAR ROUND

Conservative Dickinson Leads Doral Open Golf

Dickinson fired an unspectacular two-under par 70 Friday for a one-shot, second round lead in the $150,000 Doral-Eastern Open golf tournament with a 138 over Gibby Gilbert, Bruce Fleisher and Ted Hayes.

"My gambles are usually all at the wrong time," Dickinson said.

He said he took a bogey five on the 18th hole on the "blue monster" course—rated the toughest finishing hole in golf — by playing it safe.

Avoiding the water on the left of the fairway, he drove intentionally into the right rough. He then laid up short with an eight iron, avoiding water in front of the green, but then he two-putted for the bogey. His respect for the hole was not diminished.

Dickinson said he is working harder on his game this year after a disappointing performance in 1970, winning only $28,000. He said he was practicing putting so much, "I'm putting all the greens below sea level."

Dickinson, whose last win was the 1969 Colonial Invitational, also said a whippier driver has given him 30 yards more off the tee and a lighter putter was making him bolder on the greens.

Two other veterans more accustomed to the lead than Dickinson came back after disappointing opening rounds on Thursday. PGA champion Jack Nicklaus charged back into the picture with a four-under par 68 for a 142, and Arnold Palmer fired a respectable even par 72, just making the cut at 147.

Nicklaus admitted he didn't expect to play that well, but as it did in the PGA Championship last weekend, his putter bailed him out. He holed birdie putts of 22, 35 and 30 feet.

Fleisher shot a sparkling 67 Friday, and Hayes and Gilbert shot 70s.

Fleisher's round was perhaps the most surprising of the tournament. The 22-year-old former U. S. Amateur champion who lives in an apartment on one of the Doral's courses, failed to qualify for the tour last fall and played on the invitation of tournament officials.

Bunched behind the trio of runnersup at 140 were Doug Sanders who shot a 69, Dave Stockton also with a 69 and J.C. Snead with a 70.

The two hottest rounds were 65s by DeWitt Weaver and Miller Barber, lodging them in a five-way logjam at 141.

Joltin' Joe Named To Network Post

NEW YORK (UPI) — Every so often Joe DiMaggio pops up in the news again and the reason is, he just can't stay idle.

DiMaggio broke another of his retirements Friday when it was announced he had joined the Hughes sports network as vice president assigned to public relations.

The 56-year-old former New York Yankee outfielder and a member of baseball's hall of fame has signed a one-year contract and will travel around the country appearing at various sports events for the network.

Hughes' president Dick Bailey expressed elation at adding DiMaggio, a three-time winner of the American League most valuable player award, to the Hughes family.

"Joe is one of the best-liked athletes and most respected sports figures around, and we feel he will add great prestige to our company in addition to being a great morale booster for us."

Bailey added, "It's true Joe is only under a one-year contract, but we sincerely hope it will be extended for many years beyond that."

DiMaggio, who retired in 1951 and was elected to the hall of fame in 1955, worked as a batting instructor for the Yankees in spring training for six years before serving as special assistant for the Oakland Athletics the past three years.

In addition to being selected for the hall of fame, DiMaggio also was named by baseball as its all-time centerfielder. Dubbed "The Yankee Clipper," he won American League batting titles in 1939 (.389) and 1940 (.352) and compiled a lifetime batting average of .325.

DiMaggio's greatest feat, however, occurred in 1941 when he hit safely in 56 straight games — still a major league record.

A native of San Francisco, DiMaggio continues to maintain a restaurant there in addition to other business interests.

Bowling

Some 32,000 bowlers from all 50 states, Japan, Venezuela, Bermuda, Puerto Rico and Canada are secheduled to compete during the 79-day run with more than $750,000 at stake.

This is the sixth time Detroit has hosted the tournament, now in its 68th year.

Auto Racing

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI)—American Mario Andretti won the South African Grand Prix, first of the 1970 World Championship series, at the Kyalami track Saturday.

The former Indianapolis winner scored his first Grand Prix victory driving an Italian Ferrari.

Second was 1969 world champion Jackie Stewart of Scotland in a Tyrell-Ford and third was Switzerland's Clay Regazzoni, Andretti's Ferrari teammate.

Wrestling

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Humboldt State used its middleweight and heavyweight divisions Friday to capture the Far Western Conference wrestling championships.

Humboldt State dumped defending champion Chico State.

Warriors Get Big Assist

OAKLAND (UPI)—The San Francisco Warriors owe the Seattle Sonics a drink today, but they haven't got time to pay their debt.

The Sonics whipped the San Diego Rockets, 111-110, Friday night, leaving the Warriors, who are in second place in the NBA Pacific Division, three games ahead of the Rockets with only eight games to play.

If San Francisco can hold down that second place spot, Coach Al Attles will have his team in the playoffs.

The Warriors had been walloped by Chicago, 130-103, in the first game of a doubleheader Friday night in San Diego. But they weren't able to stay around to watch the Sonics give them a helping hand since they meet Baltimore tonight in the Oakland Coliseum arena in the second game of another doubleheader starting at 6:30 o'clock.

San Diego will play Chicago in the first game.

Jerry Lucas, who dropped in 21 points, and Jeff Mullins, who scored 18, led the Warriors against the Bulls, who are real hot.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Most Students Reach Four Hearts, But Then Doomed

"Most of our advanced students get to four hearts on this kind of hand," Henry Bethe told me recently when I dropped in to kibitz a teaching session at New York's famous Card School. "How many of them make their contract?" I asked, forgetting that guests shouldn't ask awkward questions.

King Of Spades

West opens the king of spades, and East plays the discouraging deuce. West shifts to the jack of clubs, covered by the king and ace. East returns a club, and South wins with the queen.

The average student draws trumps, using up all of his own trumps in the process. He then tries the diamond finesse, winning with dummy's queen. But how does he repeat this finesse?

Declarer cannot get to his hand, so must lead dummy's ace of diamonds in the hope that the king will fall. It doesn't, and South is lucky if he goes down only two tricks.

EARLY START

South must start the diamonds earlier. On winning the queen of clubs, South should try the diamond finesse before drawing trumps.

When the finesse succeeds, South can afford to draw trumps. Then he repeats the diamond finesse, cashes the ace of diamonds and runs the rest of the diamonds to make his contract with an overtrick. The defenders can stop the overtrick by cashing the ace of spades, but they cannot defeat the contract if South is clever enough to work on his side suit before he draws trumps.

BASIC RULE

The basic rule is very simple: Set up your side suit before you draw trumps. But a player good enough to follow this rule is more than just a student: he is practically in the expert class.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one space.

You have 12 points in high cards and one point for the doubleton, enough for an optional opening bid. You should exercise your option to bid because of the high-card structure and the strong major suit.

30 Days' Jail For Petty Theft

Steven Joseph O'Brien, 21, of San Rafael, has been sentenced to 30 days in Marin County Jail by Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court.

O'Brien pleaded guilty to a petty theft charge last month.

He was originally charged with possession of stolen property and possession of marijuana, but the first charge was reduced and the marijuana charge dismissed for lack of evidence.

O'Brien was arrested Dec. 30 when Sausalito police stopped his car for a loud muffler. Police said they found marijuana and stereo tapes which were allegedly stolen in San Rafael.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, March 6, the 65th day of 1971 with 300 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase. The morning stars are Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Mercury. The evening star is Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1836 Mexican forces captured the Alamo at San Antonio, Tex., killing the last of 187 Americans who had held out for 13 days.

In 1857 the U.S. Supreme Court handed down its landmark Dred Scott Decision. It ruled that Scott, a Negro slave, could not sue for his freedom in a federal court.

In 1964 King Paul of Greece died at the age of 62 and was succeeded by his son, Prince Constantine. Three years later, Constantine was sent into exile by a military regime.

In 1968 long time Congressman Joseph Martin, former speaker of the House, died at 83.

A thought for the day: Elizabeth Barrett Browning said: "If thou must love me, let it be for nought except for love's sake only."

Alcoholism Slighted, Expert Declares

NEW YORK (UPI)—Only a small fraction of what can be done about alcoholism in the United States is being accomplished, says Dr. Luther Cloud, president of the National Council on Alcoholism.

"Abuse of hard drugs and marijuana has nowhere reached the proportions of alcoholism, yet concern for alcoholism is far less than for narcotics addiction," he says.

AMBITIOUS PROJECT — With infinite patience, Romeo Katexac delicately fashions a tiny ivory animal which will be used in an Alaskan sculpture he is planning. When completed the work will feature a hunting scene, complete with dogsled, driver, polar bears and rabbits racing along a large walrus tusk.

Eskimo Art In Sausalito

For more than 1,000 years the Eskimos who inhabit remote King Island in the Bering Sea have carved tools and artifacts from ivory and turned animal skins into clothing.

Three Kings Island Eskimos are in Sausalito for the next two weeks, demonstrating the ancient crafts which have been passed on to them, relatively unchanged, from antiquity.

The three, Paul and Cecilia Nattanguk and Romeo Katexac, can be seen daily at the Scrimshaw, 759 Bridgeway. While the men carve diamond-hard walrus tusk into unique statues and such useful items as cribbage boards, Mrs. Nattanguk sews rabbit and seal fur into moccasins and other kinds of wearing apparel.

All the craftsmen use the same tools Eskimo artisans have used for centuries, although the blades are metal now, where once they were stone.

"Sealskin Charlie" McAlprin, a young American turned Arctic trader who brought the trio to Sausalito after a month's stay in Hawaii said the old arts are becoming obsolete even in Alaska, as the state industrializes the Eskimo artists move to cities and towns.

The trip to the states was the first trip out of Alaska for the Nattanguks and Katexac. They came, according to McAlprin, because it seemed like a pleasant change from the frigid Alaska winter.

After Sausalito, which the trader noticed on a previous trip to California and decided to return to for a visit, the craftsmen will go back to Nome where they have lived for three years since moving from the island which lies halfway between Alaska and Siberia.

In Nome, they make the art objects and clothing for a living. McAlprin, who moved to Alaska six years ago from Colorado, travels all over the remote areas of the state, buying arts and craftwork from Eskimos in fishing camps and tiny villages.

He met the trio about five years ago and because he was impressed by the quality of their work ("It is the finest of its kind I've seen"), invited them to go into business with him.

Most of the carvings and fur clothing are sold to gift stores throughout Alaska.

DRILLING — Paul Nattanguk skillfully operates a primitive bow drill which can put its modern electric counterparts to shame in carving holes in even the hardest substances. As he works, the bow saws back and forth in rapid fashion, the bit turns, the wood smokes from the friction and the drilling is completed in seconds.

WHO NEEDS SCISSORS? — Cecilia Nattanguk slices a fur used in slipper-making with the same kind of tool her ancestors on Kings Island have used for a thousand years. Originally, the blade was hewn from stone. With progress, it became metal, but the tool's design remained the same.

VOLUNTEER AMBULANCE DRIVERS

Three ministers in the Reading, Pa., area are serving as volunteer ambulance drivers after learning there weren't enough volunteers in the daytime to man the Borough of Birdsboro's two ambulances. The three, who are referred to as "holy rollers" are (from left) Rev. C. David Godshall, pastor of St. Mark's Lutheran Church; Rev. Allen R.Beistline (reflected in the rearview mirror), pastor of Christ United Methodist Church, and Rev. James A. Killian, pastor of Christ United Methodist Church, and Rev. James A. Killian, pastor of St. Paul's United Church of Christ.

NEW LOOK IN SERVICES

Happiness Breaks Through

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

When young people complain that church services are boring, they are merely saying out loud what a great many adults have always thought.

The plain truth, to which any veteran churchgoer can attest, is that worship all too often is as dull, dreary, formalized and uninspiring a routine as one is likely to encounter in modern society.

It got that way because of a notion widely held among our Puritan ancestors and still fairly prevalent in churches that worshipping God is a grave duty to be undertaken at the proper times and places with the utmost solemnity.

This grim approach to piety finds no warrant in the New Testament. To Jesus Christ, worship was a joyous business, a way of celebrating the good news that God is and God cares.

WAKING UP

Fortunately, and not a moment too soon, churches are beginning to wake up to the fact that worship is supposed to be a shared happiness, not a penance.

The Roman Catholic Church has extensively revised its liturgy in the past five years. Many of the major Protestant bodies—including Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Lutherans and Methodists—are in the process of overhauling their accustomed rites.

All these efforts at liturgical renewal have several things in common. They are designed to draw the congregation into active participation rather than passive spectatorship. They emphasize community—the fact that worship is the corporate act of a body of people who are supposed to be united to each other by strong bonds of love and understanding. They provide for a degree of variety, so that every service need not be a carbon copy of what was done the week before.

NE LITURGIES

But the most profound and far-reaching change involved in the new liturgies is a rediscovery of joy and thanksgiving as the authentic notes of Christian worship.

The New Worship book of the United Presbyterian Church, for example, suggests this rayer to be said at the beginning of a service:

"God of grace: You have given us minds to know you, hearts to love you, and voices to sing your praise. Fill us with Holy Spirit, so we may celebrate your glory, and truly worship you."

At another point in the service, the minister says—and if he has any feeling for the line, he'll say it with an exultant shout:

"Friends, believe the good news of the gospel!"

And the congregation responds in unison:

"In Jesus Christ we are forgiven."

The spirit of joyous celebration is spreading from the words to the music of public worship. Pastors are learning that the entire mood of a service can be altered simply by choosing hymns that are joyous and triumphant rather than dolorous. In some churches, musical experimentation has gone much further. Washington's famed Episcopal Cathedral, for example, now conducts—each Sunday morning a "guitar mass" in which young musicians celebrate the mysteries of life with a hard-driving rock tempo.

Even dancing, which the Puritans regarded as an invention of the Devil, is coming back into sanctuary where—as the Old Testament clearly records—it originated as an expression of joyous gratitude to God.

Other forms of physical activity which permit worshippers to move around instead of sitting rooted to the pew are being utilized to add a little life to services. Many churches now include in each service the ancient ritual of "passing the peace" in which every person embraces the one next to him and says, "May the peace of God be always with you."

Some churches have processionals in which not only the choir and minister but all members of the congregation get up and march about the aisles bearing colorful banners. This writer's all-time favorite banner, which sums up the whole spirit of the new approach to worship, was carried by a very small boy in a Christmas eve procession. It said:

"Hooray for God."

Some church members who are no longer young in spirit or body look askance at such innovations. But young people—and a surprisingly large number of old people—are responding enthusiastically.

However novel they may seem to those who have grown accustomed to stodginess in worship, none of these things are really new. They are rather a return to the Biblical view expressed by the psalmist who described worship as "making a joyful noise unto the Lord."

Annual Collegium Through March 31

Dr. Wayne R. Rood of the Pacific School of Religion in Berkeley will speak at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the second of the collegium programs at the First Presbyterian Church of San Rafael.

Designed for adults the sessions, an annual event, will conclude March 31. All sessions will be held in the church's Canoles Hall.

Rood's topic will be "How Drama Means" and he will illustrate his theme with dramatic readings.

Marjorie L. Casebier, a leader of the dormant San Anselmo Festival Theater, who inaugurated the collegium this past Wednesday, will speak on March 17 with her topic being "Fantasy Voyage Into Inner Space."

Swiss-born muralist and sculptor Lucienne Bloch Dimitroff, daughter of composer Ernest Bloch, will lead the March 24 program, speaking on "Religion in Art: Art in Religion."

The concluding session will be in the form of a hymn fest: "An Evening With Byron Jones and Father."

Collectively the duo has 70 years of singing experience between them. The younger Jones, a leading baritone in the Bay Area, serves as choral director for the San Rafael City Schools and director of music at the church.

Lutherans, Catholics Hold Papacy Discussion

MIAMI (LC) —An exploratory examination of the papacy from historical and theological perspectives marked the opening of the seventh year of doctrinal discussions between Lutheran and Roman Catholic theologians.

Held recently St. John Vianney Minor Seminary, the semiannual session was the 12th in a series initiated in mid-1965 under the joint auspices of the USA National Committee of the Lutheran World Federation and the US Bishops' Committee for Ecumenical and Interreligious Affairs.

Nineteen churchmen — eight Lutherans and 11 Catholics — considered "The Papacy as Expression of the Teaching Ministry of the Church" as a sub-topic to the overall theme, "The Teaching Ministry of the Church."

Participants in the talks emphasized that the authority of scripture, tradition, creeds, confessions, bishops, and councils are also integral parts of the Church's teaching ministry and that this relationship will emerge more clearly by first discussing the papal office.

Fifteen essays on various aspects of the papacy — regarded as the chief problem of polity between the two communions — were discussed by the scholars as background material to in-depth studies of the main theme at future sessions.

Church Leader To Deliver Sermons

Rev. Wesley Nelson, director of evangelism for the Evangelical Covenant Church of America, will speak on "God Is On Your Side," at the 9:30 a.m. worship service tomorrow of the Marin Covenant Church.

Nelson will also speak at 6 p.m. tomorrow on "What Is The Purpose of the Church Today?" The service will include celebration of communion and introduction of 10 new members.

The visitor is also instructor of evangelism and church strategy at North Park Theological Seminary in Chicago.

Nelson is in Marin this weekend, along with other representatives of the Evangelism Committee of the California Covenant Conference for a pilot workshop with adults of the Marin church on the subject of "community outreach."

The Covenant Church meets at Miller Creek Junior High School, 2244 Las Gallinas Avenue in Marinwood.

Churches Of Christ Set '74 Convention

NEW YORK (UPI) — Betwwen 10,000 and 12,000 delegates are expected to attend the Ninth Assembly of the World Convention of Churches of Christ, which will be held in Mexico from July 30 to Aug. 4, 1974, says the Mexican National Tourist Council.

Other religious conventions already scheduled for Mexico are a conference of the Baptist World Alliance 1973 and the General Conference of Seventh-Day Adventists 1978.

Student Dialogue Postponed

CHICAGO (LC) — The seven-member council of the Lutheran Student Movement has decided to postpone plans for a joint study conference with Roman Catholic students this summer.

Joint planning which had been initiated with the Roman Catholics was interrupted by illness, a spokesman explained, and the period of time remaining was considered too brief for the work still to be done.

After voting to postpone the joint conference, the council approved plans for a week-long LSM assembly which will focus on the relationship of faith and hope to the questions and needs and insecurities of the age.

The council chose "Survival-Revival" as the assembly theme and Aug. 16-21 as the assembly dates. A site in the midwest is still to be selected.

The proposal for a joint study conference with the Roman Catholic students was made last summer at a week-long study conference and general assembly of the LSM at Holden Village, Wash.

The first joint conference was held two years ago at Boulder, Colo., and was undertaken with the Catholics' National Newman Apostolate.

LSM encompasses students from America's three major Lutheran churches — the American Lutheran Church, the Lutheran Church in America, and the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod. Gamma Delta encompasses students primarily from the LCMS.

Series To Center On Rock Opera

"Jesus Christ — Superstar," a rock opera by Andrew Webber and Tim Rice, will be the basis of a series of studies on "The Meaning of Passion" at the Sausalito Presbyterian Church during Lent.

The sessions will be at the church on Wednesdays at 8 p.m. beginning next week, conducted by Reverend David C. Jacobsen, church minister. They are open to the public.

In the first session Jacobsen will explore the general theme of passion as a genuine investment of the person.

Succeeding sessions will be held on March 17, 24 and 31 and on April 14, when the passions of high priest Caiaphas, Judas, Peter, and the crowd will be discussed.

The interpretation of the Passion Story given in the opera will be studied along with passages from the New Testament.

Jacobsen will be preaching a series of sermons on this topic during Lent at the Sunday morning dialogue service. Morning worship is at 10 a.m.

Assemblies Of God Set National Meet

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (UPI) — The Assemblies of God will hold its 34th biennial General Council in Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 19-24 with the theme of "Take the Word."

About 10,000 ministers, delegates and visitors are expected to register for the Council, which will be preceded by the annual meeting of the denomination's General Presbytery, the 200-man general board of the Assemblies of God.

No Place Yet For April Sports Gala

With its planned sports gala less then two months away, a San Anselmo Explorer troop still is without a place to hold the event.

Explorer Troop 15 had hoped to hold a large sports show at the Civic Center from April 29-May 3, but the county ruled out the event, expected to draw large crowds, because of traffic control and security problems.

Troop members, however, charged the county reneged on a promise to allow the event after twice telling the Explorers there was no objection.

With the understanding it had county approval to hold the show outside the Veterans Memorial Auditorium, the troop said, members went ahead and sold $68,000 worth of space to sporting goods manufacturers and stores for exhibits at the site.

Since the county rejected the show, the troop has looked for a new site to no avail, even enlisting the help of Marin legislators in Sacramento.

With the revenue from exhibitors, the troop plans to defray expenses, contribute a sum to the Boy Scouts of America and finance a trip to Europe as representatives of the Boy Scouts of America to put on a mountain climbing exhibition.

The young men have been taught mountain climbing by their scoutmaster, Cal Albert, and are to demonstrate their skills at next month's sports show, if it is held.

Thirty-six youths are in the troop, ranging in age from 14-21.

Medical School Bans Sale Of Cigarettes

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI)—The University of Michigan Medical Center has kicked the habit and pulled out the last of its cigarette machines.

The Medical Center administration agreed to the cigarette sales ban on recommendation of a committee of doctors. Informal polls of the medical staff and hospital employes supported the move.

Carport Appeal Wins Variance

A Tiburon woman who built a carport at 698 Hawthorne Drive without city permission will not have to tear the structure down after all, the Tiburon City Council has decided.

Lucille D. Spangler, was told by the board of adjustments on Jan. 19 that her carport, constructed without a building permit had to be demolished.

In an appeal to the city council Feb. 22, Miss Spangler presented a petition bearing the names of 103 neighbors saying they didn't object to the carport.

Councilmen agreed, and unanimously granted her a building permit and a variance, necessary because the carport was built to the side property line where an eight-foot setback is required by city code.

Canoeing Instructor Course Scheduled

Persons with a basic canoeing certificate are eligible to take a canoeing instructor's course to be sponsored by the Marin Chapter of the American Red Cross March 13, 20 and 27.

Classes will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Corte Madera Creek opposite the Corte Madera Corporation Yard on Lucky Drive.

Students also must be at least 17 years of age. Ann Dwyer will be instructor-trainer.

Bad Check Suspect Booked

A 27-year-old Mill Valley woman has been booked into Marin County Jail on suspicion of passing worthless checks after she was arrested in a Mill Valley beauty salon while attempting to buy a wig, police reported.

Officers said Bonnie Lee Johnson, of 206 Miller Avenue, was arrested about 8 p.m. Thursday in Eileen's Salon, 316 Miller Avenue, after she attempted to pay for the hairpiece by check and an employee notified police. Officers said Miss Johnson was being held for investigation of passing several bad checks worth more than $300 to firms in Mill Valley, San Rafael and Sausalito.

IN THE STUDY of his home at 23 Park Circle, Marin City, Rev. Fred C. Small, at left, reads and prepares a message for his congregation. And, at right, from his pulpit in the Marin City Church of God, he delivers the sermon. He has been assistant pastor and then pastor of the church since 1960, after experiencing a call from the Lord in 1957 that he says "completely revolutionized my life."

Fred Small: 'Revolutionary For God'

Profile Of A Marinite

By GEORGE NEVIN

It's doubtful that many of Marin's commuters find the twice-daily drive along Highway 101 very inspiring.

But Rev. Fred C. Small, pastor of the Marin City Church of God, can't travel the highway without being reminded of a day in 1957 when he was struck by an inspiration so strong that it changed his life.

The experience marked a turning point in his life — of that Reverend Small is certain. As he tells it:

"I had been thirsting for a life in God, seeking the deeper experience I'd been reading about in the Bible, a complete surrendering of myself to the Lord."

"AFTER MUCH prayer and fasting, it came to me as I was driving on the freeway. The Lord poured so much heaven into my soul that I could hardly contain myself, but I didn't lose control. I drove home and went into the study and enjoyed the presence of the Lord."

"That experience," said Reverend Small, with a quick smile, "revolutionized my life. And I've been a revolutionary ever since."

Like most profound experiences, Reverend Small's enlightenment didn't happen overnight. He had been working toward it — though he wasn't aware of the fact — for years."

THE CHAIN of events that led to his spiritual experience, which in turn led to his becoming pastor of the Church of God and Marin City's best-known religious figure, can be traced to his service in the Air Force during the Korean war.

"I had a good friend — a drinking buddy — in Korea," he said during an interview in his office at the church. "We both were transferred from Korea and lost track of each other, but I found him again when I was sent to Hamilton Air Force Base just before my discharge."

The friend had taken up residence in Marin City and had been converted to the Church of God, and he couldn't wait to get Fred Small into the congregation.

"AT FIRST, I refused to go to a service," said Reverend Small, his eyes twinkling, "but he persisted and finally, just to get him off my back, I agreed."

Reverend Small found he liked the informal, friendly church, and went back a second time and then a third.

"I heard it was possible for a man to become a new creature and I was so intrigued that I wanted to try it for myself. And lo and behold, it worked!"

As he tells it, he went to the altar, asked God for forgiveness and then went back and led his wife to the altar with him.

"FROM THAT day in 1954 we've had nothing but peace and continued spiritual growth," said the minister.

But acceptance of God is a long way from accepting a call to the ministry, as Fred Small soon learned. After his vision on the freeway he began studying under local tutors and ministers, and then went to San Francisco Bible College. After a few correspondence courses, he was made assistant pastor of the Marin City church in 1960 and then became its leader when the pastor moved out of town.

Reverend Small believes he was fortunate to hear his calling to the ministry so clearly. Many people miss their calling and wind up in areas of the spiritual world for which they have no talent, he believes.

LIKE ANY pursuit, being a minister takes a certain amount of talent. "A good cook doesn't learn to cook in school if he has no talent for cooking in the first place," he said, "and a preacher is a preacher before he's called."

After he was called, the rest was easy, Reverend Small said: "The spirit permeated me, and I began preaching."

Reverend Small's ideas on the purpose of life and theology center around the notion that all men have one purpose in life: to glorify God.

"Nobody is here accidentally," he said, "but we all have a purpose for our existence. Every man is a vessel, a channel whereby God reveals himself on earth."

MAN, HE believes, is a servant, not a robot, and was made of earth but inspired by heaven. "He has citizenship in both places," Small declares.

God's master plan doesn't require everyone to be preachers like himself, Reverend Small thinks. "Every man is different but his differences are the product of the total plan to manifest all of the attributes of a great God to a great body of people. Every talent is needed."

Much of Reverend Small's work since becoming pastor of the Marin City Church of God has been in organizing and running what he calls the Triple I-C, or Interdenominational Interracial, Involved in Christ

"What Ate Holes In My Son's Sweater?"

It appears that your son wore his sweater while working around the car or in a laboratory where it came in contact with sulfuric acid. The concentration was sufficient to weaken the wool fibers, resulting in the holes you found. Similar damage may occur from hydrochloric acid also found in laboratories and used, too, in cleaning bricks and metals. Neither of these acids is used in any part of a drycleaning plant.

These holes are common in garments of "do-it-yourself-ers." It's well to have such a person around the house, however, he should be careful to wear old clothing when handling storage or automobile batteries or laboratory chemicals.

Crusade.

THE CRUSADE began in 1969 with a tent meeting in Marin City, was moved to Corte Madera Center in 1970 and will be held in Marin City again in 1971.

"The name tells what we're tyring to do," says Reverend Small. "This isn't just for one or two ethnic groups or religious sects. We want people from all backgrounds and religious persuasions to worship with us."

Through the Tiple I-C crusades, which have drawn thousands of worshippers, Reverend Small hopes to prove that "God is not a God of monotony. He made flowers of different hues, hills of different heights, oceans of vast dimensions and people of different colors, but all with one purpose: that God and humanity may be one. And that's my purpose, too."

DESPITE Reverend Small's optimism for the success of his work, he can't help but feel that the world has a long way to go to attain peace and brotherhood.

"We're trying to shift gears in a society that has a great talent for sliding backwards. We're going in the opposite direction from what we should be going; we're closer to war than peace," said the 40-year-old minister.

Men must use their God-given abilities, he said, "to lead the world to peace and brotherhood."

Reverend Small disputes the myth, as he sees it, that Christianity is a doleful religion that precludes its followers from having fun.

"I'VE NEVER had so much fun in all my life as when I found Christ," he says. "But before I was converted I tried to have fun, but couldn't. I did everything — I sang, danced, chased women, tried to drink my troubles away. None of it worked."

Reverend Small believes most people have their priorities reversed when it comes to expecting things out of life. "Christ said to seek first the Kingdom of Heaven and all these things will be added unto you," he points out.

"The tragedy of most people is that they seek pleasure first and God second. That's when we get the illusion that if we have God we can't have pleasure. This is not true."

IF PEOPLE would "seek eternal security before they seek material and physical security, they wouldn't lack for anything," he believes.

Reverend Small doesn't consider himself a religious person — "Religion is like a rocking chair; it gives you plenty to do but gets you nowhere" — but a geuine "born-again child of God who's found his place."

Unhappiness, he believes, is a result of not being in the proper place in life. "People ought to be miserable and unhappy when they're not in their slot," he says. "In the Lord we get all we want and want all we get, but we have no excesses and we have no want."

UNDER REVEREND Small's direction the Church of God has grown from a small congregation without a permanent home to a church of some 60 families.

The church used to meet in an old cleaning shop, and then in a room at the recreation center," he says. "But when most of our furniture got ruined by leaking water and by rats, we decided to look for a permanent home."

A building program was successful in raising enough funds to buy a plot of land at Drake Avenue and Bucklew Street, and the church was able to borrow to build the sanctuary. It was complete in 1965.

IN HIS NEW building Reverend Small has attempted to fashion a truly nondenominational, interracial church. "This isn't a black or white church, but God's church," he says — "a place where all people are invited to share."

The Church of God, Reverend Small reports, has "a beautiful relationship with a number of churches in Marin County. Members of these churches come to visit us a lot, and every Sunday we have a goodly number of persons of varied religious and ethnic backgrounds."

He emphasizes that "the spiritual atmosphere here is not one of wild emotionalism. We try to make people with varying modes of worship comfortable to be here with us."

THE ATTEMPT at the Church of God, he says, is "not to try to hammer people into a certain mold but to challenge them spiritually and encourage their souls to grow — and all of this without fanaticism."

While Reverend Small admits that his official title is pastor of the Church of God of Marin City, he actually considers himself "pastor of Marin County."

"Anywhere there's a need, I'm there. The whole county is my parish."

Master Chef At The House Of Cannelloni

Bill Bisson Caters To The Demand For Haute Cuisine

If you think of the typical master chef as being short and rotund, temperamental and European, you're in for a big surprise when you first meet Bill Bisson.

At six feet two inches tall, Bill weighs in at 207 pounds of mostly bone and muscle. He loves fun and people. And he was born right here in California in —of all places — Angels Camp!

But if his attributes and origin are atypical, Bill Bisson's credentials as a master of haute cuisine are impeccable. His Medallions of Beef a la Bisson, Lasagne Verde de la Casa, Capon Flambe, Steak Diane, Cannelloni and Crepes Suzettes are justia few of the culinary creations that have endeared Bill to the Bay Area's most finicky gourmets.

AS A MATTER of fact, Bill's Crepes Suzettes received nationwide publicity as early as 1952 when they were featured in "The Sullivan Slant," a column then appearing in newspapers throughout the country. Here's what columnist Sullivan had to say:

"Then there's a place on Pacific Avenue in San Francisco called Paris Louvre, 'The House of Crepes Suzettes,' where you couldn't get a bad meal to save your life. Everything is perfect . . . but it's the Crepes Suzettes that make the customers talk to themselves.

"There's a guy who must be about six-feet-six all dressed up in a tall white chef's hat, and he devotes practically all of his time to whipping up those wonderful little pancakes. He assembles all of the ingredients in a saucepan right at your table, then the lights are doused and the mixture is set afire, and the crepes ladled with the flaming elixir. Heavenly!

" . . . Yes, Bill Bisson knows the restaurant business from all angles. He could make a pretty good living in any phase of it. But Bill is smart enough to let his competitors take care of the run-of-the-mill trade while he capitalizes on his individual specialty.

"If that sort of approach works so successfully with Crepes Suzettes, it might be interesting to speculate upon other applications, don't you think?"

IF COLUMNIST Sullivan added a few inches to the "white-hatted giant's" actual height, he also omitted one highlight of Bill's career —his war years with the U.S. Merchant Marine — in which, as a chief commissary steward, he supervised the loading, storage, menus and preparation of food on ships leaving San Francisco for the war zones.

After the war — and for the two years prior to his move to the Paris Louvre — Bisson was at the Palace Hotel in San Francisco. Working under the famous Adolph Bach at the Palace was to Bill one of his most rewarding experiences in the fine art of preparing and serving food.

Bill's Paris Louvre era ended in 1959 when he and his partner, Adolph Motta, sold the restaurant. But the two men joined forces again in 1955 to purchase the West End Villa at Second and G Streets in San Rafael.

The restaurant was completely remodeled and redecorated in Victorian style and opened in September of that year as Bill & Adolph's West End Villa, with Bill managing the new restaurant while his partner continued running his own well-known San Francisco restaurant, Adolph's.

AS WOULD BE expected, Bill spends much of his time inWest End Villa's immaculate kitchen. But when the rush of luncheon or dinner orders has passed the peak you can count on Bill appearing in the dining room to greet his many friends and circulate among the tables to make sure that all have thoroughly enjoyed their food and the way it was served.

Although the "white-hatted giant's" skill and artistry in preparing Crepes Suzettes is undiminished and still very much in demand, Bill has perfected a new specialite de la maison which has earned the West End Villa the sobriquet of "The House of Cannelloni."

Here's his recipe for this Italian dish:

CANNELLONI A LA WEST END VILLA
(Serves 8)

Force meat:
- 1 1 lb. pork butt
- 2 lbs. chicken
- ½ lb. veal
- ½ lb. Riccotta cheese
- 2 tablespoons Parmesan cheese
- 1 egg

Salt and pepper to taste

Boil pork, chicken and veal together with just enough water to cover, adding 2 carrots, 1 medium-sized onion, 2 large sprigs of parsley, 1 stalk of celery, 1 leek, 1 bay leaf and 2 cloves after blanching.

When meat has been cooked and deboned, grind very fine and then mix with remainder of above ingredients. This mixture

IN THE KITCHEN of Bill & Adolph's West End Villa at Second and G Streets, San Rafael, where he is master chef and partner, Bill Bisson carefully places the individual Cannelloni rolls in a platter of his own special sauce before putting them into the oven. Bisson's skill with this classic Italian dish has earned the restaurant the title of "The House of Cannelloni" and has won him the approval of gourmet fans of Continental cuisine.

"HOT PLATE," warns waiter Bob Costa as he serves an order of Bill Bisson's West End Villa specialty, Cannelloni, to a patron. So popular is the dish that Bisson begins preparing the ingredients at 5:30 in the morning to meet the day's demand. And in keeping with the new American interest in haute cuisine, the same care given to the preparation of the food must also be extended to the serving of it. The new interest in Continental foods and service, Bisson says, extends to all the generations.

will be rolled inside the "crepes"

CREPES

½ cup flour
1½ cups milk
3 eggs
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon butter

Mix above ingredients. On griddle heat a little salad oil or shortening. Drop batter in 4-inch rounds on griddle; cook, turning once, until light brown on both sides. then lay crepes out flat on table and roll each one around the force meat. Trim both ends off for uniform size.

Place a thick tomato sauce about ½-inch deep in a 2-inch deep baking dish. Then arrange Cannellonis in this dish on the tomato sauce, spacing them about an inch apart. Place in a medium hot oven (325-350 degrees) for about 10-12 minutes. When Cannellonis are golden brown, place strips of Monterey Jack cheese on top of each, let cheese melt and serve immediately.

Unused Cannellonis will keep in refrigerator three to four days, or can be frozen for later use.

LOOKING BACK through his years of involvement in the preparation and serving of food, Bill Bisson says the big development in American eating habits has been the phenomenal growth in popularity of Continental-type cuisine.

And why this growth? Bisson attributes it at least in part to the boom in European travel of the 1950s and 1960s that enabled many people from all over the United States to experience "haute cuisine" for the first time.

He praises, too, a younger generation that, he says, "continually amazes me with their knowledgeability of foods and fine wines."

THIS GENERATION now in its 20s has also played a major role in the upgrading of food service in the United States, he says.

Hot dogs, hamburgers and apple pie may still be America's national fare.

But there is a demand, as well, for Cannelloni and for Crepes Suzettes that is to be found on both sides of the so-called generation gap.

The Sullivan Reading Program made him a reading "all-star."

It's great to be a winner. No one wants to be a loser, yet many, many kids lose out every day in school because they can't keep up in the classroom. They just can't read adequately.

The Sullivan Reading Program has been making winners out of kids for years. In fact, more than five million school children have used nationally acclaimed Sullivan Reading Materials to improve their reading skills. Sullivan Reading Centers utilize these well-tested Sullivan materials to provide supplemental reading instruction for children at all school levels. (Ask your child's teacher about the Sullivan Reading Program.)

Sullivan Reading Centers offer personalized reading instruction and self-paced group instruction for your child. Classes are small, and a step by step Sullivan teaching program of reading success builds confidence while it improves your son or daughter's reading skills. He'll work at his own pace, competing only with himself, and he or she can come to the Center any day of the week or on Saturday morning. If he needs additional time to make sufficient progress during the course, he's given the extra time at no additional cost. Initial testing and all materials used by the students are also included in the $60 fee for the four-week course.

If your child's like most of our students, he'll enjoy the time spent at the Center as much as he does on the baseball diamond. He knows we believe in "all-stars," too.

Schools Of Scotland Impress Marinites

Curriculum May Sound Old-Fashioned Admit The Johnsons, 'But It Works'

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON

A Ross teaching couple, who went to Scotland for the husband's sabbatical leave, have returned to Marin with new appreciation of the value of the "old school tie."

Woodward Johnson, chairman of the science department at Redwood High School, was granted a half-year sabbatical to study geology and paleontology at University of Edinburgh in Scotland.

He and his wife Ysabel — a former teacher — took their four children along and enrolled them in Scottish schools. This turned out to be a fringe benefit which the Johnsons think may be more important than what the husband learned at the university.

THE ELDEST son, Michael, 13, was enrolled in Fort Augustus Abbey School in the Scottish Highlands at the foot of Loch Ness on the Caledonian Canal.

Sons Patrick, 12, and Timothy, 10, were enrolled in Carlekemp Priory School at North Berwick, where the Firth of Forth meets the North Sea. This and Fort Augustus Abbey School are both operated by the Order of St. Benedict.

Daughter Teresa, 5, entered first grade at a neighborhood state-operated school in Edinburgh — for while in Scotland there is no kindergarten, children start the first grade at age 5.

MICHAEL IS still at Fort Augustus. The rest returned home last month, for the father to resume teaching biology at Redwood High with the start of the second semester.

The two younger boys re-entered Ross School and picked up their Independent-Journal paper routes. Teresa found herself in Ross School kindergarten —about which she is a bit unhappy, since she had started learning first grade readin', writin' and 'rithmetic in Scotland.

The Firth of Forth and the foot of Loch Ness ("Many in Fort Augustus, both from the shore and while on the loch, have had excellent sightings of the Monster," says a brochure describing Fort Augustus Abbey and its school) might seem unlikely places for a pair of Marin County educators, trained in the modern thought and techniques of California's public school system, to acquire a new idea of the meaning of education. But it turned out that way.

"THE REALLY significant difference" between the schools of Scotland and those of California, said Johnson— choosing his words carefully — is the "much broader general educational background" provided there.

He said this applies to English schools, also, of which he visited several while on his leave.

Other significant differences, he said, are that the Scottish (and English) schools offer fewer electives in early years — thus assuring more uniform, well-rounded education for all; that they have concommitant study of subjects which are treated in isolation in California schools (this applying particularly in Johnson's field, the sciences), and that before going on to higher education, all students must pass one of several national examinations.

THE RESULT is what is being talked about here as "accountability."

Although Fort Augustus and Carlekemp schools are operated by Benedictine monks, they are organized along much the same lines as the English "public" (i.e., private) boarding schools. And though neither has its Arnold of Rugby, they are run today much like the Rugby of Thomas Arnold, immortalized in "Tom Brown's School Days" well over a century ago.

The boys attend school six days a week, although Saturday's is a short session, with much time for sports (rugby, hockey, cricket, tennis, swimming and golf at both schools). There is Mass on Sunday for the Catholic boys, who make up a small majority of the enrollment of 140 at Fort Augustus and of half that number at Carlekemp.

BOYS ENTER Carlekemp at age 8 and may continue there until 14 or go on to Fort Augustus at 12.

Besides the sports, there are hikes and outings. Movies — selected to appeal to the boys — are shown each weekend at the schools themselves.

But there are eight class periods a day, plus supervised study hall, after tea. The boys are assigned to "houses," with each house supervised largely by the older boys themselves. They must clean their own rooms, make their own beds, and appear washed, combed, uniformed and with shining shoes each morning. And the uniform includes a tie.

BOTH THESE schools, and the Scottish state-operated schools, said Mrs. Johnson, probably "are comparable to good U.S. schools 50 years ago." All emphasize basic studies, patriotism, and moral training — non-sectarian religious education is included in the state schools also.

The eight-period day makes possible a wider curriculum than students can take in even the largest U.S. schools.

Johnson produced a class schedule from Leominster Grammar School in England, which does not have Saturday classes. Its 40 periods per week include at a single grade level five of mathematics, six of English, two of history, three of geography, five of French, two of chemistry, two of physics, two of art, two of domestic science for girls or woodwork for boys, two of religious education, four of physical education and games, two of music, and a

"form period" which is somewhat like California's "home room."

EACH PERIOD is 35 minutes, and Johnson said teachers do not feel longer classes would be an advantage.

In the fourth and fifth forms (first and second year high school), each student takes nine subjects of which four may be electives.

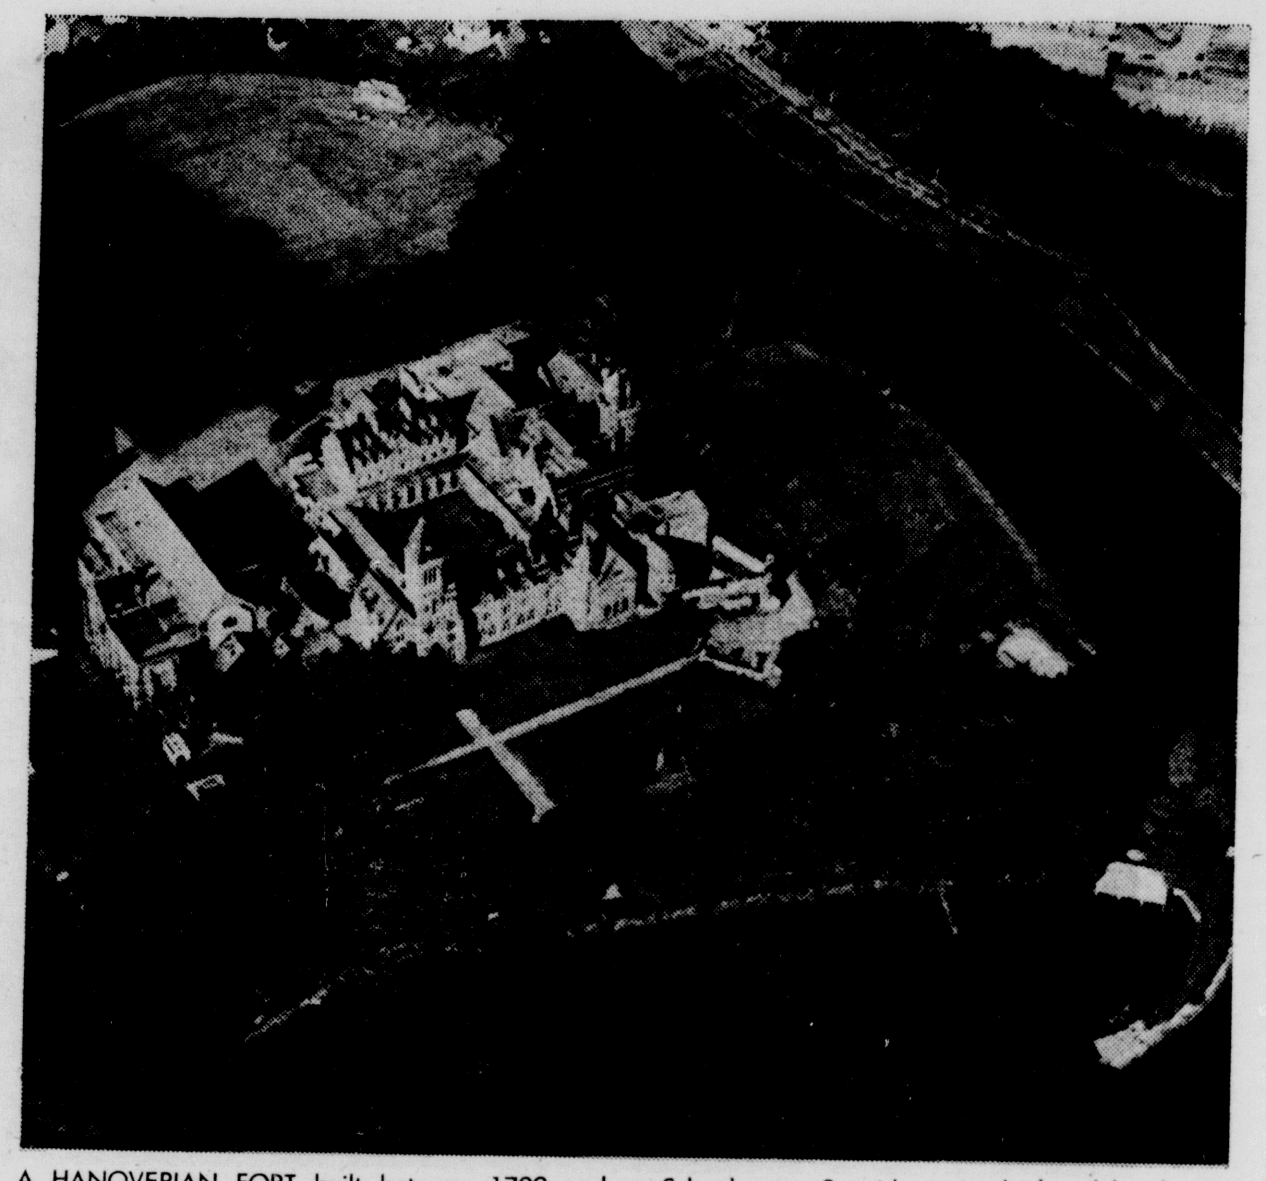
It all sounds very old-fashioned, the Johnsons admitted. So does the Carlekemp claim in a prospectus: "In educating boys in a friendly atmosphere, we aim at developing in them a sense of responsibility, self-discipline and a true sense of values so that they may one day take their place in society."

But, insist the Johnsons, it works.

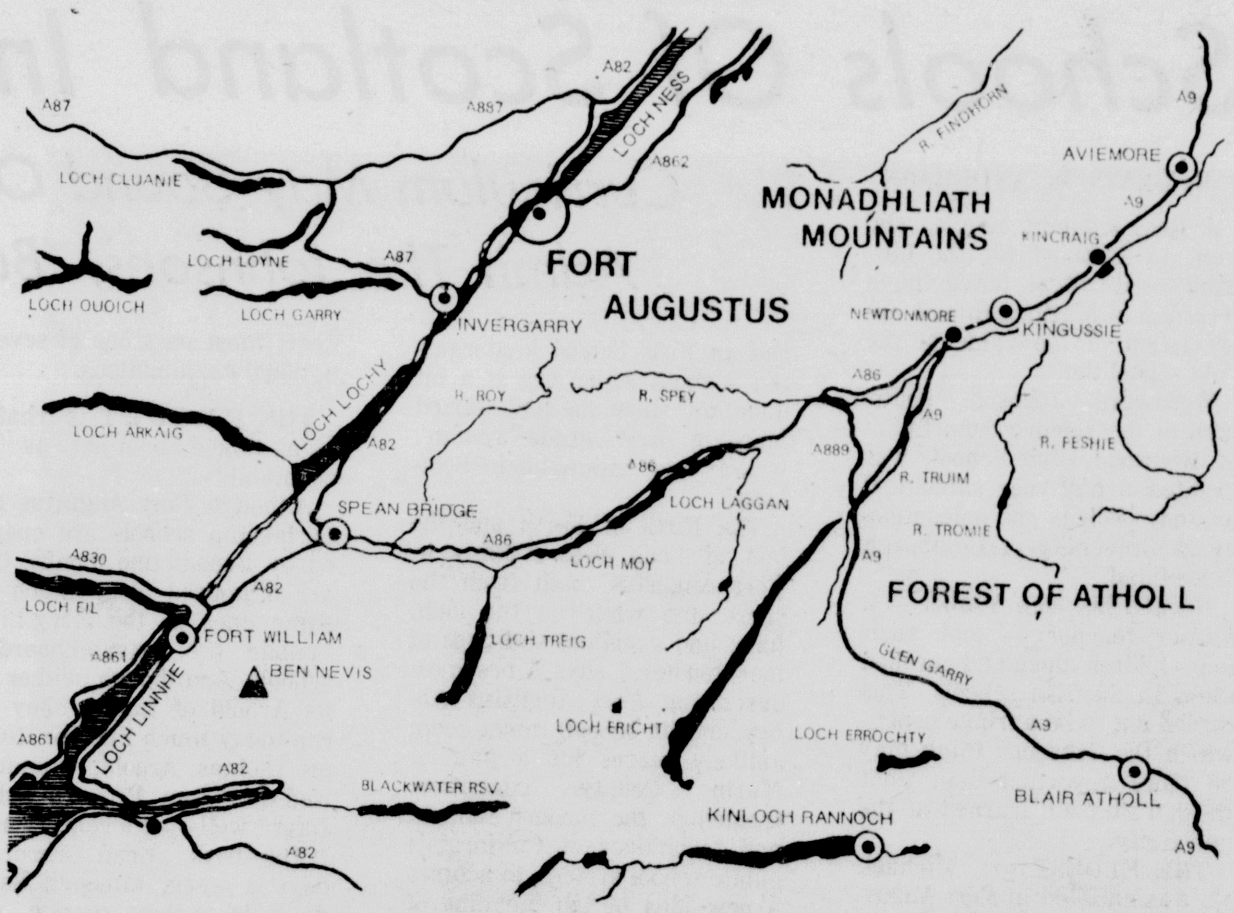
IT SOUNDS very expensive, too — particularly since both schools feature small classes. But the cost at Fort Augustus, including board and room, is $1,200 per year. That's why the Johnsons left Michael there.

They figure it's worth it to get an "old school" education in a Hanoverian fort in the Scottish Highlands, with views of Loch Ness (with or without monster) and of Corrieyalrick Pass, over which Prince Charles Edward Stuart marched his army in 1745 to overthrow the Hanovers.

(Incidentally, from his single term of history at Carlekemp, Patrick can tell you about that Jacobite Rising, and about a lot of other things in the histories of Great Britain, Europe and the United States.)



A HANOVERIAN FORT built between 1729 and 1742 forms the core of Fort Augustus Abbey and School on a Scottish peninsula laved by the River Tarff, Loch Ness of monster fame, and the Caledonian Canal.



FORT AUGUSTUS where young Michael Johnson is attending school is located in the mid-point of the Great Glen of Scotland, some 30 miles south of Inverness and 30 miles north of Fort William, and between Loch Ness and Loch Lomond.

Young Clint Weyrauch Presides Over Marin Station's New Rock Show

By DON KEOWN

Those who dial 100.9 on their Frequency Modulation sets find themselves listening from 8 p.m. to midnight, Mondays to Thursdays, to rock music on the station that has long been known for its more traditional music and public affairs programming.

It is all, says Hugh Turner, KTIM president and general manager, part of a movement "to add a new dimension to our programming."

IN OTHER words, it represents a bold bid by the Marin station for the younger radio audience that in the past has customarily tuned their sets to one of the several San Francisco stations specializing in rock.

KTIM has dubbed its new four-hour program simply "The Show."

The man behind the turntable and microphone for "The Show" is Clint Wyrauch, a slender and energetic 23-year-old of moderately-long hair and an inordinately-wide range of interests.

WEYRAUCH, San Francisco born, continues to live there, commuting between that city and San Rafael for his KTIM job. But he is on the alert for a Marin apartment that would suit his bachelor needs.

Weyrauch attended San Francisco public schools, but for his college education traveled across the country to attend College of New York at Schenectady where he earned a Bachelor of Arts Degree in economics.

With him to New York Weyrauch took a long-felt interest in rock music and a special fascination for radio.

ON DAY, he remembers, he just happened to stroll into the offices radio station, WRUC, "just out of curiosity — to find out how they operated."

This led to a discussion with the management of Weyrauch's favorite subject, rock music, "and before I knew it, they had put me to work in the studio."

Soon Weyrauch was presiding over a program that he says was quite similar to his present show on KTIM.

"I FELT THERE was a real need for rock music at the college," he says. "It was not only what the students wanted, but also what they needed."

His show there ran from midnight to 2 a.m. which, with his studies, made for what Weyrauch admits was "a rough schedule." Still, he stuck with it, and radio became more and more a part of his blood stream.

Among his listeners were not only the college of New York students, but also the co-eds of the all-girl Skidmore College nearby. There the girls lived in all-steel dormitories that shut out all radio programming except for WRUC which was piped into the buildings by carrier current through the electrical system.

"WE HAD A monopoly," smiles Weyrauch.

His new-found satisfaction in radio caused Weyrauch to obtain summer work during vacations at home with San Francisco's KMPX for whom he did the broadcasting from the much publicized Teen Fair at the Cow Palace in 1966.

Weyrauch graduated at Schenectady in June of 1969, and went to Europe for awhile, touring that continent by motorcycle.

BACK IN this country, he went to work for KTIM which broadcasts from the Independent-Journal Building, Fifth and B, San Rafael, in May of 1970.

Not too much later Weyrauch found himself shifted to KTIM's sister city in Lake County, KBLC at Lakeport, and found that experience a somewhat traumatic one.

"I did a little of everything there," he says. "I announced, sold spots, even presided over a show called 'The Trading Post' on which I sold goats and pigs and just about anything else."

BUT WHAT troubled Weyrauch was the Wake County reaction to his beloved rock music that he tried to introduce to KBLC's programming.

"It's a real farming community," he says, "and when I made the mistake of playing some of the underground stuff, we got complaints that included some threats to turn me in to the sheriff's department.

"There's a world of difference in the attitudes between Lake County and Marin County. Up there even the young people — and there aren't too many of.

MARIN'S radio station, KTIM, calls its 8 p.m. to midnight, four nights a week, rock music show simply "The Show." And the man behind the microphone and at the turntable is young Clint Weyrauch who is making a strong bid for youthful music fans who in the past have listened to San Francisco's rock stations. His aim, says Weyrauch, is to give his audience only the best of the rock music, and to present it in a pleasing format.

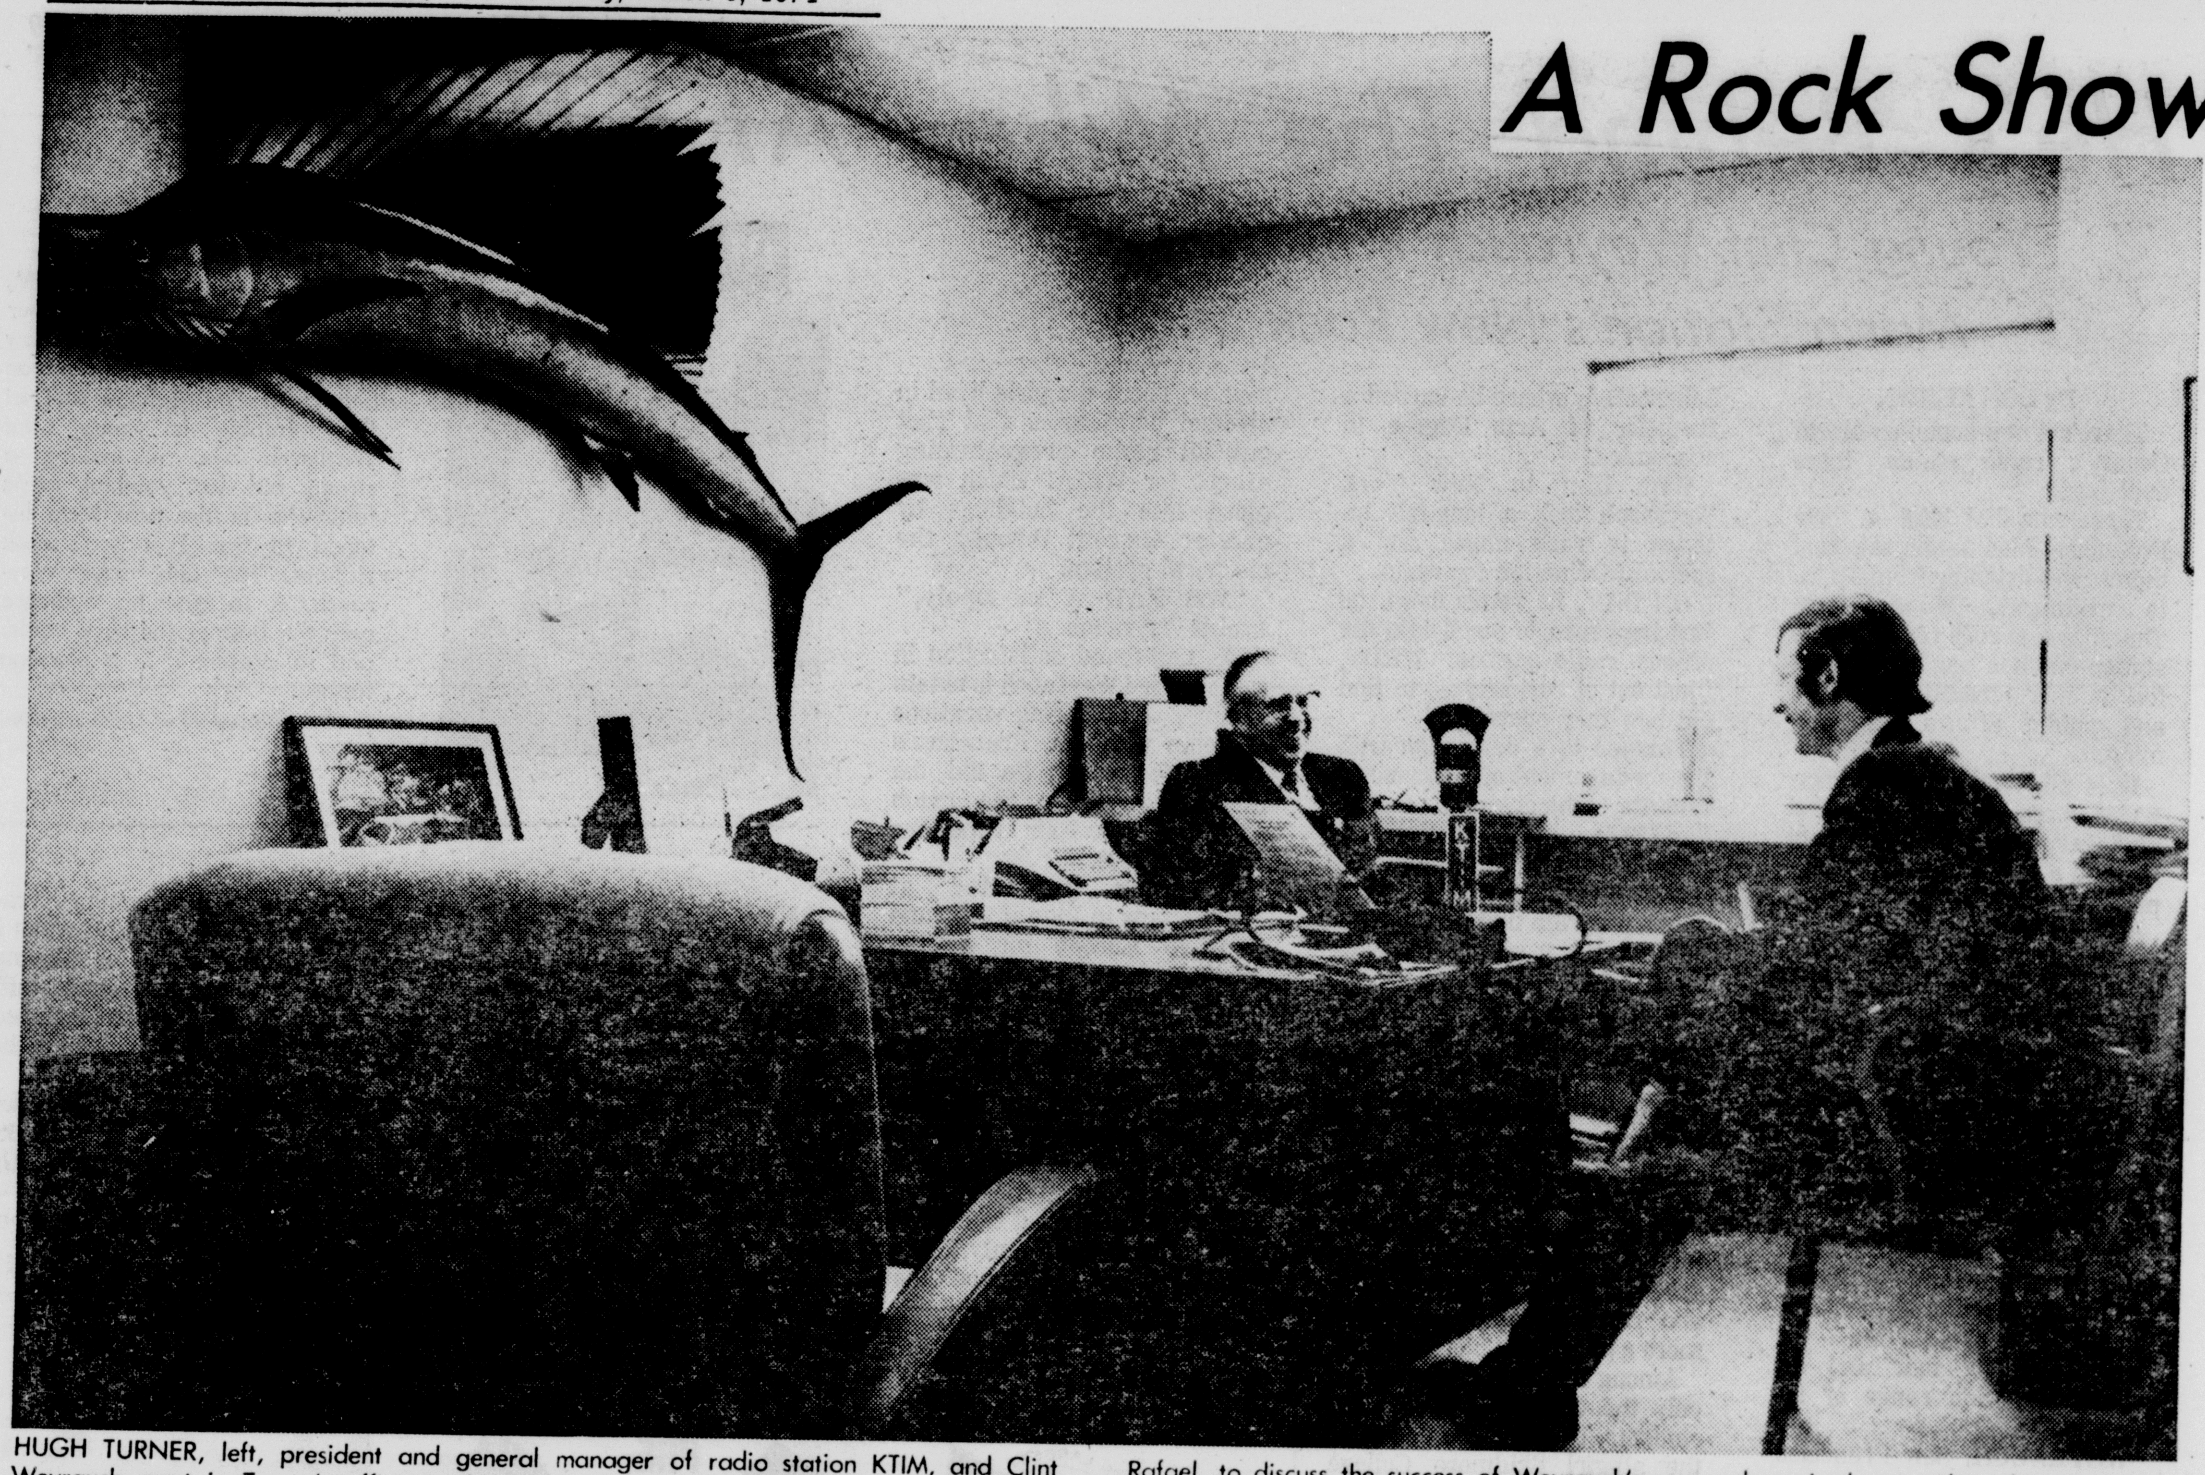
A Rock Show



HUGH TURNER, left, president and general manager of radio station KTIM, and Clint Weyrauch meet in Turner's office in the Independent-Journal Building, Fifth and B, San Rafael, to discuss the success of Weyrauch's new rock music show, and to chart its course for the future. It marks the first time the Marin station has presented such a regularly scheduled rock program from its studios.

CLINT WEYRAUCH exercises considerable care in the selection of the records to be heard on his KTIM-FM rock music program, "The Show." Much of the music heard Mondays through Thursdays, 8 p.m. to midnight, come from Weyrauch's own collection of records, acquired over a period of years.

On Marin's Radio Station

KTIM Makes Strong Bid For Listeners Among The Younger Music Fans

them — have very little interest in rock music. The country or the popular stuff is their bag."

WEYRAUCH was happy to return to Marin and KTIM in November of 1970. "There just didn't seem to be enough stimulation up there," he says of the Lake County job.

Previously KTIM had carried some "live" rock music from The Lion's Share, but had offered no disc jockey programming to challenge the big San Francisco rock stations of KFRC and KYA for the attentions of young listeners.

WAYRAUCH says: "Hugh Turner has been behind me all the way. This surprises some, since KTIM has something of a reputation for a more conservative, traditional broadcasting. But a closer examination would show that KTIM has always been innovative, willing to try something new and striving for a variety in its programs."

What can KTIM offer young Marinites in the late hours that they cannot already hear on the San Francisco stations?

Greater selectivity, for one thing, answers Weyrauch. "We try to play the very best rock music."

And a sensible, appealing format, for another.

"WE DON'T go off on tangents with a 15-minute jazz cut or an hour of talk," he says. "In fact we try to hold the talk down to a minimum. We keep a tight show."

But Weyrauch does work in announcements and comments that he feels will be of special, local interest to his audience — what is coming up at pep-

Most of the recordings Weyrauch plays come from his own collection, which he estimates to number 1,000 discs and tapes "dating back to 1955 or so and the heyday of Elvis Presley and Chuck Berry."

MARIN RECORD shops such as the Sound Shop provide him with more music. "And of course we get some records from the promoters."

Is there any good reason for offering Marin four hours of rock music four nights a week? Are the songs really worth the listening? Are they better, or worse, than the music of earlier generations?

"Music has evolved," says Weyrauch. "From the ordinary love songs of the past we have progressed to music today with more depth and with real social portent. Each song, if you listen, has a social message for our day.

"IN OTHER words, today's music has socially redeeming features that go beyond the sound itself which many young people find so pleasing. There is a whole new depth to music."

To create interest in "The Show," KTIM launched it by giving away a Magic Mountain waterbed.

So far, says Weyrauch, the response to the new program has been "very good — in fact, fantastic. It is evident that we are picking up a lot of listeners who used to dial the San Francisco stations."

AT THE station, Weyrauch also sells commercials for the A.M. programming "which I enjoy less than the music show, but which I realize is invaluable experience," and does some of the less technical engineering tasks required of all personnel by today's smaller radio stations.

Outside the station, Weyrauch has a number of interests, three of them his modes of travel.

He owns a big Harley Davidson motorcycle and he also owns a Ferrari automobile "that makes me look like a real capitalist." And he also holds a pilot's license, having received his flying training in New York and at San Carlos, and he sometimes rents a Piper or a Cessna for a flight.

HE ATTENDS automobile rallies and admits a liking for speed although he has not raced competitively.

He is a devotee of a number of sports, principally water and snow skiing, and he takes in the football games.

As for his social life, he says: "I came close to getting married once, but was saved."

He says he will remain with radio as long as he finds it interesting — "and I found it absolutely exhilarating now" — but notes that he always has that schooling in economics to fall back upon if he needs another profession. The mortality rate among disc jockeys is high, but less so on community stations such as KTIM than one of the big city stations. So Weyrauch feels that "The Show" has a long and bright future on the KTIM-FM (100.9 on your dial) schedule.

A WEAKNESS, or an enthusiasm, to which young Clint Weyrauch admits is fast transportation. He alternates between his sleek Ferrari automobile, above, and his big, powerful Harley Davidson motorcycle, at right, in commuting between San Francisco and Marin for his work, and in his pleasure rides. He also holds a pilot's license and sometimes rents planes for flight. (Independent-Journal photos)

THE BAHAMAS and their capital city of Nassau offer Americans a chance to savor a delightful blend of Caribbean and British cultures only a short distance from U.S. shores. And the markets dispense a wide variety of wares, ranging from conch shells and tropical fruit to the finest European-manufactured goods. This tourist finds the colorful straw market at Nassau an attractive backdrop for his picture-taking. It is an ideal spot, too, for the collection of some shopping bargains.

Conch Shells Sell Briskly In Bahamas

The Travel Pages

Vacationers searching for the unusual around the Bahamas capital of Nassau, and on Paradise Island across the harbor, are doing a great deal of note-making nowadays.

Not with pencil and paper as you might imagine, but with conch shells.

Visitors to these popular shores are finding that the conch, a source of beauty and food, can also be the source of a powerful trumpet-like sound. Sales of this easily obtainable souvenir continue to be brisk.

Bahamians have been blowing the conch (pronounced konk) for countless generations — using the loud blasts over stretches of water to herald the arrival of their boatloads of produce. Lately, more and more tourists, intrigued be the idea, have been "horning in" on the act.

To prepare a suitable conch shell for blowing purposes, (the Lamb Conch is an excellent one to use) the point is carefully sawed off about an inch from the tip, leaving a hole about three-quarter-inch in diameter. This opening is filed until smooth for the lips. The conch is then blown like a bugle.

Uncut conch shells can be purchased inexpensively along the docks in bustling Nassau. Conches already prepared for blowing are also available around town at slightly higher cost. A place you can buy both is at the Seafloor Aquarium, one of Nassau's prime attractions, where visitors peer through large windows into mammoth tanks and come face to fin with hundreds of fascinating fish. There is also a regularly scheduled show featuring performing dolphins and sea lions.

Aside from its unusual horn-blowing characteristic, the conch also possesses the quality of great beauty. Even more lovely than the common pink shell are the King Conch, Twist Conch, Lamb Conch, Screw Conch and Porgie Conch.

In addition, this gift from the crystal clear sea, is a highly valued food — with the mollusk eaten raw or cooked. Local recipe books cover such tasty dishes as conch fritters, conch chowder, curried conch, creamed conch and conch salad.

Indicative of the close association of the conch with the region was the first Bahamas postage stamp, issued in 1859. An illustration of the shell appeared along with that of a pineapple and the head of Queen Victoria.

Traveling Alone Has Advantages

If your best friend has let you down, and you are now faced with spending a two-week vacation on your own, perhaps you should consider the positive aspects of going it alone.

Many women actually travel by themselves by preference. When there are no one else's plans to consider, you can do what you want, when you want to do it. You can eat at oddhours, or take a nap in the middle of the day, and no one will consider you strange, or resent it. You have time to think, and to develop a new and clearer perspective about yourself, and people and situations around you at home.

You also have the satisfaction of knowing that you can be self-reliant.

Is it safe?

A number of women who have been lone travelers for a number of years were asked this question, and all agreed that safety was never a problem. However, they all also agreed that one of the reasons for this was that they took normal precautions — usually the same ones they exercised at home.

It is a good idea to read a couple of guide books on the area you plan to visit before the trip, so that you become familiar with local customs. In Milan, Italy, for example, one of the women interviewed, who wanted to see this beautiful city after dark, was told politely by a kindly gentleman, that "nice" women were not usually seen out on the streets alone at night.

Other recommendations from seasoned women travelers include:

Insist on written confirmation of travel and hotel reservations. Do not overpack. Porters are not always readily available, and with new permanent press materials one suitcase is not only possible but also practical. Take a supply of travelers checks instead of cash. Plan a basic sightseeing tour for each area you visit, before going out on your own. This is also a good way to meet other travelers.

A common fear is that you may become ill in a strange city or country. Most hotel managers, airline personnel, and the U.S. Consulates in cities outside the U.S. are prepared to direct you to a qualified physician, usually one who speaks English.

It is also a good idea to bring some basic medications with you for sudden upsets, which always seem to happen when the local drug store has closed for the night, even if it does carry your medication.

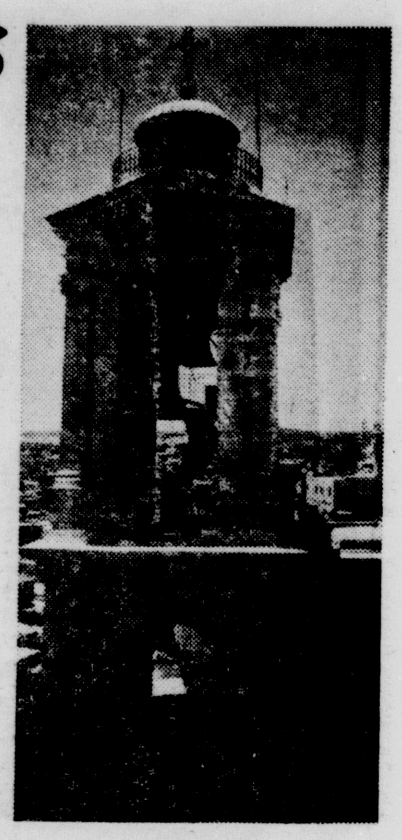
Fear of not making travel connections, new foods, and anxieties about unfamiliar places often put a strain on the digestive system. Take with you a preparation for diarrhea, and an antacid. (There are also new medications especially for relief of gas pains.)

Aspirin, an antiseptic liquid or cream, and Band-Aids should also be part of a basic kit.

Will you be lonely?

In spite of keeping busy and having a good time, there may be occasions when you will be. At such times, put on your best dress and makeup and treat yourself to a special dinner at an elegant restaurant, go see a play, or do anything else that you know usually your spirits. The idea is not to sit in your room and feel sorry for yourself.

The fact that many women who started to travel on their own for business reasons continue to do so on their vacations, is perhaps the best recommendation for your going ahead with the trip you planned — even though your friend may have cancelled out.



THE BIBLICAL-minded visitor to Israel is certain to include the village of Bethlehem in the Judean Hills just 12 miles south of Jerusalem in his Holy Land itinerary. The hamlet is dominated by this bell tower of the Church of the Nativity which is built over the manger where the infant Jesus was born. David, the shepherd who became king of the tribes of Israel, was also born in Bethlehem.

Irish Plan Different Kind Of St. Pat's Day

The Irish have done a switch. From being a stay-at-home type holiday they have made St. Patrick's Day (March 17) the center of their Spring Festival.

This year there will be parades in major cities like Dublin, Cork, Galway, Limerick, which while not necessarily trying to rival New York, Boston and Chicago, will nonetheless have strong U.S. representation.

Irish International Airlines reports that 12 bands will fly over to take part in parades in Ireland. They come from New York, Connecticut and Washington, D.C.

As part of the national day attractions, the Irish have also changed around the social calendar.

This year the Dublin Theater Festival — generally a Fall event — goes on between March 8 and 20: and affords the visitor the chance to premiere some works that sooner or later end up on or off Broadway.

And in Dublin the best theater seats start at less than three dollars!

THE UNIFORMS encountered by Americans touring Europe are very much a part of the fascination that continent holds for its U.S. visitors. None of the garb is more colorful than the uniform worn by the Greek soldiers who stand guard outside the Royal Palace in Athens.

Berlin's Center For Arts And Research

A center of the arts and scholarly research is rising gradually from the ashes of what used to be Berlin's diplomatic quarter.

The unique complex of impressive proportions will become the permanent home for many of West Berlin's priceless art treasures and historic documents, bringing to an end a long and dramatic odyssey.

THE FIRST building was the Philharmonic Hall — which was dedicated in 1963. Since its opening, this bizarre, tent-like structure designed by Hans Scharoun of Berlin has won wide acclaim among musicians, music lovers and architectural critics as one of the world's greatest concert halls.

Like a piece of sculpture, the ochre concrete exterior should be viewed from all sides, to be fully appreciated. Inside, a last arrival for a concert may consider it a challenge to find the way up the multitude of swinging and straight stairs to find his seat.

The auditorium itself is simply awe inspiring. Scharoun has placed the audience on various terraces surrounding the orchestra stage, so that it is in full view from each of the 2,200 seats.

Mies van der Rohe's magnificent New National Gallery — with its clear and uncompromising lines — harmonizes with the graceful 19th Century St. Matthew Church which will become the focal point of the cultural forum. It was among the last and most beautiful creations of the great architect who died in 1969, a year after the gallery was dedicated.

FROM THE almost austere square steel and glass pavilion, stairs lead down to vast halls where Berlin's collections of 19th and 20th Century art are on display.

Across the street from the New National Gallery, the gigantic State Library is under construction. The first sections of this ultra-modern archive — housing the latest word in technical equipment, reading, research and storage facilities — will open later this year.

This building, too, was designed by Hans Scharoun, now an honorary citizen of Berlin, to blend with his own Philharmonic Hall as well as with Mies' Museum. It is expected that by 1975 about three million volumes will be installed here. The ultimate goal for this library is about eight million volumes.

With the opening of the State Library vast collections of invaluable volumes, documents, oriental and occidental manuscripts, original music scores by famous composers, incunabula and historic maps will return to Berlin. It will be the end of their long odyssey which started during the war when the most important collections of the Prussian State library were shipped out of Berlin.

PLANS FOR the Tiergarten Cultural Center include five additional museum buildings to house the various collections of occidental art, a new home for the Institute of Music Research (another contribution by Scharoun), and the transfer of the Latin American Institute to the new State Library complex.

The Tiergarten area close to the wall was carefully chosen as the site for the Cultural Center to form a continuation of the cultural buildings in East Berlin. City planners hope that one day Berlin's people will be able to move freely between East and West and view entire collections.

Brazilians Understand Their Spirit Worlds

DRUM & CANDLE by David St. Clair; Doubleday, 304 pages, $6.95.

By DON KEOWN

Brazil, says the Vatican, is the world's largest Roman Catholic country.

True, says David St. Clair. But it is also the world's largest Spiritist country.

The same worshipers who attend mass in the churches of a Sunday morning are quite likely to have been present for rituals in the spirit house the night before.

There are prayers to the Father, the Son and Holy Ghost. And there are exhortations to Yemanja, Oxala and Ogun as well.

St. Clair, Ohio-born, Columbia University educated, has spent 12 years in Brazil as a news magazine correspondent and freelance writer with a special interest in voodooism and its kin cults.

In "Drum & Candle" he records his observations and his impressions of a country and a people saturated with beliefs in ancient gods and spirits.

And it is not, St. Clair makes plain, simply the poor and the illiterate who nourish such beliefs. Brazil's more sophisticated and more affluent whites have their own religious rituals that are quite apart from their Catholic faith.

St. Clair breaks down the religious beliefs of Brazilians into four divisions.

First, there is the Roman Catholicism which most Brazilians profess.

Second, there are the Candomble beliefs and rituals brought to Brazil by black slaves mainly out of the culture of Africa's once great Yoruba nation. This, basically, is what Americans call "voodooism." Its strength lies with the blacks, particularly the less educated and those living in the backwoods.

Third, there is the Spiritism derived from 18th Century European mysticism and particularly from the writings and teachings of Allan Kardek. Here the followers are most likely to be white and from the more affluent strata of Brazilian society.

And last there is Umbanda, a more complicated, highly organized series of religious practices combining some of the aspects of Kardekism with Candomble beliefs.

St. Clair has studied all these in far greater depth than have most visitors, and eventually confronts himself with this question: "Do I, a white, educated Christian American believe in the powers of the Brazilian spirits?"

His answer: "I cannot truthfully answer no. I must answer, truthfully, that I do. There it is. In print."

And he goes on: "I do believe in the pagan spirits that inhabit that vast South American nation called Brazil. I have seen too much not to believe . . . "

Much of his book is a recitation of the evidence that has convinced him despite the strong doubts with which he began his studies — spirit manifestations, table rappings, spirit operations, prophecies come true, cards that foretell the future, "events that cannot be explained in any other way."

With St. Clair the reader attends exotic rituals and meets a diverse assortment of practitioners.

The flamboyant Edu upon whose powers Brazil's most successful soccer team relies, and Umbanda medium Tancredo da Silva Pinto, "the black pope of Brazil," are but two of many others.

Spirit worship, St. Clair reports, has the advantage over Catholicism in the struggle for the minds of the Brazilians in that the former is strictly a Brazilian belief. "It is theirs without outside interference . . . as much a part of their lives as their own families, their friends and their country. They accept it and take it seriously.

"Foreigners may laugh and criticize, but they don't understand. The Brazilians understand. The spirits understand the Brazilians. The two planes — worldly and unworldly — work together and help each other.

"It's that complex, and yet it's that simple."

And Catholicism in Brazil has found it necessary more and more to accommodate itself to and even to accept spiritism as a companion belief, the author asserts.

And St. Clair suggests that just perhaps "these uneducated black-skinned descendants of illiterate slaves have something we modern sophisticates do not. That these people have managed to stay pure and natural and close to Nature in such a way that the secrets of Nature are revealed to them.

"Now maybe the ways they interpret these secrets are not 100 per cent correct. Maybe they see spirits and demons and talk to dead friends because this is the way that the Great Force of Nature (God? Buddha? Jesus? Oxala?) can get through to them.

"Maybe this is the way that the Brazilians understand things we refuse to see."

St. Clair suggests that for all our vaunted science, our own society falls far short of the Brazilian in its exercising of the powers of the mind. In Brazil, he contends, what we would regard as miracles are commonplace. And he predicts that some day we, too, will be performing such miracles, although probably not to the accompaniment of beating drums and lighted candles. Indeed, he suggests, there seems to be already an awakened interest here in a fuller exploration of the powers of the human mind.

St. Clair is no great shakes as a writer, although he warms up as his book progresses. But it is his material that makes his book such engrossing and provocative reading.

And trilingual, motivated by a keen curiosity and an adventurous character, he has been in a unique position to collect information upon a subject about which North Americans have been only poorly informed.

He won't convert you to voodoo or spiritism. But he will start you to thinking —and wondering.

JOHN SLOAN'S STUDY of a woman hanging out her wash from a tenement fire escape is reproduced in "American Painting, 1900-1970," the newest volume in Time-Life Books' excellent Library of Art series, as an example of the Ash Can School that set U.S. painting on a new course in the early 1900s. The details of everyday life became the artists' concern. And Sloan charged this canvas with rough-brushed vitality, color and detail. The book continues through the successive waves of art schools and trends — realistic and abstract — on into the pop-op minimalists of the 1960s and 70s. An interesting array of exemplary art is reproduced, much of it in color. The text is credited to Time-Life editors, with an introductory chapter by Dr. John W. McCoubrey of the University of Pennsylvania, who also served as consultant. Price of the 192 page book is $7.95.

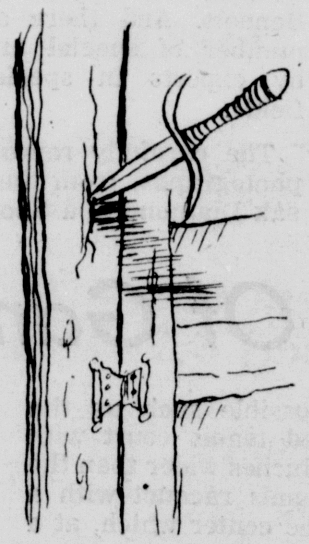
THE KIDNAPED CHILD by John Creasey as Gordon Ashe; Holt, Rinehart and Winson; 186 pages, $4.50. Reviewed by Don Keown.



We much prefer John Creasey's George Gideon or Roger West yarns to his other fiction. But under any of his several pen names and using any of the several characters he has created, Creasey is simply incapable of writing a bad crime novel.

So if "The Kidnaped Child" is not first-rate Creasey, it is nonetheless entertaining reading.

It is a first U.S. printing of a Patrick Dawlish adventure that appeared in England 15 years ago. The husky and handsome Dawlish, a private operator in the days before he became the deputy assistant commissioner of police, becomes involved in the highly complicated kidnaping case in which the child of a close friend is the victim. The Dawlish story is much more physical (in current sports parlance) and less cerebral than a West or Gideon novel. Our hero is up against a whole and evil gang. But eventually, of course, good wins out over the bad.

We can understand why there was no great hurry to publish "The Kidnaped Child." Yet it would be a shame to miss out on anything by Creasey, even one that is not his very best.

though probably not to the accompaniment of beating drums and lighted candles. Indeed, he suggests, there seems to be already an awakened interest here in a fuller exploration of the powers of the human mind.

"RIGG'S HANDBOOK of Nautical Etiquette" (;4.95) is a small, handsized compilation of the rules, customs and traditions of boating, both sail and motor. Compiled by H. K. Jan Myrdal: Mao's Charlie McCarthy

Liu Lung is a hamlet in the Yenan area of China's hinterland. Jan Myrdal spent most of 1969 there, observing and interviewing the villagers. He did the same in 1962 and wrote "Report from a Chinese Village." This sequel compares present village life to the earlier time.

Myrdal's purpose is to give a "true picture of the cultural revolution" and its impact upon a microcosm of the Peoples Republic.

To the extent that we learn something of the modes, manners and aspirations of agrarian Chinese there is merit to this work. It is also a polemic, and a hopelessly inept one.

Myrdal swallows Maothink without a burp. if you would believe him, the tug and pull of life in Liu Lung centers on finding the broadest application of Mao Tse-tung Thought. Soil erosion, pig production, manure spreading, it's all there in the aphorisms of the little red book. (Question: is Maofarming superior to Jewish farming, or is that a kibbutz?)

Almost any classic polemic I've read pulled me into the orbit of the author's rationale, for a time at least. Not so Myrdal.

He believes a report on episodes in one village constitutes an exegesis and a justification of the cultural revolution. In fact, he gives a chilling indictment, albeit unintentionally. Because the whole thrus of Maothink in Liu Lung is Thinksame. Mindless application of Mao's political and social philosophy to food production, social structure, school curricula and family relationships.

Trenchant questioning, intellectual honesty, understanding of individuality — all are lacking in Myrdal.He is no more than a Swedish Charlie McCarthy for mao Tse-tung.

When Innocence Came To An End

THIS FABULOUS CENTURY, VOLUME II by editors of Time-Life Books; Time-Life, 288 pages, $9.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Time-Life continues its wonderfully illustrated Fabulous Century series of "pop" histories, recording the events, moods and trends of the 20th Century a decade at a time.

The years 1910-1920 are covered in volume two. It was, of course, a decade dominated by World War I.

But it was also a decade of suffragettes on the march, Prohibition, the silent motion picture, the "Tin Lizzie," George M. Cohan, Theodore Dreiser, Eddie Rickenbacker, Irving Berlin, the chautauqua show, patriotic fervor, witchhunts and much, much more.

Most generally, it was, for America, an age of innocence coming to an end. And the beginning of a new international ego that was to bring responsibilities and eventually involvement in a war that took the lives of thousands of its young men.

They were very different times from today, and yet they were, in Time-Life's words, "afluent times roiled by increasing ferment and discontent," a description that could be accurately applied as well to the late 1960s and early 1970s.

The Time-Life book captures the flavor and spirit of the era splendidly, and the collection of period illustrations is simply marvelous.

The "This Fabulous Century" series ranks as a most commendable use by Time-Life of its tremendous resources so ideally suited to this sort of thing.

EMANCIPATED LADIES try out men's pipes, drinks and haberdashery in this photograph from Time-Life's "This Fabulous Century 1910-1920," proving that Women's Lib is not all that new.

Cookbook For The Vegetarian

VICTORY THROUGH VEGETABLES by Joan Wiener; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 16 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

This book is aimed at vegetarians and the macrobiotics mob, but there is no reason why the cook who has simply tired of bland vegetable dishes that detract from her other delicacies cannot make fine use of it.

In all, young Mrs. Wiener has gathered more than 200 meatless recipes, from Florentine beans, to syrupy sweet applesauce cake, from vegetable roast, to applecream biscuits, from Indian lentil soup to herbed chickpea salad.

They're on the health food side, and almost all of them sound delicious.

The macrobiotic dishes provided by Barbara Thralls are something else — strictly for the believers. Boiled carrots and spinach in sauce, squash soup, fruit tempura, the like. But even here there are some promising suggestions — a barley bean soup for instance, an apple crisp and sesame crackers.

For Sale: 100 Million Dollars Worth Of World's Treasures

What are shown and described are a sampling from the best pieces sold at auction during the 1969-70 season by Sotheby's of London and Parke-Bernet of New York City.

There is no inclination to dispute the assertion that the sales made through these two houses "represent the major part of all important works of art sold at auction throughout the world" during the season, totalling as they do something over a hundred million dollars.

The items reproduced in the illustrations are arranged in categories, each with an introduction by Ian Bennett. And there are a number of special articles by experts in specialized fields.

The carefully reproduced photographs, from the Nassak Diamond to a George II soup tureen, from a Francis Bacon painting (that sold for $55,200) to an Edgar Degas canvas that went for $168,000, are the big attraction. Audubon bird art, 10-century-old ritual wine vessels a magnificent Russian ikon, Samuel Cooper's miniature of Charles II, German carvings, a Van Gogh ($875,000), a Matisse ($230,000), rapiers, cups, plaques, exquisite jewelry are among the other delights for the eyes. But one should not overlook the importance of the knowledgeable and literate commentary that has also been provided as a worthwhile accompaniment to the pictorial splendor.

THE COMPLETE UPMANSHIP by Stephen Potter; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 349 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Gordon Parr.

Stephen Potter authored a number of books having to do with the principal of upmanship or the art of being one-up on your fellow man in every conceivable circumstance from cocktail party conversation to business. This volume combines all of the previously published books by Potter on this topic and as such is probably a more successful book than each of the individual efforts.

Prolonged comment on any one aspect of Potter's theories gets to be a bit much, but if the reader can pick and choose from among the various applications and examples as in this book it is a much more amusing exercise.

Gamemanship, Potter defines briefly as "The art of winning games without actually cheating". This body of knowledge was put together after much personal observation and participation in games of various types such as tennis, croquet, ping pong, etc.

Potter found that certain clever. individuals often prevailed over those more skilled in these sports through the use of conversational gambits designed to place the other fellow in an awkward position, one of unease. Other devices were also employed when possible such as the home-constructed tennis court with one back line 6-inches wider than the other or the tennis racquet with a piano wire in the center which, at a strategic moment before the game, would be plucked — accompanied by the comment, "Always like a tightly strung racquet." This methodology was, of course, easily extended to other areas of human endeavor.

Thus the salesman is taught to act the role of the kindly idiot, allowing the prospect to explain the seemingly complex contract to him and in fact take it out of his hands and sign it with a good-natured flourish.

Another natural is winemanship wherein the most ordinary bottle of family red is clucked over and the cork removed with such ceremony that the guests are quite in awe of it by the time it is finally poured. If in spite of everything it is after all a really horrid wine it can then be treated with academic interest: "Superb wine, but it has its periods of recession."

You may also learn that art of Not Rock-Climbing, Christmas Giftmanship, and Conversationship. They are more than amply covered in Potter's very British, very subtle style. Once over the hurdle of the quite dated mannerisms and references, there is a chuckle or two here. A bit strained perhaps but a chuckle nonetheless.

PERT AND PRETTY, these two little zinnias, the Peter Pan Pink and the Peter Pan Plum, both won All-America Selections gold medal awards for 1971. Planted together, they make for an outstanding color show in the garden.

Tiny Zinnias Smash A Record In The All-America Scoring

Small Annuals Lead The Way In Testing Of New Flowers

Two little zinnias have broken a record!

For the almost 40 years that All-America Selections has operated test gardens in many states and several countries, that judges have observed and scored thousands of entries in the trials, none has received so high a score as Peter Pan Pink and Peter Pan Plum. Both are gold medal winners.

They're dwarf, they're decorative and they're delightful. Except for flower color they are twins — dwarf, bushy, very early to start blooming, free-flowering all summer and "self-cleaning" because the new leaves cover the older flowers.

Both are first generation hybrids, grow from 10 to 12 inches tall, have blooms from three to four inches in diameter and start to blossom when only six inches high.

Even their colors contrast beautifully although you'd never guess it from the written description. Peter Pan Pink has coral pink blossoms which become two-toned as they age; salmon-rose in the center while the outer petals retail their coral pink hue.

Peter Pan Plum, striking when planted with Peter Pan pink, has flowers described variously as lavender-rose or rosy purple, in other words a believable plum color.

Petals of flowers of both varieties are slightly curled and the flower forms vary from plant to plant; some are cactus type with pointed petals, some resemble dahlias in thier fullness and others have flattish blooms.

Here are two zinnias that will perform well in pots or planters, may be massed in beds or borders or even used as hedges. To see them is to wish you had them in your garden.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

✓Check your nursery for early spring-flowering trees and shrubs; make your selection while the plants in containers are in bloom.

✓If peach trees haven't as yet received their second spraying for peach leaf curl, do so immediately.

✓Citrus trees may be planted in March. Don't overlook the dwarf varieties for use in the landscape — or in tubs for decoration accent on the patio or deck.

✓When frost danger in your area has past, all tender plants may be pruned. Examples are fuchsias, pelargoniums, hibiscus and bougainvillea.

✓Set our Daylilies now, for long-lasting summer bloom.

Magnolias Ideally Suited To The Suburban Garden

Remember the name: Magnolia soulangeana.

Too difficult to pronounce? Try Saucer Magnolia, then. It's one and the same and no matter how you say it, it's beautiful.

SAUCER MAGNOLIA is just one of several deciduous magnolias which are fast becoming favorites of California gardeners. They provide a spectacular winter-time show of color — with bare branches suddenly being hidden from sight by a burst of bloom that smothers the plant. Because of the cool season color and the modest growth habit of deciduous Magnolias, they are being relied upon to provide special effects in modern landscapes.

They are considered small trees or large shrubs —this intermediate size has great value in suburb-size gardens.

The Saucer Magnolia grows to about 15 feet in hight — at maturity it is a lovely multiple-trunked specimen. Flower color of this hybrid ranges from white through pink and rose to a vivid red-purple.

ANOTHER IS the Star Magnolia, whose white blooms command attention from far and near. The flowers are split or pinwheel in nature, and resemble a large star. Similar in appearance, but a more vigorous grower, is Merrill's Magnolia.

The Lily Magnolia has more tubular blooms, white on the inside and purple outside. This one has a long blooming season and the flowers are large.

Impressive, velvety purple flowers adorn Magnolia Veitchii (Rubra). It has the darkest colored blooms of the deciduous varieties.

Each has distinguishing foliage characteristics which can be used to advantage in the landscape. The bold textures add a lovely dimension to the garden.

The Daisy Can Do Many Jobs

There is something about a drift of fresh-faced daisies that adds charm to the garden setting.

There are daisies for massing at the far reaches of the property or near the outdoor living area, some which excel in border or edging situations, and others that create lavish displays in long-lasting beds. Many can be grown in pots or tubs — and provide portable color.

And, who can deny the pleasure afforded by blooming daisies tucked-in at random throughout the garden?

One of the most useful varieties is the Shasta Daisy. You can choose from single or double, frilly or plain, tall or short varieties, all of which bloom ever-so-freely. You'll find a wide range of Shasta Daisies available at your nursery right now, ready for planting wherever you want a sturdy, free-blooming white perennial.

The flowers are excellent for cutting, and enjoying indoors.

There are white, yellow and pink Marguerites; each has its own growth characteristics. The white one is the most vigorous grower, achieving up to four feet in height. The daisy-like blooms all but smother the plant.

New Hardboard Sidings: Labor-Savers, Dent-Resisters

Vertical Panels, Horizontal Laps Come In Diversity Of Patterns

If your son throws a wild pitch that sends a baseball smack into the side of your house, will the siding be damaged?

That depends on what you have on the outside of your house.

CONSIDERABLE attention and research has been devoted by the building industry in recent years to the development of exterior siding materials, many of them maintenance-free. All too often, however, the new materials had drawbacks, such as brittleness or susceptibility to impact.

Impact resistance is one of the reasons for the fast-growing popularity of hardboard sidings.

Builders have known for many years that hardboard paneling, because of its density, is practically dentproof indoors. The same quality has made exterior hardboard ideal for siding.

Some residential builders use it for as much as 80 per cent of the homes they build, not only for siding but for soffits, fascia, porch ceilings, eaves, overhangs, and even for decorative devices such as cupolas and under-window panels.

To avoid bad weather delays and cut on-site labor costs, they often fabricate and pre-assemble gable ends and other hardboard components in a shop, then truck the units to the building site. Or they can buy ready-made accessories from the hardboard suppliers.

Exterior hardboard is easy to handle and can be sawed and nailed without being chipped, split or dented. And if workmen accidentally walk on a long piece of the siding, there's no breakage or damage from scuffing and heel marks, builders report.

HARDBOARD siding, fabricated in both vertical panels and horizontal lap boards, goes up swiftly for additional on-site labor saving. Both panels and the lap siding are available in several designs, including smooth, striated, and wood textured, either primed or pre-finished.

The panels, some of them V-grooved or U-grooved, come in standard widths and lengths, including a 16-foot panel for two-story houses.

EXTERIOR HARDBOARD is a wood product that can take a beating from workmen and the weather. The lap siding shown here has a rustic, wood-like texture with eye-pleasing, deep shadow lines. Other exterior hardboards come in smooth, striated or grooved panels.

A Facelifting For Your Fireplace

Fireplaces oftentimes lag behind the rest of the house in modernization, so if yours isn't a huge stone fixture you may want to give it a facelifting.

Many fireplace walls have too many ins and outs — projecting mantels, recessed bookcases alongside, and cluttered shelves.

Paneling the wall is an easy way to update it. First step is to remove the mantel and frame out the wall with furring strips.

Then nail tongue-and-groove boards over the furring. Vertical grain western hemlock flooring makes a handsome wall, as do ponderosa pine, sugar pine or resawn cedar paneling.

Wood molding may be added as a frame for the brick or marble facing of the opening, mitered for a snug fit against the paneling.

If the space is there, consider adding a built-in cupboard for storing fuel adjacent to the fireplace.

THE AMERICAN Plywood Association has created this two-way storage divider that provides a new means for separating adjacent rooms while giving both access to a handy shelf area. It can be used, for example, to divide a kitchen from a family or living room to give both areas greater privacy and to shut off the clatter and appliance noise of the kitchen. It is designed with a drop-leaf desk and shelves that can accommodate stereo equipment, records, tapes and other space-consuming items on its front side, while providing cupboards for china and glassware on the rear side. Much of the shelf space is open for display of decorative items, but there are also storage drawers providing undercover spots for small clutter-creating items. The contemporary look lent to the divider by the curved edges of the sliding doors can be sharpened by alternating the shelf colors in bright-coordinated hues. The plans for this useful and decorative plywood shelving wall can be obtained for 25 cents from American Plywood Association, 1119 A Street, Tacoma, Wash., 98401. Ask for Handy Plan No. 59-660.

Some Ceiling Decorating Tricks That Will Give A Room A Lift

One of the quickest, easiest and most inexpensive ways to give any room a lift is to decorate the ceiling.

This large — and often ignored — area can be used to effectively highlight decor, or offer a solution for "problem" rooms.

HERE ARE some useful eye-fooling tips:

Low ceilings look higher with a white or delicate tint. On the other hand, high ceilings in an older home appear lower when a darker hue is used.

If you have a large expanse of glass, tile the ceiling and paint the opposite wall with a deeper color. The room will lose much of its glare and take on a dramatic appearance. Aqua, blue or green ceiling tile accents will help to bring out the richness of tone and grain in wood paneling.

Tile and lay-in panels are available in more than 250 designs with a completely factory-finished surface. Textured or embossed designs can add an interesting note to a room. Fissured tile simulates the look of travertine marble.

ACOUSTICAL ceiling tile has fissures or tiny holes. They can absorb up to 70 per cent of the excess noise within a room, claims the Acoustical and Insulating Materials Association.

A new ceiling can be used to bring out the overall harmony of a color scheme while soaking up nerve-wracking noise from kids or company.

Don't Let Scraps Pile Up

Better Homes and Gardens' "Handyman's Book" offers these helpful suggestions for preventing the accumulation of scrap materials around your workshop:

Throw away most scraps of ordinary one-inch-thick lumber. Its common use continually produces more pieces you'll be able to use.

Throw away most scraps from cutoff sawing. They are difficult to work with and seldom prove useful.

Save larger ripping scraps for cleats, nailing strips, and so on. They may save your ripping a good board.

Save scraps of five-quarter or full two-inch thick stock. These slightly thicker pieces are very often useful.

Save scraps of plywood for use as corner braces and for other uses where its two-way strength makes it essential.

Save nearly every scrap of the expensive cabinet woods. The larger pieces can make attractice assessories.

Save useful lengths of moldings, especially types you've used in the house. They will simplify matching for repairs to existing moldings.

Store small scraps of ordinary lumber in a tall cardboard carton. When the box is full, burn it, scraps and all, and start over again with a new, empty box.

Don't let scraps and shavings pile up so as to constitute a fire hazard. It is better to buy new than to risk a fire. A sound storage place can minimize that risk.

While wood scraps make good fireplace starters, never use painted lumber for that purpose. Too much smoke.

A Weekend Project: Cedar In The Closet

Want to be a handyman and save money on home improvements?

The way to start is to undertake an easy project, one that will be inexpensive and satisfying.

A good "starter project" for the unpracticed handyman is lining closets with aromatic red cedar.

EVEN THE unhandiest do-it-yourselfer can accomplish a closet-lining project with ease over a weekend — and usually for a cost of less than $65.

Housewives who sometimes frown on their hubby's home improvement ideas usually change their tune when they learn he's going to build a moth-repellent storage area.

The job is easy because it requires only a hammer and saw. Each piece of red cedar closet lining is tongue-and-grooved to simplify fitting. Cedar closet lining is sold at lumberyards in packages, each containing pieces of random or uniform lengths.

IT'S SIMPLE to figure how much material is needed.

Multiply the height and width. A section three by eight would require 24 square feet of material. When making calculations, don't forget to include the floor and ceiling as well as the inside of the closet door.

The reason for lining the closet completely is to achieve maximum protection from moths.

The appealing feature of lining a closet with red cedar, from the novice handyman's view, is that it can be applied directly over the old wall surface. First, of course, clear the wall of any fixtures or hooks.

CEDAR SHOULD be applied from the bottom up. Place the first piece of cedar, groove down, in a horizontal position at the bottom of a wall. If it is too long, cut it to fit.

The best way to fasten cedar strips to the wall is with small finishing nails. Nail into the stud, which can be located by tapping the wall with a hammer. When the tapping has a flat sound, the stud has been located. To be certain, drive a nail.

MARK THE position of the stud with a vertical pencil line before starting on another. Use the same application technique for the ceiling.

After the closet lining has been applied, trim the closet with quarter-round cedar molding. Check the door to be certain it closes tightly. If it doesn't, use weather-stripping to insure an airtight area.

Cedar shelves are recommended, too.

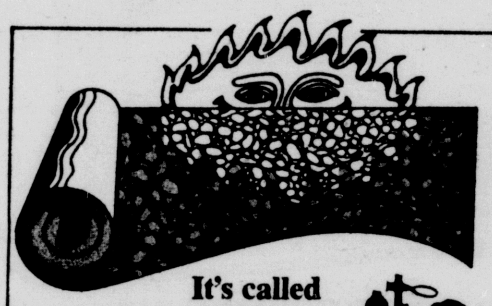
We have the new kind of Armstrong floor that hates waxing as much as you do.

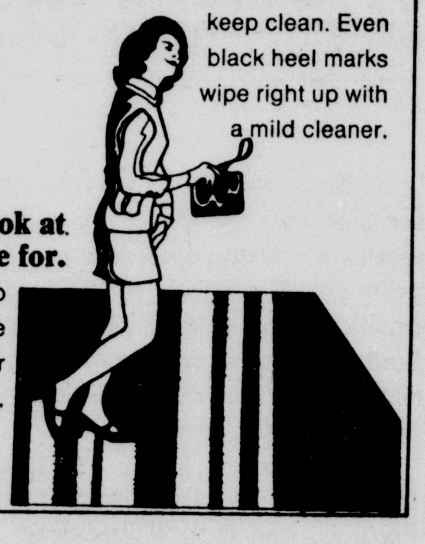


It's called Solarian.™

The sunny floor that shines without wax. In fact, Solarian should not be waxed, since most household waxes will not adhere to its unique high-gloss wear surface. With no wax to buy, apply and let dry . . . you save money, time and work. No yellowing, no stripping.

The secret behind the waxless shine.

A major new development—the Mirabond™ Wear Surface—is an entirely new formulation that maintains its brilliant gloss far longer than any vinyl floor. The surface actually rejects ordinary wax, while making Solarian easier to keep clean. Even black heel marks wipe right up with a mild cleaner.



As beautiful to look at as it is to care for.

Choose Solarian in this crisp mosaic design or a gentle marble graining, both in four sunny, kitchen-perfect colors.

THE STEREO SCENE

Some Pop Albums From A & M

By JOHN SUNIER

One of the most satisfying and beautiful albums I have had the pleasure of hearing in many a moon is "The Winter Consort" (A & M 4170). Never has there been an LP so completely un-pigeon-hole-able.

The titles may look classical, what with "Allemande" by Weiss, "Little Train of the Caipira" by Villa-Lobos, or a Chorale by the organ composer Alain, but the glorious chamber sound often swings — and in a manner so tasteful as to make everything from Alec Templeton to Switched-on Bach sound crude. Instrumentation includes lute, cello, sax horn, English horn, alto flute, marimba and others.

I'm wearing this one out already; please let's have more quickly from imaginative former modern-jazzman Paul Winter and his Consort!

OUR NEXT ALBUM says it was "recorded by Denis and Craig at home, Sausalito," and is titled "Lambert and Nuttycombe at Home" (A & M 4250).

The contents are two young men and their acoustic guitars, with a dozen quiet, harmonious and tuneful duets, mostly their own originals. Best of the bunch is probably the opener, the tender "Morning." Very nice unamplified and sensitive music-making, boys.

"Sea Train" (A & M 4171) is one of the outgrowths of the former "Blues Project," and retains a strong influence of modern jazz with sax and flute featured, as well as some swinging violin. Their sound on the eight originals is finely honed and tasteful, much as the Winter Consort, but much more in the rock vein. Titles are difficult to spotlight — tunes seem to flow into one another.

This is a definite winner in the rock deluge and should easily avoid being swept out to Sea.

PROCOL HARUM IS easily one of the very best of the British groups, yet has been generally ignored since their big hit, "A Whiter Shade of Pale." Their work is always concise and polished, yet they can shake it up like the Stones when they wish to.

Their albums usually have a theme, and this time it is obviously nautical in "A Salty Dog" (A & M 4179). The title tune, with a big fat orchestral backing, keeps up the theme, as does "Wreck of the Hesperus."

An astounding variety of instruments are heard, most of them seemingly played by lead vocalist Gary Brooker, who wrote many of the fascinating tunes as well.

BRAVO PROCOL Harum, and bravo A & M, for setting such high standards of musicianship and good taste as evidenced by all the above pop albums.

If owner Herb Alpert has anything to do with these policies, he deserves high praise and full freedom to go on bleating out his Tiajuana brassiness from now til Doomsday.

DEAN MARTIN is joined by Petula Clark, one of his guests, in a duet on "The Dean Martin Show" Thursday at 10 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

Gilbert Roland Stays Fit Exercising, Busy Acting

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Gilbert Roland has been integrated in the cast of "High Chaparral" and may find himself starring in a series of his own next year as a result.

Former husband o the late Constance Bennet, Roland has been married the past 16 years to Guillermina, a chic Mexican lass who was at one time a junior tennis champion in Mexico.

And a good thing, too. Gilbert plays tennis almost every day when he isn't working. He is a charter member of the Beverly Hills Tennis Club where he has been a singles and doubles champion off and on for years.

HE AND Guillermina play doubles at the Jack Warner home and on Dinah Shore's court.

Roland, who is approaching 70, looks as if he were in his 50s.

In addition to a minimum of two sets of tennis a day, Roland spends an hour each morning exercising.

He uses no machines or weights. Roland does situps, pushups and other body exercises that keep him slender and tough as rawhide. His waist is a meager 28 inches.

THE ROLAND home is an English cottage in the heart of everly Hills. Guillermina has decorated it with white carpeting and draperies. The furniture is modern and comfortable.

GILBERT ROLAND
Wine every day

A most striking feature of the decor is the sculpture of Gil's daughter, Lorinda, by a previous marriage.

Lorinda won New York's Guggenheim and Tiffany awards for sculpture. It is modern and stunning.

Roland, of Spanish descent, was born in Mexico where his father was a distinguished bullfighter. Gil returns to the land of his birth once or twice a year driving to Mexico City or Acapulco.

"I don't like to take the plane because you don't have the chance to talk to people and get to know them," he explains.

In the evenings Gilbert and Guillermina enjoy watching television in his den. He is especially fond of sports.

On weekends during the season Gilbert drives across the U.S.-Mexico border to Tijuana where he has four of the best seats reserved for the bullfight in the new arena there.

At other times Lorinda, who lives at the family home, joins her father and stepmother at the beach. Roland is a sun worshiper and spends hours basking poolside at the Beverly Hills Tennis Club.

BECAUSE HE does not work every day, Roland has set aside a regimen whereby he writes short sories and scripts, some of which he hopes will be purchased by television with — of course — a fat role for himself.

All three members of the household speak Spanish at all times unless there is company. But they switch to English the moment they leave home.

Mexican food is steady fare under Roland's roof and he thrives on it.

"My father once told me to drink wine every day," Gilbert concludes. "Wine is good for your soul, the beauty of your heart and the tranquility of your life."

LEW AYRES appears in a role in which he has long been associated, a medical man, when he plays the part of a famed heart surgeon on "The Interns" series Friday at 7:30 p.m. on Channels 5 and 10. He is seen at right in a scene from that episode with Sari Price, cast as his operating room nurse. And at left, a younger Ayres is shown in a scene from the Dr. Kildare series of movies which he made in the late 1930s and early 1940s. Laraine Day is his nurse and leading lady.

Marin Poets' Corner

CHOLLA

The sun stretches out across the sand,
Its lanky fingers clutching at the dark
Ripping shadows of surrender from the unwilling night;
Snuffing out lumens with its sweetened breath
Of fresh dawn and a new day.

The first warm rays of sunburst
Are Borealis chilled.
But time soon devours the frigidness,
And Zephyr blows a warmer breath
As Sol climbs higher in this new-born day.

The desert sky is blue and clear —
Yesterday's haze has blown away.
The tufts of clouds pass spritely by,
Caressing mountain tops on their way,
Fleeting umbrellas for a "hottest day."

The cacti stand like sentries
Of this deserted place
As though to warn the traveller, that,
Beauty is found in disgrace, though misplaced,
Upon the desert sand, far away.

NOVATO — ROBERT J. EDDY

THEN ONE FALLS

Brown leaves of autumn drifting
In the embrace of crisp, cool breezes
Soon land on a body of water —
A meadow preparing itself for winter.

As winter sets in, the quiet of nature
Becomes loud; White snow engulfs
Everything and challenges all who
Dare intrude on nature's sleep.

When icicles begin to cry tears
Of joy at the coming of winter's
Warmer sister — spring —, greens, blues
Yellows and reds begin to reappear.

Animals begin their happy and carefree
Frolic, lovers stroll hand in hand
Into the longer days of summer;
Nature seems to burst at every seam.

Then as the days give way
To longer nights again,
We see a leaf starting to turn brown —
Then, one falls . . .

TIBURON — WALTER TORRENS

BEER CANS

Stacking beer cans, one on another,
Reading the funnies,
Who is my brother?

Listening, waiting, watching TV,
Stare at the wall,
What is me?

Building castles rising in air,
Fantasy blossoms,
Truth is where?

Cigarette butts ground out in the glass,
The room is quiet,
Will all this pass?

Cars, houses in rows.eternal,
People running,
What is a funeral?

Laughing freely, while wildly we dance,
Why waste life,
We've only one chance!

SAN RAFAEL — TERRY THOMPSON
